

Nina's Gift of Kindness

By Kiyavama

Nina the Mouse lived in a cozy little burrow beneath an old oak tree.

Every morning, she collected berries and nuts to share with her friends. She was small and quiet, but her heart was full of kindness.

One day, Nina was walking through a meadow when she saw a small bird in distress. The poor bird had hurt its wing and could not fly. Nina felt sorry and wanted to help.

The little bird chirped softly, “I tried to fly, but I fell...”

Nina felt sad for her new friend. “Don’t worry,” she said kindly. “I’ll help you.

We just need to rest your wing and keep you warm.” She gathered soft leaves to make a tiny bed by the river.

The next morning, the bird tried to flap its wing again. “It still hurts,” the bird said sadly. Nina smiled and replied, “That’s okay. Healing takes time.” She brought crumbs of bread and berries to share with her friend.

The bird's wing grew stronger every day. Soon, it fluttered gently and lifted off the ground. "I can fly again!" the bird chirped. Nina clapped her tiny paws and smiled. "I'm so proud of you! Don't forget me!" she said. "I never will," the yellow bird replied as it soared into the blue sky.

Moral:

Kindness brings happiness.

Helping others doesn't just make them smile—it fills your own heart with warmth and joy. Nina learned that even small acts of kindness can make the world a brighter place.
