When a bike means money in your pocket

IT'S GOOD TO HAVE GOODYEAR TIRES

You're looking at Elbert Edward Dickey, a hard-working young Texan. Only 13 years old, he rides 10 miles a day for the Houston Press, delivers more than 200 papers daily. Elbert attends Holy Name School, plays tackle for the seventh grade eleven. His busy bike has rolled for more than a year on the same stalwart Goodyear tires.

Good tires are nice to have, even if you ride just for fun. But when you need your bike in your business - like Elbert Dickey - nothing but the best tires will do.

That's why he depends on a pair of tough, bruise-resistant Goodyears to get those papers delivered every day, in every kind of weather.

Goodyear tires are made with rubber that's specially compounded to take plenty of punishment. And their treads are made to grip and hold - on pavements, dirt roads, even in snow and slush.

So whether you're delivering papers for the boss, groceries for Mom - or just visiting your buddy down the street - you'll find it good to be riding Goodyears. Your nearby bike dealer will help you pick the type that's best for your bike. See him soon.

THAT LITTLE RED FELLA IS THE MOST HELPFUL PERSON IN THESE PARTS! HE DOES SOMETHING FOR EVERYBODY!
THE TERRIBLE TIGER

Every animal in the jungle feared Tony, the terrible tiger. Tony was big and strong and really ferocious-looking. His big, tawny body would slink through the jungle underbrush and suddenly seem to pop up from nowhere. He'd bare his fangs then and give out with a mighty roar that would send the other animals diving for shelter. Then, "Come on out, you cowards!" Tony would yell. "Let me see who's man enough to stand up to terrible Tony!"

But of course no one would take him up on the challenge. They were all much too afraid of him. And so, everyone would remain in hiding until Tony gave up and padded away, back into the underbrush.

Things couldn't go on this way forever, of course. It was getting so that most of the jungle animals were afraid to venture outside their own homes. And so they held a council of war. Chester Chipmunk presided.

"The chair is open for suggestions," Chester announced. "What are we going to do about terrible Tony?"

The suggestions flew thick and fast. The bigger, stronger animals like Leo the lion and Ernest the elephant thought Tony should be captured and caged, but nobody volunteered to do the capturing. The smaller animals like Squeaky Squirrel and Chester himself thought there ought to be a posse to patrol the jungle paths to warn the others when Tony was coming. But nobody volunteered for the posse, either. Finally, a new voice chimed in. "I think we're all making a big mistake!" the voice said. "I think we should try to make friends with Tony!"

Everyone whirled around to see who the speaker was, and it turned out to be bright-eyed little Monroe the monkey. "Are you crazy?" demanded an indignant chorus. "Who would even want to be friends with that mean, terrible-tempered tiger?"

"I would!" Monroe responded promptly. "I like to be friends with everybody! And what's more ... I think Tony needs a friend! So I hereby volunteer for the assignment!"

The others marveled at the monkey's courage that they agreed to let him try his experiment. And so Monroe marched out of the meeting house ... practically straight into the arms of Tony who was lurking outside!

"Gr-r-r-r-r!" bellowed the tiger. "Now I've got you! I'll give you one second to start running, and then — !"

"But I'm not going anywhere!" responded Monroe cheerfully. "So why should I run?"

"Y-you're not?" gulped Tony. "But aren't you afraid of me?"

"No, of course not!" grinned Monroe. "I want to be your friend, not your enemy!"

"My ... friend!" repeated Tony. "I never had a friend before!" Suddenly, he started to cry. "That's why I yelled at everybody!" he sobbed. "To make believe I didn't need friends!"

"Well, you're going to have lots of friends from here on in, pal!" grinned Monroe. "Come inside and meet 'em!" And arm in arm, the two animals strolled back into the meeting house ... together.

JOKE PARADE

Animalville was in a laugh-filled uproar this past month. Just listen to a few things that happened...

Johnny Chipmunk asked Stewie Squirrel, "Did you ever hear that joke about the sky?"
"No," said Stewie. "I didn't."
"Just as well," said Johnny, "it's over your head!"

Selma Pig told Irma Cow, "My sister is awfully stubborn."
"Really?" asked Irma.
"She sure is," said Irma. "I have the hardest time convincing her that I'm right when she knows I'm wrong!"

Tommy Turtle hadn't seen Sylvester Turtle for a long time. Finally he met Sylvester one day coming out of school.
"I don't know how I ever got through it," complained Sylvester. "I had appendicitis, pneumonia, rheumatism and on top of it all — tonsillitis!"
"That must have been awful!" Tommy sympathized.
"Yep," said Sylvester. "It was the toughest spelling test I ever had!"

"I hate playing ping-pong with a sore loser," complained Clara Duck.
"Well," said Glenda Goose, "I'd rather play with a sore loser than a good winner!"

"Can I give you something for your tooth-ache?" the dentist asked Seymour Mouse.
"You can have it for absolutely nothing!" answered Seymour.

Bobby Bunny was late for work again, so his boss asked, "How come you're so late this morning?"
"Gosh, I'm sorry," said Bobby. "I overslept!"
"You mean you sleep at home, too!" said his boss.

Stanley Squirrel took his little girl friend to the candy store for some jelly beans.
"Do you want the five-cent bag or the ten-cent bag?" the store-keeper asked Stanley.
"What's the difference?" asked Stanley.
"The ten-cent bag cost more," said the store-keeper.

"Where are the Appalachians?" Pete's father asked him.
"I think they're in the refrigerator," said Pete.
