HEATHCLIFF

by George Gately

"THE CAT OF THE CENTURY!"
—ALL CATS MAGAZINE

Heathcliff's creator, George Gately, has been plagued by "cartoonitis" since he was a child. In grammar school, his fourth grade art teacher gave the class an assignment to draw a picture depicting something from the American Revolution. George titled his picture "George Washington Crossing the Delaware," drew an empty body of water with a few bubbles surfacing and subtitled it "The Boat Sank." George didn't get a very good mark in Art that month.

He did better later on when he started freelance cartooning. His first major sale was to the Saturday Evening Post. Since then he has appeared in just about every leading magazine in the United States, Canada, Europe, South America and around the world. His work has even been displayed at a cartoon exhibit in the Louvre in Paris!

Thank goodness a cure for "cartoonitis" has never been discovered.
