A
J O URNEY

$$
11
$$

TO THE

World Under-Ground.

B Y
NICHOLAS KLIMIUSpiond L. Holbare

Tranflated from the ORIGINAL.

$$
L \quad O \quad N \quad D \quad O \quad N:
$$

Printed for T. ASTLEY, at the Rofe in St Paul's Church-Tard; and B. COLLINS, Bookfeller, in Salifiury.
MDCOXL.II.

 T. HE  CONTENTS.

$$
\text { HYp } 3 \text { JA }
$$

Chap. I.ケ HE Author's Defient to the Jubterraneous World Page 1
Chap. II. His Descent upon the Planet Nazar 13
Chap. III $A$ Description of the City of Keba

29
Chap. IV. The Court of the Potuan Empire

43
Chap. V. Of the Nature of the Cointry, and the Manners of the People 58
Chap. VI. Of the Religion of the Potuan Nation
Chap. VII. Of their Policy 7 I
Chap. VIII. Of the Academy 91
Chap. IX. The Author's Journey round the Planet Nazar 102
$\mathrm{C}_{\mathrm{hap}}$. X. The Author's Bamibment to the Firmament

171
Chap

CONTENTS.

Chap. XI. The Autbor's Voyage to the Land of Wonders Page 206 Chap. XII. The Author's Arrival at Quama
Сhap. XIII. The Rife of the fifth Monarchy 244
Chap. XIV. The Autbor is elevated to the Imperial Dignity 280
Chap. XV. The Cataftrophe 297
Chap. XVI. The Autbor's Return into bis own Country $\quad 309$ ABELINE's Appondix $\quad 323$

A

J O U R N E Y

TO THE

World Under-Ground.

C H A P. I.

The Autbor's Defcent to the fubterraneous World.
 N the Year 1664, after I had pars'd my feveral Examinations in the Univerfity of Copenbagen, and had defervedly obtained the Character, which is there call'd Laudable, by the Votes of my Judges, as B well cordingly put mylelf aboard a Ship bound for Bergen in Norway, dignify'd indeed with various Marks of Honour from the Gentlemen of the feveral Faculties, but in my Fortunes quite impoverifh'd. This was an Evil that attended myfelf as well as feveral of the Norway Students, who return'd from the Study of the Arts and Sciences into their own Country ftript of all they were worth. As we had a pretty brikk Gale, after a Voyage of fix Days we arrived at Bergen Harbour. Being thus reftor'd to my Country, fomething wifer indeed, tho' by no Means richer, I was fupported for a Time at the Expence of my near Relations, and led a precarious Sort of Life, yet not altogether indolent and inactive. For in order to clear up by Experience fome Points of natural Philofophy, the Study I had devoted myfelf to, I rambled over every Corner of the Province, with an infatiable Curiofity, to explore the Nature of the Earth, and to fearch into the very Bowels of our Mountains. No Rock fo fteep 'but I climb'd it ; no Cavern fo hideous and deep, but I made a Defcent into it, to try if haply I could difcover any Thing curious and worthy the Inquiry of a Philofopher. For there are a Multitude of Things in our Country of Norway, hardly ever feen or heard of, which if France, Italy, Germany, or any other Country fo fruitful of the Marvellous, could boaft boaft of, nothing wou'd be more talk'd of, nothing more fifted and examin'd.

World Under-Ground.

Among thole Things, which to me appear'd moft worthy of Obfervation, there was a large and deep Cave upon the Top of that Mountain which the Natives call Floïen. And becaufe the Mouth of the Cave us'd to iend forth a gentle murmuring Sound, and that too by Intervals, as if by its frequent Sighs its Jaws were now fhut, and now open'd ; hence the Literati' of Bergen, and particularly the celebrated Mafter Abeline, and Mafter Edward, one of our firf Geniufes in Aftronomy and natural Philofophy, imagin'd this Affair highly worthy of a philofophical Inquiry; and fince they themfelves were too old for fuch an Enterprize, they excited the younger Inhabitants to a clofer Examination of the Nature of the Cavern ; efpecially as at fated Intervals, after the Manner of human Refpiration, the Sound being fometime with-held iffued out with a certain proportional Force.

What with thefe Difcourfes, and what with my own natural Inclination, I form'd a Defign of entring into this Cavern, and communicated my Intention to fome of my Friends. But they by no Means approv'd of it, plainly declaring, that it was a wild and frantick Undertaking. But all they cou'd fay, fo far was it from extinguifhing, that it did not even damp the Ardour of my Mind; and their Advices, inftead of weakning, adminiftred Fuel to my Curiofity. $\begin{aligned} & \text { F } 2\end{aligned}$

For that Eagernefs with which I purfued the Study. of Nature infpir'd me to face every Danger, and the Straightnefs of my private Circumftances gave a Spur to my natural Inclination. For my own Subftance was quite wafted, and it feem'd to me the greateft Hardfhip to live in a State of Dependance, in a Country where all Hopes of Preferment were cut off, where I beheld myfelf condemned to Poverty, and every Avenue to Honour and Advantage entirely ftopp'd, unlefs I would make my Way by fome flagrant Act of Difhonour or Immorality.

Thus refolv'd, and having got together what was requifite for fuch an Exploit, upon a Thurfday Morning, when the Heavens were all ferene and cloudlefs, I left the City foon after Twilight, to the End that having finifh'd my Obfervations, I might return again that fame Day; becaufe, being ignorant of Futurity, it was not poffible I fhou'd forefee that I, like another Pbaeton, Volverer in preccps, longoque per aïra tractu, fhould be flung upon another World, not to revifit my native Soil, till after a ten Years Peregrination.

This Expedition was undertaken in the Year of our Lord 1665, Fobn Munthe, and Lawrence Severini being Confuls of Bergen, and Chrifiern Bertboldi and Lawrence Scandio being Senators. I went out attended by four Fellows I had hir'd, who brought with them fuch Ropes and Iron Crooks as would be neceflary to defcend by. We went directly to Sanduic, the mof commodious Way to climb the Mountain. Having with Difficulty reach'd the Top, we came to the Place where was the fatal Cave, and being tir'd with fo troublefome a Journey, we all fat down to Breakfart. 'Twas then my Mind, foreboding as it were the approaching Evil, firft began to be difmay'd. Therefore turning to my Companions, "Will any one, fays I, undertake this "Tafk?" But no Reply being made, my Ardour, that had languifh'd, kindled anew. I order'd them to faften the Rope about me, and thus equipp'd, I commended my Soul to Almighty God. Being now juft ready to be let down, I gave my Companions to underftand what I would have done, viz. that they fhould continue letting down the Rope till they heard me cry out, upon which Signal they fhould ftop, and if I perfifted to cry out, that then they flou'd immediately draw me up again. In my right hand I held my Harpoon, or Iton Hook, an Inffrument that might be of Ufe to me to remove whatever might obftruct my Paffage, and alfo to keep my Body fufpended equally between the Sides of the Cavern. But fcarce had I defcended fo low as about ten or twelve Cubits, when the Rope broke. This Accident was difcover'd to me by the fudden Outcries of the Men I had hir'd. But their Noile foon died away ; for with an amazing Velocity I was hurry'd down into the Abyfs, and like a fecond Pluto, allowing my Harpoon to be asceptre, Labor, &o icta viam tellus ad Tartara fecit.

World Under-Ground.

For about the fourth Part of an Hour (as near as I cou'd guefs, confidering the great Confternation I muft be in) I was in total Darknels, and in the very Botom of Night; when at length a thin fimall light, like Twilight, broke in upon me, and I beheld at laft a bright ferene Firmament. I ignorantly thought therefore, that either by the Repercuffion or oppofite Action of the fubterraneous Air, or that by the Force of fome contrary Wind, I had been thrown back, and that the Cave had vomited me up again. But neither the Sun which I then furvey'd, nor the Heavens, or heavenly Bodies, were at all known to me, fince they were confiderably lefs than thofe of ours. I concluded therefore, that either all that whole Mars of new Heavens exifted folely in Imagination, excited by the Vertigo my Head had undergone, or elfe that I was arriv'd at the Manfions of the Bleffed. But this laft Opinion I foon rejected with Scorn, fince I view'd myfelf arm'd with a Harpoon, and dragging a mighty Length of Rope after me, knowing full well, that a Man juft going to Paradife has no Occafion for a Rope or a Harpoon, and that the creleftial Inhabitants cou'd not poffibly be pleas'd with a Drefs, which look'd as if I intended,

Woild Under-Grouird.

intended, after the Example of the Titans, to take Heaven by Violence, and to expel them from their divine Abodes. At laft after the maturef Confideration, I fell to imagining, that I was funk into the fubterraneous World, and that the Conjectures of thofe Men are right who hold the Earth to be concave, and that within the Shell or outward Cruft there is another leffer Globe, and another Firmament adorn'd with lefler Sun, Stars, and Planets. And the Event difcover'd that this Conjecture was right.

That Violence with which I was hurry'd headlong, had now continued for fome Time, when at length I perceived that it languifh'd gradually in Proportion to my Approach towards a certain Planet, which was the firft Thing I met with. That fame Planet increas'd fo feafibly in Bulk or Magnitude, that at laft, without much Difficulty, I cou'd plainly diftinguifh Mountains, Vallies, and Seas, through that thicker Atmofphere with which it was furrounded.

- Sicut avis qure circum littora, circum,
Pifcofos coppulos humilis volat aquor juxta,
Haud aliter terras inter crelumque volabam.

Then I perceiv'd that I did not only fwim in a coeleftial Matter or Æther, but that my Motion which had hitherto been perpendicular, was now alter'd into a circular one. At this my Hair ftood an End; for I was full of Apprehenfion left I fhould be transform'd into a Planet, or into a Satellite B 4
of
of the neighbouring Planet, and fo be whirl'd about in an everlafting Rotation. But when I reflected, that by this Metamorphofis my Dignity would fuffer no great Diminution, and that a heavenly Body, or at leaft an Attendant upon a heavenly Body, would furely move with equal Solemnity to a famifh'd Philofopher, I took Courage again, efpecially when I found from the Benefit of that pure coeleftial 龙ther, that I was no longer preft by Hunger or Thirf. Yet upon recollecting that I had in my Pocket fome of that Sort of Bread which the People of Bergen call Bolken, and which is of an oval or oblong Figure, I refolv.d to take it out, and make an Experiment whether in this Situation I had any Appetite. But at the firft Bite perceiving it was quite naufeour, I threw it away as a Thing to all Intents and Purpofes ufelefs. The Bread thus caft away was not only fufpended in Air, but (what was very marvellons to behold) it defcrib'd a little circular Motion round my own Body. And from thence I learnt the true Laws of Motion, by which it comes to pafs, that all Bodies plac'd in Æquilibrium naturally affect a circular Motion. Upon this, inftead of deploring my Wretchednefs, as I had done, for being thus the Sport of Fortune, I began to plume a little, finding that I was not only a fimple Planet, but fuch a Planet as wou'd have a perpetual Attendant conforming itfelf to my Motions, infomuch that I thould have the Houour to be reckon'd in the Number of the greater heavenly Bodies or Stars of the firft Magnitude. And to confefs my Weaknefs, fo elated was I, that if I had then met any of our Confuls or Senators of Bergen, I fhould have receiv'd them with a fupercilious Air, fhould have regarded them as Atoms, and accounted them unworthy to be faluted or honoured with a Touch of my Harpoon.

For almoft three Days I remain'd in this Condition. For as without any Intermiffion I was whirl'd about the Planet that was next me, I could diftinguifh Day from Night; and obferving the fubterraneous Sun to rife, and fet, and retire gradually out of my Sight, I could eafily perceive when it was Night, tho' it was not altogether fuch as it is with us. For at Sun-fet the whole Face of the Firmament appear'd of a bright Purple, not unlike the Countenance of our Moon fometimes. This I took to be occafion'd by the inner Surface of our Earth, which borrow'd that Light from the fubterraneous Sun, which Sun was plac'd in the Center. This Hypothefis I fram'd to myfelf, being not altogether a Stranger to the Study of Aftronomy.

But while I was thus amus'd with the Thoughts of being in the Neighbourhood of the Gods, and was congratulating myfelf as a new Conftellation, together with my Satellite that furrounded me, and hop'd in a fhort Time to be inferted in the Catalogue of Stars by the Affronomers of the neighbouring Planet, behold! an enormous winged Monfter hover'd near me, fometimes on this Side, now on that Side, and by and by over my Head. At firft View I took it for one of the twelve heavenly Signs in this new World, and accordingly hop'd, that, if the Conjecture was right, it would be that of Virgo, fince out of the whole Number of the twelve Signs, that alone could yield me, in my unhappy Solitude, fome Delight and Comfort. Bui when the Figure approach'd nearer to me, it appear'd to be a grim, huge Griffin. So great was my Terror, that unmindful of my farry Dignity, to which I was newly advanc'd, in that Diforder of my Soul, I drew out my Univerfity-Teftimonium, which I happen'd to have in my Pocket, to fignify to this terrible Adverfary that I had pafs'd my academical Examination, that I was a graduate Student, and could plead the Privilege of my Univerfity againft any one that foould attack me. But my Diforder beginning to cool, when I came to myfelf, I could not but condemn my Folly. For it was yet a Matter of Doubt to what Purpofe this Griffin fhould approach me, whether as an Encmy, or a Friend; or, what is more likely, whether led by the fole Novelty of the Thing, he had only a Mind to feaft his Curiofity. For the Sight of a human Creature whirling about in Air, bearing in his right Hand an Harpoon, and drawing after him a great. Length

B 5

Length of Rope like a Tail, was really a Phxnomenon which might excite even a brute Creature to behold the Spectacle. For the unufual Figure I then exhibited, gave to the Inhabitants of the Globe, round which I revolv'd, an Occafion of divers Conjectures and Converfations concerning me, as I afterwards learn'd; for the Philofophers and Mathematicians would have me to be a Comet, being pofitive that my Rope was the Tail; and fome there were, who from the Appearance of fo rare a Meteor, prognofticated fome impending Misfortune, a Plague, a Famine, or fome other fuch extraordinary Cataftrophe: Some alfo went further, and delineated my Figure, fuch as it appear'd to them at that Diftance, in very accurate Drawings; fo that I was defcrib'd, defin'd, painted and engrav'd before ever I touch'd theit "Globe. All this I afterward heard with no fmall Pleafure, and even Laughter, when I was convey'd to that Planet, and had learn'd their Language.

It muft be noted, that fometimes there appear new Stars, which the Subterraneans call Scifcify, or blazing Stars, which they defcribe as fomething looking horrid with fiery Hair, and, after the Manner of our Comets, bufhy on the Top, fo as that it projects in Form of a long Beard; and thefe, as in our World, fo in that, they are reckon'd ominous.

But to refume my Hiftory. The Griffin advanc'd fo near at laft, as to incommode mode me by the Flapping of his Wings, and even did not fcruple to attack my Leg with his Tecth, fo that now it openly appear'd with what Difpofition he purfu'd me. Upon this I began to attack this troublefome Animal with Arms, and grafping my Harpoon with both my Hands, I foon curb'd the Infolence of my Foe, obliging him to look about for a Way to cecape; and at laft, fince he perfifted to annoy me, I darted my Harpoon with fuch a Force into the Back of the Animal between his Wings, that I could not pull it out again. 'The wounded Griffin, fetting up a horrible Cry, fell headlong upon the Planet. As for myfelf, quite woary of this farry Station, this new Dignity, which I faw expos'd to infinite Hazards and Evils, > Arbitrio volucris rapior, qusque impetusegit Hui fine lege ruo, lonsoque per aera traciu In terram feror, ut de ccelo feella ferino, Etfinon cecidit, potuit cecidiffe videri.

And now this circular Motion I had defcrib'd alter'd once more into a perpendicular one. And being for fome Time agitatated and toft with great Violence by the oppofite Motions of a thicker Air, at length by an eafy, gentle Defcent, I alighted upon the aforefaid Planet, together with the Griffin, who foon after died of his Wound.

It was Night when I was convey'd to that Planet. This I could gather from the fole Abfence of the Sun, and not from the Darknefs; for there fill remained fo much Light, as that I could diftinctly read my Univerfity-Tefimonium by it. 'That Light by Night arifes from the inward Surface of our Earth, whofe Surface reflects a Light like that of the Moon among us. And hence, with refpect to Light alone, there is little Difference between the Nights and Days, only that the Sun is abfent, and his Ablence makes the Nights a little colder.

Dark-

C H A P. II.

His Defcent upon the Planet Nazar.

HAVING thus finifh'd this airy Voyage, and being fet down upon the Planet without the lealt Hurt, I lay for a confiderable Time without Motion, waiting till Day-break for the Event. 'Twas then I found the ufual Infirmities of Nature return, and that I ftood in great Need of Sleep as well as Food, infomuch that I repented I had fo rafhly difcarded my Loaf of Biead.

My Mind thus opprefs'd with various Anxieties, at length I fell into a profound Sleep, and had flept (as near as I could guefs) two Hours, when a horrible Bellowing interrupting my Sleep, at length entirely difpell'd it. A ftrange Variety of Notions had fill'd my Brain during this Sleep. I thought thought I was returned into Norway, and holding forth among the Students according to Cuftom ; and at one Time I imagin'd I heard the Voice of the Deacon Nicolas Andreas chanting in the Church of Fanöen, jult out of the City, and that it was the Noife of his Voice, which according to Cuftom had fo cruclly wounded my Ears. And agreeably to this, when I awoke, I really thought it was his horrid Voice that had difturb'd me. But when I faw a Bull ftanding near me, then, indeed, I concluded my Reft had been broke by his Bellowing. Prefently throwing my Eyes around me, the Sun now rifing, I beheld every where green, fertile Plains and Fields; fome Trees alfo appeared, but (what was moft amasing) they moved; tho' fuch was the Silence and Stillnefs of the Air at that Time, that it would not have moved the lighteft Feather from its Place. Immediately the Bull came roaring at me, and I in my Terror and Confternation feeing a Tree juft by me, attempted to climb it ; but when I got up into it, it uttered a fine finall Voice, tho' fomething fhrill, and not unlike an angry Lady's; and prefently I receiv'd, as it were from the fwifteft Hand, fuch a Blow as quite itumn'd me, and laid me proftrate on the Ground. I was almott expiring with this Thunderbolt of a Stroke, when I heard certain confus'd Murmurings round me, like thofe in great Markets, or upon full Change. Having opened my Eyes, I beheld held all about me a whole Grove of Trees, all in Motion, all animated, and the Plain overfpread with Trees and Shrubs, tho' juft before there were not above fix or feven. 'Tis not to be exprefs'd what Diforders this produced in my Underftanding, and how much my Mind was fhock'd with thefe Delufions: Sometimes I thought I muft certainly dream; fometimes I thought I was haunted by Spectres and evil Spirits, and twenty abfurder Things did I imagine; but I had no Time to examine thefe Machinest, or to inquire into their Caufes; for prefentIy another Tree advancing to me, let down one of its Branches, which had at the Eritremity of it fix large Buds in the Manner of Fingers. With thefe the Tree took me up from the Ground, and carried me off, attended by a Multitude of other Trees of various Kinds and different Sizes, all which kept muttering certain Sounds, articulately indeed, but in a Tone too foreign for my Ears, fo that I could not pofibly retain ary Thing of them, except thefe two Words, Pikel Emi, which I heard them very often repeat. By thefe Words (as I afterward underftood) was meant, A Monkey of an odd Shape; becaufe from the Make of my Body, and Manner of Drefs, they conjectur'd I was a Monkey, tho' of a Species different from the Monkeys of that Country. Others took me for an Inhabitant of the Firmament, and that fome great Bird had tranfported me hither; a Thing that had once before before happened, as the Hiftory or Annals of that Globe can teftify. But all thefe Things I underftood not till after the Space of fome Months, in which Time I became acquainted with the fubterranean Language. For in my prefent Circumftances, what thro' Fear, and what through the Diforder of my Intellects, I was quite regardlefs of myfelf, nor could conceive how there could be any fuch Thing as living and fpeaking Trees, nor to what Purpofe was this Proteffion, which was very fiow and folemn. But yet the Voices and Murmurs with which all the Plains echoed feemed to indicate Anger and Indignation; and in good Truth it was not without ample Reafon that they had conceived this Refentment againft me; for that very Tree, which I climb'd up in my Flight from the Bull, was the Wife of the Pretor, or principal Magiftrate of the next City; and fo the Quality of the Perfon injur'd aggravated the Crime; for it look'd as if I had a Mind to violate not a Female of mean and plebeian Birth, but a Matron of prime Rank, which was a moft detefted Spectacle to a People of fo venerable a Modefty as thefe were. At length we arrived at the City to which I was led Captive. This City was equally remarkable for its ftately Edifices, and for the elegant Order and Proportion of the Streets and Highways; fo lofty were the Houfes, that they refembled fo many Towers; the Streets too were full of walking Trees, which by letting down their Branches faluted each other as they met, and the greater Number of Branches or Boughs they dropt, the greater was the Compliment. Thus when an Oak went out of one of the moft eminent Houfes, the reft of the Trees drew back at his Approach, and let down every one of their Branches; from whence it was eafy to infer, that that Oak was far above the vulgar Sort; and, indeed, I foon underftood that it was the Prator himfelf, and the very Perfon whofe Wife I was faid to have fo highly affronted. Forthwith they hursied me to the Prætor's Houre; upon my Entrance into which, the Doors were immediately lock'd and bolted upon me, fo that I look'd upon my felf as one condemn'd to a Goal. What greatly contributed to this Fear was, that there were three Guards plac'd without, like Centinels, each of them arm'd with fix Axes, according to the Number of their Branches; for as many Branches as they had, fo many Arms they had; and as many Buds at the Extremities, fo many Fingers. I obferved, that on the Top of the Trunks or Bodies of the Trees their Heads were plac'd, not at all unlike human Heads; and inftead of Roots, I faw two Fcet, and thofe very fhort, by Reafon of which the Pace they us'd was almoft as flow as that of a Cortoife; fo that had I been at Liberty, it had been very eafy for me to have efcap'd their Hands, fince my Motion was perfect Flying compar'd to theirs.

To be fhort, I now plainly perceived, that the Inhabitants of this Globe were Trees, and that they were endued with Reafon; and I was loft in Wonder at that Variety in which Nature wantons in the Formation of her Creatures. Thefe Trees do by no Means equal ours in Height, fcarce any of them exceeding the common and ordinary Stature of a Man; fome indeed were lefs; thefe one would call Flowers or Shrubs; and fuch I conjectur'd were Youths and Infants.

Words cannot exprefs into what a Labyrinth of 'Thought thefe ftrange Appearances threw me, how many Sighs they extorted from me, and how paffionately I longed after the dear Place of my Nativity. For altho' thefe 'Trees feemed to me to be fociable Creatures, to enjoy the Benefit of Language, and to be endued with a certain Degree or Portion of Reafon, infomuch that they had a Right to be inferted in the Clafs of rational Animals, yet I much doubted whether they could be compar'd to Men; I could not bring myfelf to think, that Juftice, Mercy, and the other moral Virtues had any Refidence among them. Rack'd with thefe Thoughts, my Bowels yearned, and Rivers of Tears flowed down my Cheeks. But while I was thus indulging my Grief, and pouring out my filent Complaints in fuch unmanly Sorrows, the Guards entered ## World Under-Growird.

entered my Chamber, whom I looked upon as fo many Roman Lictors, confidering the Axes they bore. Thefe marching before me, I was led thro' the City to a very lofty Dome in the Center of the Forum, or great Mar-ket-Place. I feemed to myfelf to be greater than a Roman Conful, and to have obtained the Honour of a Dictator; for there were but twelve Axes attended the Confuls, whereas I was attended by eighteen. On the folding Doors of the Dome, to which I was led, a Figure of Juftice was carved, holding a Pair of Scales with her Branches or Arms: This Image had a Vir-gin-Air, an carneft Look, a piercing Sight, with a certain venerable Dejection that made her appear not too proud, nor yet too humble. This Place I clearly perceived was the Senate-Houfe. Being introduced into Court, the Floor of which fhone with Marble of teffellated or Mofaic Workmanfhip; I there beheld a Tree feated on a Golden Tribunal, with twelve Afiociates fitting on either Hand on fo many Benches in the moft exact and elegant Order. The Prefident on the Tribunal was a Palm-Tree, of a miduling Stature, but eafily diltinguifh'd from the reft of the Affiftants, by the great Variety of her Leaves, which were of various Dyes: The inferior Officers, to the Number of twenty-four, guarded each Side, all armed with fix Axes apiece. A moft tremendous Profpect! lince from fo much Armour Armour it was natural to infer they were a Pcople that delighted in Blood.

The Senators, at my Entrance, extended their Branches toward the Skies; which Ceremony being ended, they fat down again; and being all feated, I was brought to the Bar between two Trees, whofe Trunks or Bodies were covered with Sheep-Skins. I fufpected they were Lawyers, and fuch in good Truth they were. Before they began to plead, the Prefident wrapt his Head in a Garment of a dark Colour. One of thefe Advocates made a very fhort Speech, which he thrice repeated; to which the other Advocate replied with equal Brevity: Thefe Pleadings were followed by a Silence of Half an Hour: Then the Prefident, removing the Covering from her Head, rofe up, and again extending her Branches toward the Sky, pronounc'd certain Words, which I fuppofed contained my Sentence; for at the End of the Speech I was difmifs'd back to my old Prifon, and confin'd there, as I guefs'd, to be in Readinefs to be brought forth to Punifhment.

Being left alone, and revolving in my Memory every Thing that had happened, I could not forbear fmiling at the Stupidity of this People ; for they feemed rather to be acting a Play than exercifing Juftice, and cvery Thing I had feen, their Gefture, their Drefs, and Method of Proceeding feem'd to favour more of the Buffoonery of the Stage, than the awful Tribunal of Juftice.
tice. Then I congratulated the Happinefs of our World, and the Supcriority of the Europeans to all others. But tho' I arraigned the Folly and Dulnefs of this fubteraneous Nation, yet I was forced to own that they ought to be difinguifhed from the Brute Creation ; for the Elegance of the City, the Symmetry of the Buildings, with feveral other Particulars, loudly proclaimed that thefe Trees were not devoid of Reafon, nor altogether ignorant of the Arts, efpecially Mechanicks; but then it was in this alone that I thought all their Virtues, all their whole Perfection confifted.

While I was holding this filent Conference with myfelf, a Tree enters holding a Lancet in his Hand; who unbuttoning my Bofom, and making bare my Arm, opened the middle Vein quite like an Artift. When he had drawn as much Blood as he thought fufficient, he bound up my Arm with equal Dexterity. This being performed, he infipected the Blood with the deepeft Attention ; and being perfectly fatisfied, he walked away in a Kind of filent Admiration: All this confirmed me in the Opinion I had entertained of the Stupidity of this Nation. But as foon as I had thoroughly lcarnt the fubterranean Language, and all thefe Things had been explained to me, my Difdain was turned into Admiration. The Proceedings at Law, which I had fo rafhly condemned, were thus explained. From the Make of my Body, they inferred I was an Inhabitant of the Firmament. I appeared to have attempted the Chaflity of an honourable Matron, and one of prime Quality. For this Crime I was dragged to the Bar of Juftice. One of the Advocates or Lawyers aggravated the Crime, demanding the Punilhment due by Law ; the other requefted not that the Punifhment fhould be remitted, but only that it fhould be deferr'd, till it could be difcover'd what, and who I was, and of what Country; whether a brute Animal, or a rational one. Moreover I learnt, that the Action of the Judges extending their Branches towards Heaven, was the ordinary Ceremony of Religion bcfore they proceeded to Trial. The Lawyers were all covered with Sheep-Skins, as Emblems of Innocence and Impartiality in the Management of their Caufes; and indeed all the Lawyers here were Men of Probity; which fhews that in a well-conftituted Government it is not impoffible, but that there may be honeft Lawyers. So fevere were the Laws againft knavifh Advocates, that Fraud and foul Play could not efcape Detection, Perfidioufnefs could find no Shelter, Slander no Mercy, Impudence no Countenance, and Deccit no Impunity. The three-fold Repetition of Words was made ufe of to afift the Slownefs of their Perception, in which the Natives of this Globe were diffinguifhed from all others; for very few could comprehend what they had only curforily read, or underftand what they had.

WForld Under-Ground.
only once heard. Thofe whofe forward Capacities took a Thing prefently, were deem'd defective in Judgment, and therefore it was feldom that fuch were admitted to any weighty Pofts or Offices; for they had learnt by Experience, that the Government had been endanger'd when in the Hands of thofe who were quick of Apprehenfion, and who were commonly ityl'd great Geniufes; but that thofe of flower Capacities had reftored to Order what the others had thrown into Confufion. Thefe Things were Paradoxes to me, yet upon a more ferious Recollection, they feemed not altogether abfurd. But the Hiftory of the Prefident fill'd me with the greateft Aftonifhment. She was a Virgin, and a Native of that City, and by the then reigning Sovereign was appointed Kaki, or fupreme Judge in the City: For among thefe People there was no Difference of Sexes obferved in the Diftribution of publick Pofts; but an Election being made, the Affairs of the Republick were committed to the wileft and moft worthy. And in order to form a right Judgment of the Proficience, or of the intellectual Endowments of every one, there were proper Seminaries inftituted, the chief Directors of which were ftyl'd Karatti (a Word that ftrictly fegnifics Inquifitors.) It was their Office to infpect into every one's Abilitics, to inquire nicely into the Genius of the Youth, and after fuch Inquiry to tranfmit annually to their Prince an Account or Lift of fuch as were to be admitted to all Duties and Pofts of Government, and to point out at the fame Time, in what Particular every one of them was moft likely to be of Service to the State. The Prince upon the Receipt of fuch Catalogue ordered their Names to be infcrib'd in a Book, that he might never be at a Lofs what Sort of Perfons to prefer to the vacant Pofts. The aforcfaid Virgin four Years before had obtained a moft honourable Teftimonial from the Karatti, and upon that Account was by the Sovereign appointed Prefident of the City in which the was born. This Rule they obferve conftantly and inviolably, becaufe they believe that the Welfare of any Place will be beft confulted and purfued by thofe who are Natives of it. Palmika (that was the Name of the Virgin) for the Space of three Years govern'd this truly Spartan Commonwealth with the higheft Applaufe, and was efteem'd the wifeft Tree in all the City; for fo great was her Dulnefs of Apprehenfion, that the hardly ever conceiv'd a Thing without its being thrice or four times repeated. But what the once apprehended the thoroughly underftood, and with fuch Acumen folv'd every Difficulty in it, that her Decrees were deem'd fo many Oracles.
Norit cnim juflum gemina fuppendere lance Ancipitis libre, rectum difcrevit, ubi inter Curva fubit, vel cum fallit pede regula raro.

And hence there were no judicial Decrees of hers during her Adminiftration of Juftice, which were not confirmed and applauded by the High Court of Juftice at Potu, the Capital of the Empire: Therefore the Inftitution in Favour of the weaker Sex, which at firft View I had condemn'd, had nothing abfurd in it upon a more accurate Review. Blefs me! thought I, what if the Wife of our Mayor of Bergen were to fit in Judgment inftead of her Hufband? What if the Daughter of Counfellor Severini, that all-accomplifh'd young Lady, were to plead at the Bar inftead of her Itupid Father? Our Laws would never receive the leaft Difhonour from them, nor would Juftice be fo often violated. Moreover, I was of Opinion, fince in the Eurcpean Courts of Law, Caufes were fo foon determin'd, that fuch fudden and hafty Determinations, were they to undergo a ftrict Scrutiny, would by no Means pals without Cenfure. To proceed to explain fome other Things. The Reafon of the Vence-fection or Letting Blood, I underfood to be this: When any one was convicted of a Crime, inftead of whipping, maiming, or capital Punifhments, he was condemned to the l'enc--ection, that is, to have a Vein open'd, by which it fhould appear, whether his Crime proceeded from Malice, or from the vitiated Blood, and whether by fuch an Operation he could be cur'd. So that thefe Courts of Juftice regarded the Amendment, rather than the Punifhment of the Offender. Yet the very Method of Amendment had a Sort of Punifhment in it, becaufe it was a Mark of Ignominy to undergo this Operation by judicial Sentence. If any one fell a fecond Time into the fame Crime, he was deem'd an unworthy Member of the State, and as fuch was to be banifh'd to the Firmament, where all were receiv'd without Diftinction. But of this fort of Exile we fhall enlarge hereafter. Then as to the Reafon why upon the Opening of my Vein the Chirurgeon was fo aftonifh'd at the Sight of my Blood, it was this, namely, that the Na tives of this Globe had a white fluid Juicein their Veins. And the whiter this was, fo much the greater Mark it bore of Innocence and Probity.

All there Things, when I had perfectly Jearn'd the fubterranean Tongue, I thoroughly underftood, and thenceforward began to form a milder Judgment of a People I had too haftily cenfur'd. And tho' at firft I was of Opinion that thefe Trees were exceffively ftupid and brutifh, yet I foon found Reafon to think that they were not altogether deftitute of Humanity, and that therefore I was in no Danger of my Life. And what confirm'd me in this was, that twice a Day I faw myFood duly brought me. This Food confifted of Fruits, Herbs, and Pulfe, and my Drink was a Liquor the moft dilicious and grateful I ever tafted.

World Under-Ground.

The Magiftrate, in whore Cuftody I was, foon fent Advice to the Sovereign of the Empire, who refided at Potu, (not far from this City) that a certain rational Animal, of a very unufual Make, had fallen into his Hands. The Sovereign, excited by the Novelty of the Thing, gave Orders that I fhould be inftructed in their Language, and then fent to Court. Hereupon I had a Language Mafter appointed me, under whofe Care in the Space of fix Months I made fo great a Proficiency, that I was enabled to converfe pretty readily with the Natives. After having pafs'd thro' this firft Exercife, a new Order arriv'd from Court, concerning my farther Inftruction, by which I was commanded to be enter'd into the Seminary, that the natural Powers of my Underftanding might be enquir'd into by the Karatti, and in what Kind of Learning I gave the moft hopeful Promifes of Succefs. All this was done with great Exactnefs. While I was performing my Exercifes here, they were as careful of my Body as they were of my Mind, and particularly, they us'd their utmoft Art to bring me into their own Shape, and accordingly they skilfully fitted artificial Branches to my Body.

During this, the Magiftrate, at whofe Houfe I lodg'd, every Evening as I return'd from the Seminary, enter'd into various Conferences with me. He heard me with the utmoft Plafure defcanting on thofe Things that had occur'd to me in this fub-terranean Tour. But he was above Meafure amaz'd at the Defcription I gave him of our Earth, and of that immenfe Heaven that furrounded it, fudded with infinite Stars. All this he heard with the utmoft Avidity. But it kindled his Blufhes, when I told him of the Trees of our Globe, which were lifelefs, immoveable, and faftened by the Roots to the Ground ; nay, he beheld me with fome Refentment, when I attefted that our Trees were cut down for Fuel to heat our Furnaces and drefs our Provifions. But confidering the Thing more gravely, his Indignation fubfided, and extending his five Branches to the Skies (for fo many he had) he ador'd the Wifdom of the great Creator, whofe Ways are paft finding out ; and henceforward he heard me with ftill greater Attention. His Wife, who had hitherto avoided me, when fhe learnt the true Reafon for which I was brought to Judgment, and that I was deceiv'd in the Appearance of a Tree, which in our Country 'twas a cuftomary Thing to climb, now laid afide all Sufpicion, and was entirely reconciled. But yet, that I might not at the Beginning of our Reconciliation open an old Wound, I declin'd all Converfation with her, unlefs in the Prefence, and at the exprefs Command of her Husband.

C H A P. III.

A Defcription of the City of Keba.

IN the mean while, and during the Courfe of this Difcipline under the Ka ratti, my Hoft walk'd me about the City to fhew me whatever was curious and obfervable. We walk'd up and down without any Moleftation, and what was more to be admir'd, without any crowding or joftling; quite otherwife than it is with us, where People flock in Heaps to any Thing that is new and uncommon, that they may feaft their Curiofity. For the Inhabitants of this Planet have very little Tafte for Novelty, and purfue only folid Things. The Name of this City is Keba, and it is the fecond in Dignity of the whole Potuan Empire. The Inhabitants are fo fedate and grave, you would fwear they were all Senators. Age is particularly honourable here; nor is there a profounder Deference and Veneration any where paid it ; for it carries Authority not only in its Sentiments, but in its Looks and Nods. But I much wonder'd that a Nation fo fober, fo modeft as this, fhould be delighted with Comedies and certain ludicrous Shews and Spectacles that were there exhibited. This did not feem to fuit with fo much Gravity. Which my Hoft perceiving, Through all thefe Dominions, fays he, the Subjects divide their Time between

A Journey to the Things ferious and Things of a gayer 'Tur:, Saturnumq; gravem noftro fove frangimus una. For, among other laudable Inftitutions of this Empire, there is an Indulgence of innocent Pleafures, by which it is believ'd the Soul is ftrengthen'd, and prepar'd to fuftain the more arduous Duties, and by which thole black Clouds of Melancholy are difpell'd, which are thought to be the Sources of Riots, Seditions, and pernicious Counfels. Therefore they chequer the feverer Toils with Sports and Play's, fo happily tempering Serioufnefs with Pleafantry, that the firlt cannot degenerate into Sournefs, nor the latter into Impertinence. But it was not without Indignation I obferv'd that SchoolDifputations do there make a Part of the Shews and Theatrical Performances. For at fet Times of the Year, Wagers being laid, and a Reward affign'd to the Conquerors, the Difputants engage like a Couple of Gladiators, and much upon the fame Terms that fighting Cocks or any fuch battling Animals do among us. Hence it was a Cuftom among the Great, to maintain a Set of Difputants, as we do a Pack of Hounds, and to give them a logical Education, that they may be fit for Engagement at the ftated Times of the Year. Thus a certain wealthy Citizen in three Years Time had made prodigious Gains, even to the Sum of 4000 Ricatu, from one Difputant, whom he maintained for that Purpofe. This

Difputant, with an amazing Volubility of Tongue,

Diruit, edificat, mutat quadrata rotundis,

By enfnaring Syllogifms and every Artifice of Logick, by Diftinctions, Refervations, and Exceptions, eluded every Opponent, and filenc'd whom he would. I was often prefent at thefe Entertainments, and that with no fmall Vexation. For it feem'd to me a horrid and hameful Thing, that fuch noble Exercifes, which give Luftre to our Schools, fhould here be proftituted on the Stage. And when I call'd to Mind, that I myfelf with the higheft Applaufe had difputed in Publick, and had obtained the Laurel, I could farce withhold my Tears. And not only the Difpute, but the Method of difputing incenfed me. For they hir'd certain Stimulators, in their Language Ciabalci, who when they obferv'd the Ardor of the Difputants to flag, juft prick'd their Sides with Lancets to re-kindle it, and to rally their declining Spirits. Other Things thro' Shame I onnit, which in fo polifh'd a Nation I could not but condemn. Befides thefe Difputants, call'd in their Tongue, by way of Contempt, Masbaki, that is 1trictly, Wranglers, there were other 'rials of Skill between Beafts, both of the wild and tame Kind, and alfo between Birds of Prey, which were exhibited to the Spectators at a certain Price. I begg'd to know of my Hurt, how it was poflible that fo judicious

$$
\text { C } 4
$$

a Nation could think of leaving to the Theatre thofe noble Exercifes, whereby a Faculty of Speaking is acquir'd, Truth is difcover'd, and the Underftanding fharpen'd? He reply'd, that formerly thefe Exercifes were in high Reputation among their barbarous Anceftors; but fince they had been convinc'd by Experience, That Truth was rather ftifled by Difputes, that their Youth were render'd petulant and forward thereby, that Difturbances arofe from them, and that the more generous Studies were fo much the more fetter'd, they turn'd over thefe Exercifes from the Univerfity to the Playhoure; and the Event has fhew'd us, that by Reading, Silence, and Meditation, the Students now make far greater Advances in Learning. With this Reply, tho' very fpecious, I was not however altogether fatiffy'd.

In this City there was an Academy or School, where with the utmoft Decency and Solidity the Liberal Arts were taught. My Hoft introduc'd me into the Auditory of this School on a particular Day, when a Madic, or Doctor of Philofophy, was to be created. The whole Ceremony was this : The Candidate made a learned and elegant Differtation upon a Problem in natural Philofophy, which being ended, the Governors of the School inferted his Name in the Kegifter of Doctors, who from thence had Authority to teach publickly. My Hoft asking how I liked it? I anfwer'd that it appear'd to me a mighty dry Bufinefs in Comparifon of our Promotions. Then I explain'd to him how Mafters and Doctors were created among us, namely, by exhibiting certain Specimens of their Skill in Difputation. At this, contracting his Brows, he defir'd to know the Nature of our Difputations, and in what they differ from the fubterranean. I reply'd, that they were ufually upon curious and learned Subjects, particularly fuch as relate to the Manners, Language, or Drefs of two ancient Nations who formerly flourifh'd in Europe, and that I for my Part had wrote three Differtations upon the Slippers of the Ancients. With that he fet up fuch a Laugh, as made the whole Houfe ring. His Wife, alarm'd with the Noife, flies to know the Caufe of it: But I was fo much out of Humour, that I difdained to anfwer her; for I thought it a burning Shame, fo grave and folid a Matter fhould be treated with that Ridicule and Contempt. But underftanding from her Husband the Truth of the Cafe, fhe laugh'd as violently. This Thing taking Air, gave a Handle to endlefs Sneers; nay, the Wife of a certain Senator, of herfelf exccedingly prone to laugh, was fo delighted, that the had like to have burit herfelf. And fhe foon after dying accidentally of a Fever, it was thought her Death was occafion'd by that immoderate Laugh, which had inflam'd her Lungs. They were not indeed quite certain that fuch was the Cafe; however, fo it was.
whifper'd. She was otherwife a Matron of ar fine Underftanding, and a moft ufeful Lady, for fhe had feven Branches, which is fomething rare in that Sex. All the better Sort of Trees were much concern'd at her Death. She was bury'd at Midnight without the City Gates, and in the fame Garments fhe happen'd to have on when fhe dy'd. For there is a Provifion by Law, that no Body can be bury'd in the City, becaufe they believe the Air may be corrupted by the EfAuvia of the Carcafes. It is alfo by Law provided, that the dead Bodies fhall be interr'd without any Funeral. Pomp, or rich Dreffes, inafmuch as all is fhortly to be the Food of Worms. And thefe appear'd to me to be very wife Inftitutions. Yet they had: Feafts in Honour of the Dead, and alfo Funeral Orations, which fimply contain'd ans Exhortation to a virtuous Life, and which plac'd before their Eyes an Image of Mortality. At this the Cenfors were prefent, toobferve whether the Orators rais'd or deprefs'd the Character of the Deceas'd beyond Juftice. And hence the fubterranean Orators were extremely fparing of their Encomiums, fince to give immoderate Praifes was punifhable by Law. Not long after, when I was going to one of thefe Funcral Orations, I ask'd my Hoft what was the State and Condition of the departed Hero? He reply'd, he was an Husbandman who dy'd fuddenly upon the Road to this City. Hereupon, in my Turn, I burft into an exceffive

Laughter,

Laughter, retorting thus their own Weapons upon them. And pray, fays I, why have not Bulls and Oxen, thofe Companions of Husbandinen, the Honour of a Funeral Oration ? They can equally fupply Matter, for they equally perform the fame Office. But my Hoft defir'd me to fare my Jefts; for that in thefe Dominions Husbandmen were held in the highelt Efteem, on account of the great Excellence of the Duties they were employ'd in ; and that no Way of Life was more honourable than that of Agriculture. Thus every honeft and induftrious Farmer was regarded by the Citizens as their Feeder and Fofter-Father. And hence arofe the Cuftom, that when the Farmers about Autumn, or in the Month of Palm-Trees, repair to the City with a Multitude of CarHiages loaden with Corn, the Magiftrates meet them without the Gates, and introduce them into the City with Trumpets and other Inftruments in Concert, after the Manner of a Triumph. At this ftrange Account I was ftruck dumb, efpecially recollecting the hard Fate of our Husbandmen, groaning under the deepeft Slavery, and whore Employments are look'd upon as low and illiberal, in Comparifon of thofe which are Pandars to our Pleafures; fuch as Cooks, Poulterers, Perfumers, and fuch like. And this I fairly own'd to my Hoft, at the fame Time crjoining him Silence, fearing left the Subterraneans fhould pars very unfavourable Judgments upon Mankind. Having promifed mifed Secrecy, he carry'd me to the Halt where the Funeral Oration was to be made. I own I never heard any Thing executed more folidly, with greater Veracity, or with fo little an Appearance of Flattery as this; and I judg'd it a proper Pattern, to which. all Funeral Orations fhould conform. The Orator firf gave us a View of the Virtues of the Deceas'd, and then enumerated his Vices and Failings, with an Admonition to. his Audience to avoid "cm.

As we return'd from the Hall, we met an Offender in Cuftody of three Keepers. The fame by Decree in Court had Jately undergone the Punibhent of the Arm (fo they call the letting Blood) and was now going to be confign'd over to the publick Hofpital or Bedlam. Upon Enquiry into the Reafon of fuch Sentence, I was inform'd, that the Criminal had difputed publickly about the Qualities and Effence of the Supreme Being, at Thing here prohibited, where all thefe over curious Difquifitions are thought to be fuch exquifite Folly and Rafhneff, that a Creature of a found Underftanding could not well fall into it. Therefore thefe fubtle Difputants, after the Vena-Section, were, like Madmen, condemned to Confinement, till they got out of this Delirium. Ah! thought I to myfelf, what would become of our Divines, whom we every Day hear wran-gling about the Quality and Attributes of the Deity, about the Nature of firitual Beings, and other Myfteries of that Kind ? Whas

What alfo would become of our Mctaphyficians, who by their tranfcendental Jargon, affect a Degree of Wifdom far above the Vulgar, and even above Human Nature ittelf? Certainly, inftead of Hoods, Caps, and other Academical Honours, which in our World are fo liberally granted them, they would in this be fibew'd the Way to the publick Hofpital.

All this, and other Things full as paradoxical, I remark'd during the Time of my Probation in the Seminary. At length the appointed Time arriv'd, when, by Order of the Prince, I was to be conducted to Court with a Teftimonial. I flatter'd my felf, that I fhould have the moft honourable Encomiums and Approbations, depending partly upon my own Accomplifhments, fince I had learn'd the fübterranean Tongue fooner than could be expected, and partly upon the Intereft of my Hoit, together with the renown'd Integrity of my Judges. At laft my Teftimonial was deliver'd me, which I open'd with the utmoft Tranfport, impatient of reading my own Praifes, and of concluding from thence what my Deftiny was to be. But the Perufal of it threw me into Fits of Rage and Defpair. The Tenor of it was this:
" In Obedience to the Commands of " your Serene Highnefs, the Animal lately " arriv'd from another World, and calling " himfelf a Man, we herewith fend, moft "carefully inftructed in our Scminary.
" Upon the niceft Inquiry into his Genius " and Manners, we have found him to be " of competent Docility, and extremely " quick of Apprehenfion, but of fo weak and " uneven a Judgment, that he hardly merits
" to be confider'd as a rational Creature,
" much lefs to be admitted to any impor" tant Office in the Government. But " fince he excels every one in Swiftnefs of " Foot, we are humbly of Opinion that " he is extremely qualify'd for the Poft of
"King's Meffenger. Given at our Semi" nary of Kiba, in the Month of Brambles, "، by your Serene Highnefs's moft humble "Servants, Nobec, Fochtan, Rapafi, Chilac.

Upon this I went to my Hoft in a Torrent of Tears, and humbly implor'd that he would interpofe his Authority to procure a milder Teftimonial from the Karatti, and that he would fhew them my UniverfityTeftimonial, in which I was complimented with Epithets of Ingenious and Honourable. He reply'd, that that Teftimonial might have its Weight in our World, where they regarded perhaps the Shadow more than the Subftance, the outward Bark more than the inward Texture ; but that it would be of no Value with them, where they penctrate into the inmoft Nature of Things: And exhorted me moreover to bear my Fate as temperately as I could, efpecially as the Teftimonial could be neither revok'd or alter'd; for that there was no greater Crime than to afcribe undeferved Virtues to any one. But what Comfort it was in the Power of Words to give, he gave.

- Verba facit, quibus bunc lenire dolorem Poflit, Eo ingentem morbi partem removere. Ne curres bee, qua ftulte miraris हु optas. Quos non procipitat fubjecta potentia magne Lnvidice? mergit longa atq; infignis bonosum Pagina; nam;; bomini, nimios qui captat honores, Et nimias venatur cpes, numerofa parantur Excelfa turris tabulata, unde altior illi Cafus, Eo impulfe praceps immane ruince. As to the Teftimonial of the Karatti, he added, that they were the moft incorrupt and upright Judges, who could be brib'd by no Prefents, nor aw'd by no Threats, to recede a Hair's Breadth from Truth ; and that therefore there was no Room for Sufpicion in this Cafe. He alfo candidly acknowledged, that the Poverty of my Judgment was a Thing not unoblerv'd by himfelf, and that he inferr'd from the Readinefs of my Memory, and the Quicknefs of my Apprehenfion, that I was not that Sort of Wood out of rwich Mercury was to be made, and that I could not poflibly meet with Preferment upon account of that remarkable Defect in my Judgment: That he had gather'd, from my Difcourfes and Defcription of Europe, that I was Stultorum in patria, prawog; fub aere natum.

And with thefe and a great many more Profeffions of Friendfhip, he defir'd me without Delay to prepare for my Journey. I follow'd the Advice of this moft fagacious Perfon, efpecially as Neceffity requir'd it, and as it would have been Rafhnefs to have oppos'd the Order of the Prince.

We now began our Journey in Company with fome other young Trees, which were difmifs'd from the Seminary at the fame Time, and fent to Court for the fame End. Our Leader was one of the Karatti, who, upon account of his Age and a Weaknefs in his Feet, was carry'd by an Ox ; for it is an unufual Thing here to have Vehicles, thefe being indulg'd only to the Decrepit and Difeas'd ; tho' the Inhabitants of this Planet are really more excufable for it than thofe of our World, by reafon of the Slownefs of their Gait. I remember, when I gave a Defcription of our Vehicles, that is, our Coaches with Horfes, into which we were ftuff'd like fo much Lumber, and drawn thro' the City, the Subtcrraneans fmil'd at my Account, efpecially when they heard that no Ncighbour envy'd another, unlefs he kept his Coach and was drawn in it through the Streets by a Pair of mettlefome four-footed Beafts. What with the Slownefs of the Motion of thefe rational Trees, we were three Days upon this Journey, tho' Keba is hardly four Miles diftant from the Capital. Had I been alone, a Day would have been fufficient. .'Twas a Pleafure Pleafure indeed that I excell'd thefe Subterraneans in that Advantage of foot, but it griev'd me to the Soul that for that very Excellence I was condemn'd to a vile ignominious Office. Would to Crod! faid I, that I labour'd under the fame Infirmity with them, fince by this Defect alone $L$ might have efcap'd the low and ignoble Drudgery I was deftin'd to. Our Leader, over-hearing me, reply'd thus, If Nature had not made you Amends for the Defects of your Mind by fome one Excellence of Body, all would behold you as an unprofitable Load upon the Earth; for that very Quicknefs of Parts permits you only to fee the Surface of Things, and not the Subftance ; and fince you have but two Branches, you are inferior to the Subterraneans in every Thing that depends upon the Hands. Hearing this, I thank'd God who had given me this Swiftnefs of Feet, fince without this Virtue I had no Chance to be reckon'd in the Number of rational Creatures.

During our Journey, I was furpriz'd to fee all around me the Natives fo intent upon their Labours, that at the Approach of Paffengers nobody left off Work, or even threw their Eyes round, tho' fomething extraordinary fhould even pafs along. But at the Clofe of Day, their Toils all ended, then they indulg'd in every Amufement of the Mind, the chief Magiftrate conniving and tolerating thefe Diverfons, as Reliefs and Strengtheners of the Body and Mind, and fomething full as neceffary as Meat and Drink. This and other Things made the Journey highly grateful. The whole Country is perfectly beautiful. Imagine it a fpacious Amphitheatre, and fuch an one as Nature alone could make. Where Nature was lefs profufe, all was fupply'd by the Induftry of the Inhabitants, who were animated to thefe rural Toils, and to the cultivating and improving their Land, by Rewards from the Magiftrate; and whoever fuffer'd his Grounds to run to Ruin, afterwards wrought for Hire. Wé pafs'd by many fair Villages, which from the Multitude of them look'd like one continued City, and exhibited the fame Appearance all along. Yet we were fomething infefted by the Monkeys from the Woods, which rambling up and down, and from an Affinity in $m y$ Shape, imagining I was of their Race, were continually teazing me with their Approaches and Touches. I could fcarce fupprefs my Rage, when I perceiv'd that this was a perfect Comedy to fome of the Trees; for I was conducted to Court (by exprefs Order of his Majefty) in the fame Drefs, in which I alighted upon the Planet, namely, with my Harpoon in my right Hand, that his Majefty might behold what the Drefs of our World was, and particularly what was my own Appearance upon niy Arrival. And very opportunely it was that I had my Harpoon in my Hand, that I might chace away thofe Swarms of Monkeys that gather'd apace at laft tound me ;
tho' it was all in vain ; for in the room of thofe that fled more came, fo that I was forced to move every Step like a Man upon his Guard.

C H A P. IV.

The Court of the Potuan Empire.

AT length we came to the Royal City of Potu, which for Beauty and Magnificence might vie with any. The Buildings there are more numerous and extenfive than at Keba, and the Streets wider and more commodious. The Form, which was the firft Place we were brought to, was fill'd with Numbers of Merchants, and furrounded every Way with Shops of Artifts and Tradefmen. But I faw with fome Aftonifhment in the Middle of the Forum a certain Criminal with a Halter about his Neck, and a large Company of grave and elderly Trees ftanding round him. Upon my afking what was the Matter, and for what Crime he deferved Hanging, efpecially as I thought no Crime here was Captital, it was. told me, that this Offender was a Projector, who had advis'd the Abolition of a certain old Cuftom ; that thofe who ftood round him were the Senators and Lawyers, who then and there examined the Projector's Scheme, fo that if it chould appear that it was a well digcited 'Thing, and falutary to the Commonwealth, the Offender was not culy:

44 A Journey to the

only abfulv'd, but rewarded; but if injurious to the Publick, or if the Projector by the Repeal of this Law appear'd to have glanc'd at his own Advantage, he was prefently to be hang'd as a Difturber of the Realm. And this is the Reafon why few are found to run this Rifque, or have Courage enough to advife the Abrogation of any Law, unlefs the Thing be fo demonftrably evident and jult, that the Succefs of it cannot be doubted of: So perfuaded are the Subterraneans, that the ancient Laws and Inftitutions of their Anceftors are to be maintain'd and rever'd. For they believe the Government would be in Danger, if for the Wantonnefs of every Body, thofe Laws were to be chang'd or difannul'd. What, alas! faid I to myfelf, would become of the Projectors of our World, who, under a Pretence of publick Emolument, are daily hatching and inventing new Laws, with an Eye only to their private Gains, inftead of the common Benefit?

At length we were introduced into a fpacious Houfe, which was the ufual Place of Reception for all who were fent from the Seminaries throughout the Empire. In the fame Place are brought up thofe who are to attend upon the Prince. Our Captain, the Karatti, bid us be in Readinefs, while he went to acquaint his Highnefs with our Arrival. He had fcarce left us when we heard a Noife, like that of great Rejoicings, and immediately the Air echo'd with the Sound of Trumpets and Beat of Drums. Alarm'd at this Noife we went out, and beheld a certain Tree magnificentlyattended and crown'd with a Chaplet of Flowers, and prefently difcover'd that it was the fame Citizen whom we juft now faw in the Forum with his Neck in a Halter. The Reafon of this Triumph was the Approbation of that Law, which at the Pcril of his Head he had advifed. But by what Arguments he attack'd the old Law, I could never reach to the Knowledge, by Reafon of the great Silence of the People ; and hence it is, that the leaft Matter tranfacted in the Senate in relation to the Government never tranfpires, or takes the leaft Air. Farotherwife it is with us, where the Actions of the Senate and the whole of their Debates are reported, weigh'd and criticiz'd upon in every Tavern and Street.

In the Space of an Hour the Karatti returns, and commands us all to follow him. We obey'd. As we went, we met certain young Trees, who offer'd to Sale little printed Books of curious and memorable Things. Among the reft, I caft my Eje upon a fmall Book, the Title of which was, "A "full and true Account of the ftrange " flying Dragon, that appear'd in the Ele"6 ment laft Year." There did I behold myfelf, that is, my Effigies engrav'd juft as I appear'd when I was whirling round this Planet with my Harpoon and my long Rope.

46 A Journey to the
I could not help fmiling at the Figure, and faid to myfelf, Hci! qualis facies! E゚ quali digna tabella!
Having bought the Book for three Kilacs, which is equivalent to about two Shillings of our Money, I walk'd on gravely to the Palace. Art and Elegance feem'd to prefide here, rather than Profufion and a vain Magnificence. I obferv'd the Prince had very few Attendants; for fuch was his Temperance, that he had difcarded whatever was fuperfluous. Nor is there indeed the fame Neceffity for as many Servants as our Courts require. For as many Branches as thefe Trees had, fo many Arms; fo that the common Labours and Bufinefs of the Houfehold could be done with at leaft thrice the Expedition.

It was about Dinner-time when we arsiv'd at Court: And fince it was his Highnef's's Pleafure to talk with me alone, I was introduced into the Prefence-Chamber. There is in this Prince a very remarkable Mixture of Mildnefs and Gravity. Such was his Steadinefs, that his Countenance was never known to have the leaft Cloud upon it. Secing the Prince, I inffantly fell upon my Knees. The Courtiers were aftonifned at this Adoration, and when I told his Highnefs (who afk'd me) the Rcafon why $i$ bent my Knee, he commanded me to rife, faying, that fuch a fort of Reverence was due to the Deity alone ; adding, that nothing nothing could obtain the Favour of the Prince but Obedience and Induftry. When I rofe, he afk'd me fundry Queftions, > Qua veniam, caufamq; via, nomenq; rogatus, Et patrian: Patria eft, refpondeo, grandier Orbis.

Klimius oft Nomen ; veni nec puppe per undas, Nec pede per terras ; patuit milti pervius $E$ Ether.

He then proceeded to enquire what I had met with in my Journey, and what were the Cuftoms and Ufages of our World. After which I proceeded to explain, as fenfibly as I could, the Wit, the Virtucs, the civiliz'd Manners of the Men of our World, and every Thing that Mankind pride themfelves in. He recciv'd my Account very. coldly, and at fome Things which I thought would not have rais'd his Admiration, he perfectly yawn'd. Lord! faid I to myfelf, how different are the Taftes of Mortals! that what gives One the molt fenfible Pleafure, to Another fhall be quite naufeous! But what moft offended his Highnefs was the Relation I gave him of our Lave-Proceedings, of the Eloquence of our Lawyers, and the quick Difpatch of the Judges in pronouncing Sentence. While I was endeavouring to make this fill clearer to him, he interrupted me by turning the Difcourfe in fomething elfe, and at length he proceeded to an Enquiry into our Religion and Worfhip. I then cxplain'd to him in a concife concife Manner, the feveral Articles of our Faith; at the Recital of which he fomewhat foften'd his Countenance, attefting that he could readily fubfcribe to them, and he could not chufe but wonder how a Race of People of fuch weak Judgments fhould entertain fuch found Notions of God and his Worfhip. But when he heard that the Chriftians were divided into Sects without Number, and that upon fome Diffe-rences in Matters of Faith, Pcople of the fame Blood and Family would cruelly perfecute one another, he anfwer'd thus: "A" mong us alfo there are a large Varicty of " different Sentiments concerning Things "s pertaining to divine Worfhip: But one " Man does not perfecute another for that. " All Perfecution for fpeculative Matters or " Errors arifing from the fole Variety of our " Perceptions, can fpring from nothing but " Pride, one thinking himfelf wifer and " more penetrating than the reft. But fuch " Pride muft be highly difpleafing in the " Eyes of the Supreme Being, who muft be "' a Lover of Humilty and Meeknefs in " Mortals. We never teaze an Affembly "' of Judges about any one who thall hap"s pen to diffent from the receiv'd Opinions " in Points of Speculation, provided he " docs it fincerely, and alfo conforms in "s practical Matters to the publick Wornip " of the Deity. And in this we purfue the " Track chalk'd out to us by our Anceftors, "s who always thought it inhuman to fetter 's the s6 the Underftanding, and tyrannize over " the Confcience. In our Politicks we " extremely recommend the Obfervance of " this Rule, fo that if my Subjects fhould " differ about the Make of my Body, the " Manner of my Life, or about my Oeco"s nomy or any fuch fort of Thing, yet at "s the fame time acknowledg'd me for their " lawful Sovereign to whom Obedience is " due, 1 think them all good Subjects." To this I reply'd, May it pleafe your moft Serene Highnefs, fuch a Conduct would in our World be call'd Syncretifm, and would be highly condemned by the Learned. He did not give me room to fay any more, and feeming to be a little difpleas'd walk'd away, and commanded me to ftay till Dinner was over.

48 A Journey to the

His Highnefs fat down to Table with his Royal Confort and their Son, together with the High Chancellor, or Kadoki. This fame Kadoki was in the firf Efteem among the Potuans for the Politenefs of his Manners, as well as his Prudence and Warinefs. For full twenty Years he never once gave his Sentiments in the Senate-Houfe, but the reit immediately came into them, nor ever decreed any thing with regard to the Publick, but what ftood firm and unfhaken, fo that his Decrees were fo many Axioms. But then he was fo flow of Apprehenfion, that for the lealt of them he ufed to require the Space of fourteen Days; and therefore in our World he would hardly be thought fit for Bufinefs of great Moment, where all Delay paffes for Sloth and Lazinefs But fince whatever he once apprehended he underftood through and through, and fince he executed nothing but. upon the fevereft Examination, hence he might be faid to do more in Reality than ten others, who mighty readily fet about Bufinefs, and are frequently ftyl'd Great Geniufes, but whofe Decrees muft afterwards be mended, alter'd, and lick'd into Shape; infomuch that at the Expiration of their Office, it is difcover'd that they have attempted every thing and brought nothing to Perfection. Among the Maxims therefore of the Potuan Court, this is one, That they who are fo forward at Bufinefs, are like thofe who walk to and fro and tread a great deal of Ground, but gain none.

A Journey to the

When the Family were feated, a Virgin enter'd with eight Branches and as many Difhes, fo that in a Moment the whole Table was cover'd. Prefently another Tree enter'd with eight Veffels of different Kinds of Wine. This latter had nine Branches, and fo was judg'd extremely qualified for the domeftick Bufinefs of the Court. And thus by two Servants only this whole Affair was commodioufly performed, which in terreftrial Courts is not to be done without a perfect Army of Servants. With the fame Dexterity the Difhes were remov'd, as they had been at firft placed. It was a frugal but not inelegant Meal. Of the whole Number of Difhes, the Sovereign confin'd fin'd himfelf to one. Not fo the great Ones of our Globe, who never think a Supper grand, unlefs one Courfe of Difhes give way to a finer and more exquifite Succeffion. During the Repaft, the Converfation run upon Morality or Politicks; fo that even thefe fenfual Pleafures had a Seafoning of Learning. Mention alfo was made of me, whom from the Quicknefs of my Apprehenfion they took to be not the Wood out of wubich Mercury zuas to be made.

The Repaft being ended, I was order'd to produce my Teftimonial; which being perus'd, the Prince directing his Eyes down to my Feet, faid, the Karatti had judg'd right, and that fo it ought to be. Quite thunderftruck with this Anfwer, and overwhelm'd in Tears, I implor'd a Revifal of the Teftimonial, fince upon a more intimate Scrutiny into the Virtues of my Mind, and the Endowments of my Underftanding, I might reafonably expect a milder Judgment to be made. His Highnefs being a merciful and equitable Prince, not at all incenfed at this forward and unufual Requeft, enjoin'd the Karatti then prefent, to examine me anew, and as accurately as poffibly. During this Trial, the Prince ftept afide to read fome other Teftimonials. The Prince having withdrawn himfelf, the Karatti propofed a new Set of Queftions to be folv'd by me. I anfwer'd them with my ufual Readinefs; upon which he fpake thus to me: You take a Thing prefently, but D 2 nat not entirely; for your Solutions fhew that the Queftion is readily perceiv'd, but not intimately underftood.

The Examination being finifh'd, the Prince went into the Council-Chamber, and foon return'd with a final Sentence to this Purpofe: That I had acted imprudently in calling in Queftion the Judgment of Karatti, and that therefore I had incurr'd the Penalty which the third leffer Space of the fourth greater Space inflicts upon Slanderers (by the greater and leffer Spaces, or Skibal and Kibal, they mean Books and Chapters) and that I deferv'd to undergo the Vence-fection in both my Branches, and alfo to be imprifon'd. The Words of the Law, lib. 4. cap. 3. concerning Defamation are thefe, Spik. antri. Flak. Sbak. mak. Tabu Mibalatti Silac. But tho' the Senfe of the Words was very clear and evident, and the Law too facred to be evaded, yet his moft Serene Highnefs, by a Stretch of his Prerogative, thought fit to pardon this Offence of mine, occafioned through an Immaturity of Judgment, as well as Ignorance of the Law, which could hardly be faid to be infring'd by this Indulgence to me, inafmuch as I was a Stranger and a Foreigner. And to give me a more ample Teftimony of his moft gracious Favour, he appointed me one of his Meffengers in Ordinary, an Honour I ought to hold myfelf highly fatisfy'd with.

Immediately the Kiva, or Secretary, was fent for, who enroll'd my Name in the Book of Promotions, together with the Names of feveral other Candidates. This Secretary was a moft extraordinary Perfon; for he had eleven Pair of Branches, and could confequently write eleven Letters all at the fame Time, and with the fame Eafe and Expedition that we can one; yet he had a very indifferent Judgment, upon which Account he never could expect any farther Promotion, and fo he grew old in the fame Poft which he had fill'd for thirty' Years. I contracted a clofe Friendfhip with him, and indeed I could not help cultivating an Affection for him, becaufe all the Edicts and Letters of State, which he wrote, I, as Meffenger in Ordinary, difpers'd over the Province. I was often aftonifh'd to fee him execute Bufinefs with fo much Dexterity; for it was a common Thing with him to write eleven Letters at once, and afterward feal them all in the fame Inftant. Among the Bleffings therefore of a Family, a large Number of Branches is reckon'd one. And hence the Women in Child-Bed, immediatcly after the Birth of the Infant, are wont to fignify to the Neighbours how many Branches it has brought into the World with it. It was reported, that the Father of our Secretary was born with twelve, and that his Family had long been famous for a Plurality of Branches.

The Diploma, which conftituted me in my Office, being order'd to be drawn Dur, I now retir'd to my Repofe. But tho' my Limbs were exceffively tir'd, yet was I not able to compofe mylelf to Slcep. That ignoble Employment, to which I was condemn'd, run continually in my Head, and I thought it the greateft Debafement imaginable for one who was a Candidate for Holy Orders, and a Bachelor of Arts in the Upper World, to be chang'd into a vile Subtersanean Court-Mefienger. With thefe mortifying Thoughts did I wafte a great Part of the Night, and during this Agitation, I feveral Times perus'd my Uni-verfity-Teftimonium, which.I had brought with me; (for as I obferv'd above, the Night is almoft as light as the Day.) At length quite jaded with thinking, I funk into the Arms of Sleep. But what a Variety of Scenes prefented themfelves to my difturb'd Imagination! I thought I was return'd to my own Country, and relating aloud to vaft Numbers of People all that had befel me in my fubterranean Tour ; prefently I was failing in the Air again, and engag'd with the Griffin once more, who gave me fo warm a Reception, as that it wak'd me out of my Sleep. But how was I fhock'd when I beheld by my Bedfide a Monkey of the largeft Size, which, by Reafon of the Doors being left open, had got into my Chamber. This unlook'd for Spectacle chill'd all my Blood, and made me alarm the Houfe with my Cries for Affiftance. Some Trees, which lay in the adjacent Chambers, immediately entering, difengag'd me from the Struggle, and drove the beafly Creature away. I underftood afterwards, that this Accident afforded the Prince plentiful Matter for Laughter. But that I might run no fuch Rifque for the future, he gave Command that I fhould be habited after the fubterranean Fafhion, and adorn'd with artificial Branches. As for my European Garments, they were taken from me, and for their Novelty hung up in the Prince's Wardrobe, with this Infcription: "The Drefs of a Juperterranean "Animal." Blefs me! faid I to m;felf, if Mafter Andrews, the Taylor at Bergen, who made this Suit, fhould know that his Work ${ }^{i}$ manfhip was preferv'd among the Curiofities of a fubterranean Prince, without Doubt he would grow vain, and think himfelf ds great a Man as any in the City.

World Under-Ground.

After this Misfortune Sleep quite forfook me. In the Morning my Diploma was brought me, which gave me the full Powers to execute my Office. A Multiplicity of Bufinefs pour'd in upon me foon, and carrying the Royal Edicts and Letters to every City of his Dominions, I was the perpetual Motion itfelf. In thefe Expeditions I explor'd the Genius of the Country, and in many Places difcover'd an uncommon Meafure of Politenefs and Underfanding. Only the Inhabitants of the City of Mabolki, which were all Brambles, feem'd to me fomething sude and uncultivated. Every Province has its peculiar Trees, or Natives of the Place, particularly the Province of Hufbandmen. 'Tho' in the great Cities, and efpecially in the Capital, there is a Mixture of all Sorts. The high Sentiments I. had entertain'd of the Wifdom of this People encreafed, as faft as I had frefh Opportunities of infpecting into them. Thofe very Laws and Cuttoms, which I had difapprov'd, upon mature Reflection, extorted all my Admiration. I could eafily bring a Cloud of Inftances of certain Manners and Ufages, which upon a tranfient View appear'd abfurd, but which to the curious Enquirer, would be full of Solidity and Wifdom. Out of a thoufand I fhall produce but this one, which gives you a perfect Idea of this People. A certain Student in Humanity food Candidate for the vacant Mafterfhip of a School. His Pretenfions were ftrengthen'd in this Manner, to wit, the Inhabitants of the City of Nahami certify'd, that the Candidate had liv'd very quietly for four Years together with a wanton and unfaithful Wife, and wore his Horns very patiently. The Certificate was couch'd in the following Style: "Where" as the learned and venerable focthan $H_{u}$ " has requir'd of his Neighbours a Teftimo"s nial of his Life and Morals, We the Ci ${ }^{6}$ tizens living in that Street or Portion of ss the City call'd Posko, do teftify, that the "f faid

56 A JOURNEY to the
"s faid 'focthan Hu has liv'd in Wedlock for " full four Years with a difloyal Wife, and " that without the leaft Noife or Diftur" bance ; that he has wore his Horns with " a laudable Patience, and with fuch Meek" nefs has bore this Misfortune, that we " judge him highly worthy to fucceed to "s the vacant Mafterfhip, if his Learning be " but equal to his Morals. Given under " our Hands this roth Day of the Month "Palm, in the 3000 ndth Year after the " great Deluge."

To this Recommendation was annex'd a Teftimonial from the Seminary of the $K a$ ratti, of his Learning and Studies, which feem'd to be more to the Purpofe. For what great Merit Cuckoldom had to bear the Bell from all other Doctors, I could not readily apprehend. But here lay the Senfe and Meaning of this ftrange Teftimonial, viz. Among the Virtues that principally recommend a Teacher, Moderation is one. For with all his Pomp of Learning, unlefs he has an invincible Patience, he mult be but indifferently qualify'd for the Scholaftick Employment, which fhould be exercifed without Severity or Paffion, left by untimely. Corrections the Minds of the Youths fhould be harden'd. And fince a greater Inftance of Moderation could hardly be given, than this of the Candidate, therefore his Neighbours infifted chiefly on this Argument, as every Thing was to be hop'd for from a Teacher fo renown'd for 58 A Journey to the this neceflary Virtue. It is faid his Majeffy laugh'd immoderately at fo unufual a Recommendation, but fince it was far from being abfurd, he conferr'd the vacant Mafterthip upon the Petitioner. And in Effect, he underftood and difcharg'd his Duty with fuch Addrefs, and fo engagd his Pupils byhis. Mildnefs and Clemency, that they regarded him rather as a Parent than a Tutor, and fuch was their Paffion for Learning under fuch foft and gentle Government, that thro' the whole Dominions there were few Schoo!s that annually fent out fuch eminent, learned and civiliz'd Trees.

As during the feveral Years of my Employment, I had frequent Opportunities of inspecting into the Nature of the Soil, into the Genius and Manners of the People, into their Policy, Religion, Laws and Studies, I hope it will not be unacceptable to the Reader, if I collect into one View what he will meet with feparately thoughout the whole Book.

C H A P. V.

Of the Nature of the Country, and the Manners of the People.

THE Potuan Empire is of no very great Extent. The whole Globe is. calld Nazar, and is about two hundred. German Miles in Circumference. A Traveller.
veller may eafily go round it without a Guide, for the fame Language obtains every where, tho' the Potuans differ greatly in their Cuftoms and Manners from the other States and Principalities. And as in our World the Europcans excel the reft of Mankind, fo the Potuans are diftinguifhed by their fuperior Virtue and Wifdom from the reft of the Globe. The high Roads, at proper Diftances, are adorn'd with Stones, that mark the Miles, and abound with Direct-ing-Pofts, which fhew the Ways and Turnings to every City and Village. It is indeed a very memorable Circumftance, and worthy of Admiration, that the fame Language is fpoke every where, altho' the feveral Kingdoms differ fo widely in other Refpects, namely, in their Manners, Underftanding, Cuftoms, and Condition, that we fee here all that Variety which Nature delights in, and which does not only fimply move or affect the Traveller, but even throws him into an Extafy of Wonder.
There are alfo Seas and Rivers which bear Veffels, whofe Oars feem to be mov'd by a Kind of magick Impulfe, for they are not work'd by the Labour of the Arm, but by Machines like our Clock-work. The Nature of this Device I cannot explain, as being not well vers'd in Mechanicks; and befides, thefe Trees contrive every Thing with fuch Subtilty, that no Mortal without the Fyes of Argus, or the Power of Divimation, can arrive at the Secret. This Cllobe, like ours, has a triple Motion, io that the Seafons here, namely, thofe of Day and Night, Winter and Summer, Spring and Autumn, are diftinguifh'd like ours; alfo towards the Poles it grows colder. As to Light, here is little Difference between Day and Night, for the Reafons before affign'd. Nay, the Night may be thought more grateful than the Day; for nothing can be conceiv'd more bright and fplendid, than that Light which the folid Firmament receives from the Sun, and reflects back upon the Planet, infomuch that it looks, (if I may be allow'd the Expreffion) like one univerfal Moon. The Inhabitants confift of various Species of Trees, as Oaks, Limes, Poplars, Palms, Brambles, $\mathfrak{E}^{\circ} c$. from whence the fixteen Months, into which the fubterranean Year is divided, have their Names. For every fixteenth Month the Planet Na zar returns to its firft Station, yet not upon the fame Day, upon account of the Inequality of its Motion; for juft like our Moon, by its manifold Phafes, it perplexes the Literati of the Firmament. Their Dates or Æras of Time are various; thefe they fix from fome memorable Circumfance, and particularly from the great Comet which appear'd 3000 Years ago, and is faid to have caus'd an univerfal Deluge, in which the whole Race of Trees, and other Animals perifh'd, except a few which on the Tops of Mountains efcap'd the general Wreck, and from whom the prefent prefent Inhabitants are defcended. The Soil abounds with Corn, Herbs, and Pulfe; and produces all the Fruits of Europe, except Oats, of which there is no Want, fince there are no Horfes. The Seas and Lakes afford delicious Fifh, and the Shoars and Banks are adorn'd with the moft entertaining Varicty of Villages, fome contiguous, and fome divided. The Liquor they drink is extracted from certain Herbs which flourifh all the Year. The Venders of this Liquor are call'd Minhalpi, that is, HerbDreffers, who in every City are reftrained to a certain Number, and who alone have the Privilege of preparing.it. Thofe who enjoy this Advantage, are commanded to abftain from all other Bufinefs or lucrative Employment. In particular it is provided, that thofe who already are in any publick Offices, or who have Salaries from theGovernment, fhall never concern themfelves in this Branch of Trade ; becaufe thefe by their Power and Authority in the City might monopolize the Bufinefs, and be able to underfel the reft, from the Revenues they already enjoy. An Artifice often practifed by the Courtiers and great Men of our World, who.in the Shape of Merchants or Jobbers, become immenfely rich.

Their Populoufnefs is mightily promoted by a certain falutary Law concerning Procreation; for according to the Number of Children, their Privileges and Immunities are increas'd or diminifh'd. He wha is the Father of fix Children is exempted from all Taxes, ordinary andextraordinary. Hence a numerous Iffue is deem'd as advantageous there as it is hurtful and inconvenient in our World, where often a Tax is impos'd in the Way of Capitation. No one here fills two Pofts at once, becaufe they are of Opinion, that the leaft Employment requires the whole A&tivity of the Soul. And therefore, with the Leave of my fellow Creatures, I muft fay, that Bufinefs is better done with them than with us. So facred is the Obfervance of this Law, that a Phyfician does not direct his Studies to the whole Circle of Phyfick, but bends all his Application to the Nature and Cure of one only Diforder. A Mufician plays upon only one Inftrument, quite otherwife than it is upon our Earth, where by the Variety of our Pretenfions, Humanity is trampled on, Bitterneffes increafe, and our Duty is neglected; and where, by aiming at every Thing, we do nothing to good Purpofe. Thus a Phyfician, while he affects to rectify the Diforders of the State, as well as thofe of the Body, performs neither well. Thus, if another will be both a Senator and a Mufician, we can expect nothing but Difcord. We are apt to admire fuch daring Spirits as fly at all Things, who mix officioully in Matters of the higheft Concern, and think there is nothing they are unfit for. But it is all Rafhnefs, Prefumption, and a total Want of Senfe of their own Strength, that we thus blindly.
blindly admire. Did they but thoroughly know the Weight of publick Office, and. the Shortnefs of their own Abilities, they would reject the offer'd Honours, and tremble at the Sound. No one here undertakes the leaft Employment invita Minerva. Iremember to have heard an illuftrious Philofopher, by Name Rakbafi, defcanting upon this Subject, and thus exprefing himifelf: "Every one of us fhould be acquainted " with his own Abilities, and be the ftrict" eft Judge of his own Virtues and Vices ; " otherwife Stage-Players will appear to " have more Wifdom than we ; for they " do not chufe the fineft Parts, but thofe"6 that are the fitteft for them. And fhall. " a Player fee that on a Stage, which a " wife Man cannot fee in Life?"

The Natives of this Empire are not divided into Nobles and Commons. Formerly indeed this Diftinction ohtain'd, But when the Sovereigns obferv'd that the Seeds of Difcord fprang from hence, they wifely removed all fuch Privileges as were deriv'd from Birth, fo that Virtue alone is now the Teft of Honour; and this will appear plainer hereafter. The fole Preheminence, of Birth confifts in a Plurality of Branches. 'The Offspring is accounted Noble or Ignoble, according to the Plenty or Want of thofe, for this Reafon, becaufe the greater Plenty they have, the fiter they are for all. zanaual Operations.

Enough

Enough has been faid in the foregoing Part of this Work concerning the Genius and Manners of this People; and therefore referring the Reader to thofe Paffages, I conclude this Chapter, and proceed to fome other Particulars.

C H A P. VI.

Of the Religion of the Potuan Nation:

THE Potuan Syftem of Religion lies in a narrow Compafs, and contains a Confeffion of Faith, fomething longer than our Apoftles Creed. lt is prohibited here, under Pain of Banifhment to the Firmament, to comment upon the facred Books. And if any prefume to difpute about the Effence and Atrributes of God, or about the Nature of Spirits, and Souls, he is condemn'd to the Vene-fection, and then confin'd in che publick Bedlam. For they think it the height of Folly to offer to defcribe or define thofe Things, to which the human Mind is as Ulind as the Eyes of an Owl to the Light of the Sun. They are all unanimous in adoring one Supreme Being, by whofe Almighty Power all Things were created, and by whofe Providence they fubfift. Let but this Principle be uncontroverted, and they never moleft any one for entertaining different Sentiments concerning a Method of Worfhip. Thofe alone who openly attack this Religion,

WFrld Under-Ground. 65
Religion, as by Law eftablifhed, are regarded as Difturbers of the publick Tranquillity. Hence I had the free Exercife of my own Religion, nor fuffer'd the !eaft Affront upon that Account. The Potuans pray but feldom, but then it is with great Ardency, infomuch that they feem to be. in an Extafy. And when I related that we pray and fing Ptalins very often while employ'd about the common Affairs of Life, the Potuans thought it a vicious Cuftom, replying, that an earthly Sovereign would. take it extremely ill, to fee any one humbly approaching him with a Petition, and at the fame Time brufhing his Cloaths, or buckling his Hair. Nor had they a much greater Relifh for our Hymns, and Anthems, as holding it ridiculous to exprefs Grief and Penitence in mufical Meafures, fince the Difpleafure of the Deity is to be appeas'd by Sighs and Tears of real Sorrow, not by the Artifice of Tunes and Inftruments. This and more I heard, but not. without fome Indignation, efpecially as my own Father of bleffed Memory, who was once Chanter of a Cathedral, had compos'd feveral Anthems in Vogue to this Day, and as I mylelf intended once to have ftood for a vacant Chanterfhip. But I ftifled my Refentment ; for the Subterraneans foftrenuoufly defend their Opinions, and fo fpecioufly fet every Thing out to View, that it is no caly Matter to refute cren the plaineft of their Errors. There were alfo feveral.
other Opinions upon religious Subjects, which they maintained with the fame Art, and Appearance of Truth. Thus, when I had often obferv'd to fome Acquaintance, that they could hope for no Salvation after Death, as living in utter Darknefs, they reply'd, That thofe who were fo free of dealing Damnation to others, run the greateft Rifque of it themfelves ; that the Source of all that, is Arrogance, which God muft hate and difallow; and that to condemn the Judgment of others, and to ufe Force to convince them, was the fame Thing as to affume the whole Light of Reafon; which is juft the Conduct of Fools, who think that they alone are wife. Moreover, when I was proving a certain Opinion, and had oppos'd to my Adverfary"s Reafonings the Dictates of my own Confcience, he extol'd my Argument, and defir'd me ftill to perfift in following thofe Dictates of Confcience, as he himfelf would always do; for that then, every one following the Teftimony of his Confcience, all Contention would ceafe, and much Matter of Controverfy be cut off.

Among other religious Miftakes maintained by the People of this Globe, were there : They did not deny that good Actions were rewarded, and bad ones punifh'd by God; but then they thought that Branch of Juftice, confifting in the Diftribution of Rewards and Punifhments took Place only in a future State. I brought various Examples.
amples of fuch as for their Impicties had been punifh'd in this Life; but they alledg'd as many oppofite Examples of very wicked Trees, who yet were as fortunate as they were wicked to the End of their L ircs In a Difpute, faid they, we are too apt to borrow only thofe Weapons, and attend toonly thofe Inftances, which make for our Purpofe and ftrengthen our Caufe, overlooking and difregarding fuch as might injure it. With that I infanced in myfelf, by fhewing that many who had injur'd me came to a miferable End. In Anfwer they urg'd, that all this proceeded from SelfLove, from my over-weening Opinion, that in the Eyes of the Supreme Being I was of more Confequence, than many others, who, like me, had fuffered the fevereft Injuries undefervedly, and yet had: beheld their Perfecutors blefs'd and profperous to the laft Day of their Lives. Again, when accidentally I was commending the Practice of daily Prayer, they reply'd, That indeed they did not deny the Necefity of. Prayer, but that they were thoroughly perfuaded that the trueft Picty confifted in a praftical Obfervance of the divise Lawr To prove this, they borrow'd an Argument from a Prince, or Lawgiver: This Prince has two Sorts of Subjects ; fome are continually offending and tranfgreffing his Laws thro' Infirmity or Contumacy; and ret the fe fhall be found continually haunting the Court to procure Pardon for Faults, to be repeated as foon as pardon'd. Others approach the Court very rarely, but remaining peaceable at Home, are habitual Obfervers of their Suvereign's Laws. Who can doubt but that he muft think this latter Sort more worthy of his Favour, and regard the firft as bad Subjects and troublefome Creatures?

In thefe and the like Controverfies was I. often engag'd, tho' without Succefs; for I was able to bring nobody over to my Way. of thinking. And therefore omitting all other religious Difputes, I fhall only give you their general and moft obfervable Doctrines, leaving it to the intelligent Reader to applaud or cenfure them as he fhall judge beft.

The Potuans believe in one God, Omnipotent, Creator and Preferver of all Things, whofe Omnipotence and Unity they demonftrate from this ample and harmonious Creation. And fince they are admirably fkill'd in the Study of Nature, they have fuch magnificent and exalted Sentiments of the Nature and Attributes of the Deity, that they look upon it as a: Defect in the Underftanding to attempt to define what tranfcends their Capacities. The Year is diftinguifh'd by five Feftival Days; the firft of which is celebrated with the utmoft Devotion in fuch obfcure Places as that no Rays of Light can pierce them, indicating by this, that the Being they adore is incomprehenfible. There the Worfhipers remain remain almoft immoveable, from the Rifing to the Setting of the Sun, as tho' they were in an Extary. This high Day is called, the Day of the iniomprcbenfible God, and it falls on the firft Day of the Month of Oaks. The other Feftivals are celebrated at four other Seafons of the Year, and were inftituted to return Thanks to God for the Bleffings of his Providence. The Abfentees, unlefs they are able to give very juft Reafons for their Abfence, are deem'd bad Subjects, and live totally difregarded. The Publick Forms of Prayer are fo devis'd, as not to regard the People who pray, but the Welfare of the Prince or the State. None prays in Publick for himfelf. The Defign of which Inftitution is, that the Potuans may believe that the Happinefs of Individuals is fo clofely connected with that of the Publick, that they cannot be feparated. None are compell'd by Force or by Fines to attend the Publick Worfhip, for as they are of Opinion that Piety confifts chiefly in Love, and as Experience teaches them that Love is dampt and not inflam'd by Force, therefore it muft be an unprofitable and a wicked Thing, to ufe Compulfion in the Cafe of Religion. This Point they thus illuftrate. Should a Husband defire a reciprocal Affection from his Confort, and fhould he hope to conquer her Coldnefs and Indifference by Blows, he would be fo far from kindling up her Love by this Method, thod, that her Indifference would increafe, and end in Abhorence and Deteftation.

Thele are fome of the principal Doctrines of the Potuan Divinity, which to fome muft appear like mere natural Religion ; and fo indeed it did at firft to me. But they affert that all was divinely reveal'd to them, and that fome Ages ago they recciv'd a Book which contain'd their Syftem of Faith and Practice. Formerly, fay they,

- our Ancefors liv'd contented with the Religion of Nature only ; but Experience taught them, that the fole Light of Nature was infufficient, fince all thofe noble Principles thro' the Sloth and Carelefnefs of fome were forgot, and thro' an airy Philofophy of others, (nothing being able to check their licentious Carcer) were utterly deprav'd and corrupted. Hereupon God gave them a written Law. Hence it appears how great is their Error, who obftinately deny the Neceffity of a Revelation. For my Part, I freely own, that many Points of this Theology feem'd to me, if not Praife-worthy, yet by no Means to be defipifed. To fome I could not affent. But one Thing there is deferving all our Admiration, namely, that in Times of War the Conquerors, returning from the Field, inftead of that Jov and Triumph with which we celebrate V ictories, and fing Te Dcum, pafs fome Days in deep Silence, as if they were afhamed of having been obliged to fhed Blood. Thercfore there is very little Mention of military military Affairs in the Subterranean Annals, which are chiefly Records of Civil Matters, fuch as their Laws, Inftitutions, and Foundations.

C H A P. VII.

> Of their Policy.

IN the Potuan Empire an hereditary, and indeed lineal Succeffion has flourilh'd for a full Thoufand Years ; and the fame is at this Day religioully obferv'd. Their Annals indeed difcover, that in one Inftance they departed from this Order of Succeffion. For fince right Reafon feem'd to require, that Rulers hould excel their Subjects in Wiflom and all the Endowments of the Mind, hence it was thought neceffary that Virtue fhould be more regarded than Birth, and that he fhould be elected for their Sovereign, who fhould be thought the moft excellent and worthy among the Subjects. Upon this the ancient Succeffion being laid afide, the fupreme Power by the general Voice was conferr'd upon a Philofopher, nam'd Rabbacku. At firft he govern'd with fuch Prudence and with fuch Mildnefs, that he feem'd a Pattern for fucceeding Princes. But thefe happy Times were but of fhort Duration; and the $P_{0}$ tuans were too late convinc'd of the Falfhood of that Maxim, which holds, "That " the 6t the Kingdom is happy, where a Philofopher 's is at the Helm." For fince the new Sowereign was rais'd from the meaneft Fortune to the Height of Power, his Virtues and all his Arts of Government could not procure or maintain that Veneration, that Refpect, that Majefty, which is the great Support of a Monarcli's Power. Thofe who but lately had been his Equals or Superiors, could hardly be brought to bow to an Equal or Inferior, or to pay the new ?rince that MeaYure of Obedience due from Subjects to their Rulers; and therefore when any ftrict or troublefome Commands were laid upon them, they murmur'd loud, and never regarded what the Prince then was, but what he was before his Exaltation. Hence he was forc'd to have Recourfe to fubmiffive Flatteries; and even this availed not ; for after there Submiffions, being obliged to iffue out his Commands and Edicts, they were ftill receiv'd with Frowns and with Reluctance. Rabbacku then perceiving, that other Means were neceffary to keep the Subjects to their Duty, from a mild and popular Behaviour, he now chang'd his Meafures, and treated his People with Severity. But alas! by this Extream, thofe Sparks which lay conceal'd under the Afhes, now broke into an open Flame; the Subjects rofe in Arms againft their Prince, and one Rebellion not thoroughly fubdued and laid afleep, was the Beginning of another. The Monarch finding at length that the Go-

Government could no longer fubfift but under a Sovereign of illuftrious Defcent, whofe high Birth might extort a Veneration from the People, made a voluntary Abdicaton of the Empire in Favour of the Prince, who in Right of Birth fhould have furceeded. The ancient Family being thus reftor'd, Peace was reftor'd with it, and all thole Storms, which had fhatter'd the Veffeel of the Commonwealth, at once fubfided. From that Time it was made Capital to attempt any Innovation in the Order of Sueceffion.
The Empire therefore is now hereditary, and probably will remain fo till Time hall be no more, unless the moot urgent and extreme Neceffity oblige them to deviate from this Rule. Mention is made in the Potuan Annals, of a Philofopher who devis'd an Expedient to break thro' this Law. His Counfel was not to feet afire the Royal Family, but to make Choice of that Son of the deceas'd Sovereign, be it elder or younger, whore Virtues were more emincut, and who fhould be deem'd mot equal to the Weight. This Philofopher, having propos'd this Law, fubmitted himfelf (according to the Cuftom of his Country) to the usual Tent, namely, to have his Neck in a Halter, while they were debating about the Utility of the propos'd Law. The Scnate being affembled, and the Votes call up, the Propofal was condemn'd as a Thing detrimental to the $\underset{\mathrm{E}}{\text { Commonwealth. They }}$ be-be-believ'd it would be the Source of perpetual Troubles, and would fow the Seeds of Difcord between the Royal Progeny ; that therefore it was more advifable for the old Law to take Place, and that the Right of Dominion fhould ftill devolve upon the Firft-Born, altho' the younger Iffue might excel in the Endowments of the Mind. The Law therefore not paffing, the Projector was ftrangled. And thefe are the only Species of Criminals that are punih'd with Death. For the Potuans are perfuaded, that every Change or Reformation, however well digefted, gives Occafion to Difturbance and Commotion, and puts the whole State into a fluctuating and unfettled Condition ; but if it be a rafh and ill-digefted Alteration, it is followed with inevitable Ruin.

The Power of the Potuan Monarchs, altho' fubject to no Laws, is yet rather a paternal than a regal Power. For being naturally Lovers of Juftice, Power, and Liberty, Things totally incompatible clewhere, do here go Hand in Hand.

Among the Laws of this Kingdom, the moff falutary is that by which the Princes endeavour to preferve an Equality between the Subjects, that is, as far as the Nature of Government will admit. You fee here no different Ranks and Titles of Honour. Inferiors obey their Superiors, and the Younger the Elder ; and this is all.

The fubterranean Memoirs fhew, that fome Ages ago fuch Claffes of Dignities were in ufe, and that they were eftablifh'd by Law ; but it appear'd that they were the Source of infinite Diforders. It was an intolerable Evil, for an elder Brother to give Place to his younger, or a Parent to his Child ; fo that at length each fhunning the other's Company, it put a Stop to all Converfation and good Fellowfhip. But thefe were not the only Grievances: For in Procefs of Time it came to that Pafs, that the more noble and worthy Trees, whom Nature had blefs'd with the ftrongeft Capacities, and with the greateft Number of Branches, were feated in the loweft Places at Feafts and Affemblies. For no Tree of real Virtue and intrinfick Worth, could bring himfelf to fue for a Title or Mark of Preheminence, which from his Soul he defnis'd. And on the contrary, the more profligate and worthlefs Sort of Trees would incefliantly teaze their Royal Mafter with Petitions, till they had even extorted a Title that might in a Manner hide the Poverty of their Nature, and.be a Skreen for their Vices. Herre it came to pafs, that Titles were at laft look'd upon as certain Indications of the vileft Trees. . Their Feftivals and folemn Mectings, were, to Strangers, a Spectacle the moft abfurd that can be imagin'd. There might they behold Brambles and Bufhes in the moft honourable Seats, while the lofty Cedarand the noble Oak, each

[^0]of whom Nature had adorn'd with ten or twelve Tire of Branches, took the remoteft and moft obfcure Seats. Even the Ladies had Titles; they wére Counfellorṣ of the Houfhold, Counfellors of State, Counfellors of Court. And this blew up the Coals of Difcord more in that weaker Sex than in the other. To fuch an Excefs this vain Ambition rofe, that they to whom Nature had been fo unkind, as to afford them no more than two or three Pair of Branches, even they abfurdly affected the Title of Trees of ten or twelve Branches. This Vanity is juft as ridiculous, as if the mof deform'd Monfter in Nature fhould affect to pafs for a Beauty, or a Man of the meanef Original give himfelf the Airs of a Man of Quality. When this Evil had arriv'd to its higheft Pitch, and the whole Kingdom upon the Brink of being ruin'd, every Mortal grafping at empty Names, and difhonourable Titles, a certain Native of Keba had the Hardinefs to propofe a Law for the abolifhing this Cuftom. This fame Perfon was, according to the ufual Cuftom, brought into the Forum, with a Halter about his Neck. The Senate being fet, and proceeding to vote, the Propofal paffed without any open Oppofition, and was judg'd ufeful to the Commonwealth. Upon this he was crown'd with a Garland of Flowers, and led into the City in Triumph, amidft the Shouts and Acclamations of the Populace. And when in Procefs of Time is was difcover'd how advantageous the Re - peal of thefe Laws was, the Projector was advanc'd to the Honour of Kadoki, or High Chancellor.

Ever fince this Time, the Law for preferving this Equality among the Subjects, thas been inviolably obferv'd. Yet the Repeal did not put a Stop to all Emulation; for every one now endeavour'd to fhine by true Virtue and real Merit. It appears irom the Annals of this Empire, that from that Time to this, has been but one Projector who twice attempted to revive the Diftinction of Dignities; but for his firft Effort he was condemn'd to the Vena--Section, and fince he perfifted in his Attempt, he was banifh'd to the Firmament. Now therefore no Ranks or Titles of Honour obtain hicre, only the fupreme Magiftrate declares fome Profeffions to be nobler than others, by which Declaration, notwithftanding, nobody has a Right of affuming the chief Seats in publick Aflemblies. This fmall Difference we find in the Edicts and Letters mandatory of the Sovereign, which generally end with thefe Words: "We command and " enjoin all ifusbandmen, Inventors of " Machines for the Manufactures, Mer"chants, Tradefinen, Philofophers, Offi" cers of the Court, छั"."

I was inform'd, that in the Archives of the Prince, this Catalogue of Honour was preferv'd. :
3. Thofe who had affifted the Government with their Wealth and Fortunes in its greateft Streights.
2. Officers who ferve gratis and without Salary or Penfion.
3. Husbandmen of eight Branches and upwards.
4. Husbandmen of feven Branches and under.
5. Inventors or Erectors of Machines for Manufactures.
6. Operators who exercife the more neceffary Callings and Employments.
7. Philofophers and graduate Doctors of both Sexes.
3. Artifans.
9. Merchants.

Io. Officers of the Court, with a Salary of 500 Rupats.
II. Officers of the Court, with a Salary of 1000 Rupats

This Series of Honours feem'd very ridiculous to me, as it muft to every one of our Globe. I guefs'd indeed at fome of the Reafons for this inverted Oqder, what Foundation ir was grounded on, and by what Arguments the Subterraneans would defend jt. But I confefs upon the whole it was a Paradox I could not comprehend.

Among other Things worthy of Obfervation, I remark'd the following : The more Benefit any one receiv'd from the Government, with a proportional Modefty and Humility he carry'd himfelf. Thus I frequently faw Bofpolak, the richeft Man in the Potuan Dominions, receive all he met with fuch Condefcenfion, that he lower'd all his Branches, and by inclining his Head, teftify'd to every common Tree his grateful Senfe of the Publick Favours. Upon my afking the Reafon, I was told, that thus it ought to be, fince upon no Subject more Bencfits were confer'd, and that therefore he was the greateft Debtor to the Commonwealth. Not that he was oblig'd by any Law to this Condefcenfion; but as the Potuans in general act wifely and judicioufly, fo they make a voluntary Virtue of it, holding themfelves bound to ufe fuch a Behaviour as Gratitude would dictate ; far otherwife than it is with us, where thofe, whom their Country has loaded with Wealth and Titles, receive their Inferiors with a lofty and contemptuous Air.

But the moft deferving Subjects of ail, and who receive the moft univerfal Honour and Refpect, are the Parents of a numerous Offspring. Thefe are the Heroes of the Subterranean World, and their Memory is held facred with Pofterity. They are alifo the only Perfons upon whom the Name of Great is conferr'd. Not fo with us ; where the Deftroyers of Mankind are complimented with that Title. One may eafily guefs what Sentiments they would entertain here of Alexander the Great and 'Fulius Cr far, each of whom having flain their MilE 4 lions, died without Offspring. I remember ro have feen at Keba this Epitaph of a Hufbandman: "Here lies Fochtan the Great, "Father of thirty Ghildren, the Heroe of his "Time." It muft be obferv'd, that in order to acquire this Glory, the mere Procreation of Children is not alone fufficient, unlefs they be alfo liberally and virtuoufly educated.

In the enating Laws, they procced with a Deliberation equal to that of the old Romans. The Propofal of a new Law is fix'd upon all the Courts and Places of Refort through out the City. The Citizens are free to examine it, and fend their Sentiments and Advices upon it to the College of Wife Men, inftituted for this very Purpofe. Here every Thing is weigh'd that concerns the enacting, the difannuiling, approving, correcting, limiting, or extending this Law. And when it has thus gone through all this Trial and Examination, it is offer'd to the Prince for his Confent and Authority. This Delay may feem abfurd to fome; but the Confequence of this Caution is, that their Laws are immortal; and I have been inform'd, that not one of their Laws for thefe five hundred Years paft has fuffer'd the leaft Alteration.

In the Cuftody of the Sovereign, there is a Lift of the moft worthy and valuable Trees, together with Certificates of their Learning from the Karatti, and of their Life and Morals from their Neighbours. Hence the Republick are never in Want of proper Per= fons to fill the vacant Offices. It is particularly worth remarking, that no one has a Right or Freedom to live in any City or Village without a Certificate from the Place they came from, and Security for their future Behaviour.

A Law once enacted by publick Authority, all future canvaffing and criticifing upon it is prohibited upon Pain of Death. So that in their Politicks, their Liberty feems to be more reftrained than in their Religion. The Reafon they affign is this: "If any "s one err in Matters of Faith and Specula" tion, at his own Peril he errs; but if " any one call in Queftion the eftablifh'd " Laws, or endeavour to pervert the Senfe " of them by fome new Glofs or Inter"s pretation, he is an Enemy to Society." Something has already been faid of the State and Oeconomy of the Court. It has been obferv'd, that the Kadoki, or High Chancellor, is the Supreme Officer. Next to him is the Smirian, or High Treafurer. This Poft was in my Time difcharg'd by a Widow of feven Branches, call'd Rabagna, who for her eminent Integrity and other great Endowments, was advanced to an Office of that Weight and Truft. Long had the prefided at the Head of the Treafury, cven many Years before the Death of her Husband, who, tho' extremely well vers'd in the State of the Finances, yet was entirely ruled by the Counfels and Authority of his Wife, and never ventur'd to at upon E 5 bis his own Judgment; hence he was more her Official or Deputy than her Husband. The Edicts and Ordinances indeed were iffued out in his Name, as often as fhe was hindred, by Lyings-in, or any other Malady ; yet nothing was efteem'd firm and authentic till her Subfcription or Seal was affixed to it. Rabagna had two Brothers, one of which was Butler, and the other Butcher to the Court ; nor, tho' they had a. Sifter in the higheft Exaltation, did they dare to aim at any Thing greater by Reafon of the Poverty and Slendernefs of their Abilities: With fo much Equity are Preferments here diftributed.

This Lady, tho' ingag'd in the moft arduous Affairs of the Kingdom, yet at the fame Time fuckled an Infant the was deliver'd of foon after the Death of her Hufband. This I thought was too troublefome and too mean an Employment for fo great a Matron. And upon my giving my Opinion, they reply'd in this Manner: "Can " you imagine that Nature has given Breafts " to Women only as a fofter Ornament, " and not rather" for the Nourifiment of " their Offspring? The Quality of the " Milk, and the Temper of the Nurfe, go " farther than we imagine, in forming the " Dippofition of the Infant. And Mothers " who difdain to nourifh their own Iffue, " diffolve one of the fineft and ftrongett "Ties of Nature." And hence there is hardly hardly a Lady throughout all there Dominions but fuckles her own Children.

World Under-Ground.

The Heir apparent of the Crown was a Youth of fix Years old, in whom 'twas. eafy to difcover the Seeds of many great and fhining Virtues. Nature had been fo liberal, as to adorn him with fix Pair of Branches ; an uncommon Circumftance in that tender Age. His Preceptor, the wifeft Tree in all the Empire, inftructed him in the Knowledge of the Creator, in Hiftory, in Mathematicks and moral Philofophy. I obtain'd a Sight of that Moral Syftem or Political Compendium, which he compos'd for the Ufe of his Pupil. The Title of it was, Mabalda Libab belil, which in the Subterranean Language fignifies a Key to Government. It confifts of a Collection of Precepts and Maxims, the moft folid and advantageous; fome of which I yet perfectly remember, and fhall here fet them down.

1. Afperfions or Encomiums are not haffily to be credited; but the Judgment is to be fufpended, till an indubitable Knowledge can be procur'd.
2. When any one is accus'd and convic:ed of a Crime, it fhould be examin'd what Good the Delinquent has ever done ; thus his gnod Actions being compar'd with his bad, let Realon interpofe and pronounce Sentence.
3. Thofe Counfellors who are given to Contradiction and Conteft, the Sovereign may fafely confide in as the heartieft Subjects ; for no one will expofe themfelves to Danger, but thofe to whom the Welfare of their Country is dearer than their private Safety.
4. Let none but large eftated Men compofe the Senate. Their Advantage is united with the Publick Advantage : Whereas thofe who poffers but a moveable Eftate, look upon the Kingdom not as their Country, but as an Inn, and themfelves as Travellers.
5. The Prince may make ufe of the Miniftry or Agency of bad Men, if they fhould happen to be fit for a particular Bulinefs, but never load them with uncommon Favours; for if a wicked or an obnoxious Man be receiv'd into Kavour, the worft of Subjects will rife under his Patronage, and work themfelves into Office.
6. Let him moft of all fufpect thofe, who perpetually haunt the Court: Such either have committed, or are prepar'd to commit the moft daring Things.
7. Let him be very backward to reward thofe who are moft impatient of Honours. For as no one begs an Alms till opprefs'd with Poverty and Hianger, fo none infatiably haunt after Dignities, but who defpair to rife by real Merit and Virtue.
8. The eighth Precept is indeed a very ufeful one, but what I could not be pleas'd with with upon Account of the odious Example with which it was illuftrated. The Precept is this: No Subject is to be confider'd as altogether ufelefs; none are fo dull but may be made fubfervient to fome good Purpofe, nay even may be made to excel in fome Point. For Inftance, one excels in Judgment, another in Ingenuity ; one's Excellence fhall be in the Mind, another's in the Body; this fhall make a good Judge, that a better Advocate. One thall have a vaft Power of Invention, another fhall labour at the Execution of a Thing; infomuch, that there are few entirely unprofitable. That fome Creatures indeed feem fo, is not the Fault of the Creator, but of thofe who will not perceive or enquire where their chief Strength lies; and follow that Clue. This Pofition he thusilluftrated. We have feen, fays he, in this our Age, one of the Superterranean Animals, who, by the unanimous Suffrage of all was deem'd as an unprofitable Load upon the Earth, by reafon of that Quicknefs and Forwardnefs of his Judgment ; but yet we fee his great Swiftnefs of Foot is of no fmall Service to us. Upon reading this Paragraph, I could not help faying, This is a very bonef Preface, but a fcandalous Conclufion.
9. It is of no mall Importance to a Prince who would know the Arts if governing, to be very nice and cautious in the Choice of a Preceptor to the Heir of his Dominions. Let him therefore chufe one of remarkable Piety,

A Journey to the

Piety, and eminent Learning, fince from the Inflitution of the future Succeffor, the Welfare of the State muft be determin'd. What we learn in the tender Age of Life, paffes into Nature. Hence it is neceffary, that the young Prince's Tutor fhould be a Lover of his Country, that he may inftil into his Prince a Love for his Subjects, the firft and principal Mark that all his Precepts fhould be aire'd at.
10. 'Tis neceffary the Prince fhould fudy the Genius of his Government, and conform to it ; and if he would correct the Diforders of his Subjects, let him do it rather from his own Example than the Laws.

- Velvcius $\mathfrak{~ c i t i u s ~ n o s ~}$

Corrumpunt vitiorum exempla domefica, magnis
Cum fubeant animos autoribus.
Ir. Let none be fuffer'd to be idle, fince fuch are a dead Weight upon their Country. By conftant Induftry and Toil, the Republick rifes into Strength and Power; nor is there any Room left for pernicious Counfels and Contrivances againft the State. And therefore it is fafer for the State to allow the Subjects their infignificant Diverfions, than to indulge them in a Lazineis's, which would be a Source: of Confpiracies.
12. Let the Prince preferve Peace among his Subjects; however, it would not be amifs to encourage an Emulation among his Counfellors, as it leads to the Difcovery of Truth. A fkilful Judge will often extract the Truth from the Paffions of the Advocates.
13. He would act wifely, if in Affairs of the laft Moment he heard the Sentiments of every Member of the Senate, and that, rather apart than when conven'd. For in a full Senate, where Opinions are openly given, it often falls out that the moft fluent Speaker bears all before him with a Torrent of Eloquence, and fo the Sovereign hears but one Opinion.
14. Punifhments are not lefs neceffary than Rewards: The firft puts a Stop to Evil, as the latter encourages Good. Hence it may not be wrong even to reward a bad Subject for a good Action, if it were only, that others may thereby be whetted up and incited to do their Duty vigoroully.
15. In Promotions to Honours and publick Pofts, let Regard be had principally to the Perfon's Dexterity and Adroitnefs for that particular Employment. Though Piety and Integrity are of themfelves moft commendable Virtues, yet 'tis poffible we may be deceiv'd by their Appearance. Every one would affect a Sanctity of Behaviour, if he knew that this Shew of Virtue was the Road to Honours; and would in Words profefs the utmoft Probity and Uprightnefs, with the fame View. Befides, it is no eafy Matter to form a Judgment of a Perfon's Virtues, till he is admitted to Employment, in which, as upon a Stage, he is to exhibit Specimens of his Virtues. But nothing is eafier than to make Experiment of any one's Aptnefs for Bufinefs before-hand. It is infinitely harder for the Stupid and the Ignorant to conceal their Stupidity and Ignorance, than for a Hypocrite to cover his Impiety, or a Knave his Roguery. Befides, great Abilities and much Virtue are not fo very oppofite but they may be often found united in the fame Character. And if a Perfon of large Abilities be at the fame Time honeft and virtuous, nothing more can be wanting. An Ignorant is either good or bad; if bad, who knows what Monfters Ignorance and Wickednefs in Conjunction produce? If good, his very Dulnefs nuft indubitably hinder the Exercife of his Virtues. And if he of himfelf neither can nor dare attempt the Commiffion of fome atrocious Crime, yet the Servant, whofe Affiftance he muft make ufe of, in all Likelihood may. A foolifh Landlord has commonly a roguifh Bailiff, and a dull Juftice a knavifh Clerk, who fearlefly commits Frauds and Errors under the Protection of his Mafter. In Promotions therefore, let Dexterity be the principal Thing regarded.
16. Let none be haftily cenfur'd as ambitivus, for aiming at an Employment he is in Reality unfit for, or for that Reafon excluded from all Hopes of Preferment. For if, in the Diffribution of publick Honours, the Prince fhould happen to adhere to this Rule too clofely, the moft Ambitious will foon put on the Mark of Humility, as a fafer Road and a fhorter Cut to Preferment. And thus the Sovereign would, contrary to his Inclination, prefer the moft forward W orfhippers of Fortune, as being to all Appearance the moft humble; that is, he would prefer thofe, who about the 'Time of any Vacancy pretend to fly from Court and retire into the Shade, giving out by their Friends that they are averfe to Grandeur: To illuftrate this Point, he inferted an Example of one who, during the Vacancy of a confiderable Employment he was all on Fire to obtain, wrote to the Prince to this Effect, viz. "That it was reported, that " his Serene Highnefs defign'd the vacant " Dignity for him, tho' follicited for it by " Numbers; that he for his Part muft beg "Leave to decline an Office to which he " profefs'd himfelf unequal; that he in" treated his Majefty to confer it upon " fome more proper Perfon, and that be" ing perfectly contented with his prefent "Station, he afpir'd to nothing greater." The Monarch mov'd with fo ftrong an Atteftation of Humility, preferr'd this humble Hypocrite to the faid Dignity. But he foon Jearnt that he was abus'd; for no Miniffer ever behav'd with fuch Pride, or acted with fuch Weaknefs.

World Under-Ground.

17. To fet a poor Infolvent at the Head of the Treafury, is the fame Thing as to put a hungry Man in your Pantry. Nor is a covetous rich Man a better Choice. The former has nothing, and the other thinks nothing enough.
18. Let there be no Foundations or Eftablifhments for the Maintenance of flothful Trees. According!y, throughout this Empire, the Monafteries and Colleges admit only the Induftrious and the Diligent ; thofe who either by fome ufeful Manufacture help to advance the Intereft of the Republick, or who by their Studies and Learning can be an Ornament to the Society they are Members of. A few Monafteries indeed are to be excepted, which maintain the Aged and the Helplefs; fuch by the Privilege of Age being exempted from all Labour.
19. When the Diforders of the State call loud for Reformation, it will be right to proceed flowly in it. For to endeavour to extirpate inveterate Evils at a Blow is as abfurd as to prefcribe Purging, Bleeding, and Vomiting all at orice to a Patient.
20. Thofe who boldly attempt every Thing, and undertake a Multitude of Affairs together, are either Fools who have not duly compar'd their own Strength with the Weight of the Things, or elfe they are wicked and unnatural Members of their Society, Socicty, who confult their own "Intereft alone, inftead of that of the Commonwealth.: A prudent Man will try his Arms before he takes his Burden up; and an honeft Subject, who loves his Country, will not tranfact the Affairs of it fuperficially.

C H A P. VIII.

Of the Academy.

IN this Empire there are three great Schools or Univerfities, one at Potu, another at Keba, and a third at Nabami. The Studies purfued there are Hiftory, OEconomy, Mathematicks, and Law. As to their Divinity, fince it is fo fhort and concife, as that the Whole is contain'd in the Compaifs of a couple of Pages, importing, That we ought to love and adore Almighty God, the Creator and Governor of Things, who in fome State of Exiftence hereafter will reward Virtue and punifh Vice; as this, I fay, is the Main of their Divinity, fo it is no academical Study, nor indeed can it be, fince it is prohibited by Law to have any Controverfy about the Effence or Attributes of God. Phyfick, in like Manner, is not reckon'd aniong the Studies of the Univerfity; for fince thefe Trees live all fober Lives, internal Difeafes are almof wholly unknown. I fay nothing of Metaphyficks; and fuch tranfeen-

92

 A Journey to thetranfcendental Learning, fince it has been obferv'd above, that to difpute about the Effence of the Divine Being, about the Qualities of Angels; or the Nature of Spirits, incurr'd the Punifhment of the Arm, and Confinement in their Bedlam.

The academical Exercifes are thefe: The young Students, during the Time of their Probation, are oblig'd to give Solutions of certain difficult and curious Queftions, which are propos'd at ftated Times, with a Reward to thofe who give the moft ingenious and elegant Expofitions. By thefe Means, the true Genius of the Students is difcover'd, what the utmoft Reach of their $\mathrm{Ca}-$ pacity is, and in what Branch of Knowledge they are moft likely to fhine. Every one imploys himielf in one only Science. An univerfal Scholar is a Chimæra; and the Affectation of fuch a Character is a Mark of a loofe and unfettled Genius. Hence it is, that the Sciences, confin'd within fuch narrow Bounds, are foon brought to Perfection. The feveral Doctors likewife exhibit yearly Specimens of their Learning. 'The moral Philofopher clears fome abftrufe fpeculative Point. The Hiftorian compiles a Hiftory, or fome Part of Hiftory. The Mathematician throws frefh Light upon his Science by fome new and ingenious Hypothefis. The Lawyers are oblig'd to make fome eloquent Harangues: And thefe alone ftudy Rhetoric or Oratory, becaufe it is to there alone fuch a Study will be advantageous when they come to be $\Lambda$ drocates. When I told them, that all our academical Specimens of all Sorts!'were in the labour'd and oratorical Style, they freely condemn'd fuch an Inftitution, replying, that if every Artifan were oblig'd to make a Shoe, and exhibit Specimens of fuch their Work, 'tis certain that Shoemakers alone would bear away the Prize., I purpofely omitted to fpeak of our fcholaftic Difputations, becaufe fuch Exercifes were, there but in equal Eftimation with drama-: tical Performances. Their Doctors and publick Teachers never deliver their InftruCtions in a harfh, pedantick, and imperious Manner, as the Philofophers of our World, but forming fome agreeable and de-, lightful Fiction, they drefs up and inculcate a falutary 'Truth with all the Charms of Fancy and Imagination.

World Under-Ground.

'Tis furprizing to behold with what Solemnity the academical Promotions are made. For they take the extremeft Care not to furnifh the leaft Matter for Ridicule, or to be guilty of any theatrical Levities, rightly judging that a plain and grave Simplicity thould diftinguifh the Exercifes of an Univerfity from the Diverfions of a Stage, left otherwife the liberal Arts fhould run into Difefteem. Upon this, I would not venture to mention the leaft Syllable of our academical Degrees and Promotions, fince what happen'd to me at Keba, when I gave a Defcription of this Kind of Honours, was ample Reafon for my eternal Silence upon this Head.

94 A Journey to the

Befides thefe Academies, the great Cities have their feveral Seminaries or Colleges, where the niceft Examination is made into the Talents of every Scholar, what his particular Capacity is, and in what Kind of Learning he gives the moft promifing Hopes of excelling. During the Time of my Probation in the Seminary at Keba, there were four Sons of the High Prieft who were all educated in the Art of War; four others of Senatorian Quality were inftructed in Trade; and two young Virgins learnt Navigation. For here the Genius alone is regarded, without any Refpect to Sex or Condition. The Examination being made, the Governors of the Seminaries give Teftimonials to the Examinants with a Veracity I have elfewhere fpoke of. Thefe Teftimonials are perfectly juft and impartial; tho' I myfelf thought otherwife, fince thà which I obtain'd from them appear'd to me abfurd, ridiculous and unjuft.
None is here fuffer'd to be an Author till after thirty Years of Age, and till he fhall be deem'd by his Judges ripe and fit for fuch an Undertaking; confequently, few Books are here publifh'd; but then they are well digefted, and full of Meaning. Hence, tho' I had wrote five or fix Differtations while under Age, I never difcöver' it to any Creature for fear of drawing down their Ridicule: Enough has now been faid ${ }^{2}$ of the Religion, Policy, and Literature of this People. But there are, befides, feveral Things peculiar to them, which are word thy of our Obfervation and Remembrance. ${ }^{2}$

If one Tree challenges another, the Challenger is for ever forbid the Ufe of Arms. He is condemn'd, like a Minor, to live under Guardianfhip, as not knowing how to rule his Affections. With us the Cafe is different, where Appeals to the Sword are Marks of an heroic Soul, efpecially in the North, which muft have given Birth to this abominable Cuftom, fince Challenges and Duels were entirely unknown among, the Greeks, Romans, and other ancienter Nations.

I obferv'd one ftrange Cuftom in their Manner of adminiftring Juftice. The Names of the contefting Parties are conceal'd from the Judges; and the Differences are not decided in the Place where they arofe, but the Cafe is fent to the more remote Provinces to be determin'd. The Reafon of this frange Cuftom is this. Experience taught them, that Judges were often corrupted by Prefents, or fway'd by Partiality. Thefe Temptations they think they effectually remove, if the Parties are conceal'd, if the Names of the Plaintiff and Defendant, together with the Names of the Lands or Eftates litigated, be all unknown. The Reafons and Arguments alone are fent, at the Difcretion of the Prince, to whatever Court of Juftice he thinks fit, with certain Marks and Characters; for Example, "Whether A who is in "Poffeflon, ought to reftore the Thing poffefs'd "s at the Suit and Motion of B.". I hould rejoice to find fuch a Cuftom introduc'd among us, fince we often experience the fatal Force of Corruption and Partiality in the Minds of our Judges.

Juftice in general is freely adminifter'd without Refpect of Perfons. Againft the Prince only no Action can lie during his Life, but upon his Death the publick Accufers, or (if one may fo call them) the Coun-. cil for the Kingdom, cite him to Judgment. There in full Senate the Actions of the departed Monarch are ftrictly examin'd, and at length Sentence is pronoun'd, which according to the Merit of the Deceas'd is diftinguifh'd by different Words and Characters, fuch as thefe, Laudably; Not illoudably; Well ; Not ill; Tolerably; Indifferently; which Words are proclaim'd aloud to the People, and afterwards engrav'd on the Monument of the Deceas'd. The Potuans give this Account of that Cuftom: That the Prince while living cannot be proceeded againft without great Commotions and Difturbances ; for that during his Life a perfect Obedience and inviolable Veneration fhould ftill be paid him, which indeed is the very Bafis of Government. But when that Obligation is diffolv'd by Death, the Subjects then have Liberty to call his Actions to a ftrict Account. 'Thus by this falutary, tho' very paradoxical Law, the Security of the Sovereign is provided for, his Authority not at all invaded, and the Welfare of the Pcople at the fame Time promoted. For thefe Characters, tho' given to the Dead, are to the Living fo many Spurs to Virtuc. The Potuan Hiftories for four hundred Years afford only two Inftances of Princes who bore the laft mention'd Character, that is, that of Indifferent. All the others obtain'd either the Laudable or the Not illaudable Character, as appears from the Inferiptions upors their fepulchral Monuments, which have efcap'd the Injuries of Timc. The Character of Indifferent, which in the Potuan Language is call'd Rip-fac-fi, caufes fuch Grief in the Royal Family, that the Succeffor of the deceas'd Prince, with all his Kindred, mourn for fix whole Months. And fo far are the Hcirs from refenting the odious Character given by the Judges, that it becomes a new Incentive to them to fignalize themfelves' by noble and worthy Actions, and to efface the Infamy of the Family by a Conduct full of Virtue, Prudence, Juftice and Moderation.

The Caufe why one of the two Princes above-mention'd had the Title of Indifferent given him, was this: 'The Potuans are a brave and warlike People; they never declare War themfelves, but if War be declar'd againft them they pufh it with all innaginable Vigour. By theie Means they are the Unpires between contending Na F tions, tions, and the feveral Kingdoms of this Globe fubmit to their mild and pacific Sway. But a Prince, by Name Mikleta, fciz'd with the Ambition of extending his Dominions, made War upon a neighbouring Kingdom, and fubdued it. But as much as the victorious Potuans gain'd by the Conqueft, fo much they loft of their ancient Renown ; the Love of the bordering Nations was now chang'd into Dread and Jealoufy; and that high Idea of their Juftice, by which the State grew into Reputation, was now vanifh'd. The Potuans finding this, to regain the loft Affections of their angry Neighbours, branded the Memory of the deceas'd Prince with this Mark of Infamy. What the Crime of the other indifferent Prince was, is not altogether fo clear.

Their publick Doctors or Teachers are fuch as have attain'd to the third Age. To explain this it muft be obferv'd, that here Life is divided into three Ages. The firft is that in which they are inftructed in publick Affairs. In the fecond they publickly purfue and exercife what they have learnt. And in the third, being honourably difmifs'd from their Employments, they then take upon them the Inftruction of the Juniors. Hence, none have a Right to teach in publick but fuch as are grown old in the Adminiffration of publick Affairs, fince none are fo capable of laying down folid Rules

Rules as thofe who have drawn their Knowledge from long Experience.

If any one already infamous for the Immorality of his Life fhould however give wholefome Advice to the State, the Name of the Perfon is fupprefs'd, left it fhould lofe its Effect from the Character of its Author, and the Decree purfuant to fuch Advice is fhelter'd under the Name of fome more honourable Perfon. Thus the good Opinion is known, and the bad Author conceal'd.

I was inform'd, that with refpect to Religion, it was prohibited to difpute about the prime Articles of Faith, particularly about the Eflence and Attributes of the Deity. But as to all other Points, it is free for every one to propofe their Opinions and engage in Controverfies. For, fay they, the Inconveniences which arife from fuch Contentions may be compar'd to Storms, which indeed throw down Houfes, but at the fame Time cleanfe the Air, and prevent that Putrefaction which would arife from a ftagnant Atmofphere. The Reafon of their having few Holidays, is, left a Spirit of Idlenefs fhould creep upon them ; for the Potuans believe that good Pcople as duly worhip God when employ'd in ufeful Labours, as they do by Vows and Prayers.

The Study of Poetry meets with but cold Encouragement; yet they are not altogether deftitute of Poets. But the fubterranean Poetry differs from Profe only in the

$$
\mathrm{F}_{2} \quad \text { Subli- }
$$

Sublimity of Style ; and they receiv'd what I told them concerning our Rhime and Meafure with the utmoft Derifion.

Among the Potuan Doctors fome are call'd Profeffors of Tafte. It is their Province to fee that the Minds of the Youth are not employ'd in renfelefs Controverfies and Things of no Ufe; to take Care that no trivial and vulgar Writings get abroad to poifon and debauch the Tafte; and to fupprefs or blot out from every Book whatever is writ in Defiance of common Senfe. And to this End alone certain Perfons are appointed to revife and cenfure Books; far otherwife than it is in our World, where the Licenfers of Books fhall fupprefs the very beft, only perhaps becaufe they deviate fomething from the reigning Opinions, from the receiv'd Manner of Expreffion, or becaufe they lafh the Vices of the Age with too ftrong a Sincerity, and too fine a Vivacity. By this Means, great Geniufes are in a Manner fuffocated and ftifled, and Writings of a good Stamp are for ever buried. But yet, as the Potuans have a free Commerce with the Neighbour Nations, among other Commodities, fome Books of a poor and trivial Turn will creep abroad. Upon which Account Cenfors are appointed by the State, who from Time to Time vifit the Bookfellers Shops. Thefe are call'd Syla-Macati, that is, Purgers of Bookfellers Shops. For as among us there is a certain Sort of Men, who brufh and cleanfe our Chimnies once a Year, fo thofe Cenfors, who pry and examine into the Books that are put to Sale, cleanfe away all the Dregs, that is, fuch Books, or Parts of Books, as would deprave the Tafte, and convey them to the Jaques. Blefs me! faid I to myfelf, What Havock would be made among our Books, if fuch an Inftitution were to take Place among us!

Chimnies

But what cannot be enough commended, is the Care they take in founding the Genius of their Youth, in order to know what Courle of Life they will be fittef for. For as in Mufick a judicious Ear diffinguinhes every little Sound; in the fame Manner thefe piercing Judges of the Virtues and Vices of the Mind, form their Sentiments from fome feemingly inconfiderable Hints, from perhaps a Caft of the Eye, from a Frown, from Dejcction, Mirth, Laughter, Speech, and even Silence. 'Tis by there Things they eafily know every one's Propenfity, and alfo what is contrary to his Conftitution.

But to return to what concerns myfelf. I pafs'd my Time, it may be well imagin'd, not in the mof agreeable Manner with thefe paradoxical Trees, who treated me with Difdain upon Account of that too forward and unfettled Judgment which they imputed to me. I çrew impatient under thofe Scoffs they were ever flinging out; for they even went fo far, as to give me the Nick-name of Skabba, which in their Language fignifies over-bafty. But what chagrin'd me moft, was that my very Laundrefs, tho' of the Dregs of the Populace, and one of the moft miferable and indigent Trees herfelf, did not even fcruple to call ae by that Name of Reproach.

C H A P. IX.

The Autbor's Fourney round the Planet Nazar.

HAVIN G continued in the unpleafing Enployment of King's Meffenger for two whole Years, and carry'd the Royal Mandates and Letters Patents to every Province of the Empire, I at laft grew tir'd of fo troublefome and fo unvorthy an Office. Accordingly I again and again petition'd his Serene Highnefs to grant me an honourable Difmiffion, and at the fame Time follicited a more reputable Employment. But I met with notbing but Repulfes from his Highnefs, whofe conftunt Reply was, that a more important Office was above my Strength and Capacity. He alledg'd alfo, that the Laws and Cuftoms of the Country were Death to my Hopes, in that they admitted only fit and proper Perfons to the moft eminent and arduous Pofts of Government ; that therefore I muft make a Vistue of Neceflity, and reft myfelf contented, till I had: done done fomething to merit better Fortune. He concluded his Advice in Terms like thofe of the Poet, Metiri fe quenque fuo modulo ac pede fas eft. Ecoelo magnum defcendit Nofce teipfum, Figendum ac memori tractandum pectore.

Thefe repeated Refufals were enough to throw me upon the moft daring and defperate Defigns. From that Day forward my Invention was upon the Rack to produce fomething, that fhould demonftrate the Excellence of my Genius, and wipe away my prefent Infamy. Accordingly, for a whole Year I ftudy'd the Laws and Cuftoms of the Country with an invincible Application, refolv'd to difcover, whether there were in them any Defects that requir'd a Reformation. I open'd my Defign to a certain Bufh, with whom I had contracted a clofe Intimacy, and with whom I us'd to converfe very freely upon all Subjects, whether grave or gay. He thought my Defign not altogether abfurd, but extremely queftion'd, whether it would be of any Service to the State. He added, that it fhould be the Care of a Reformer, to be a thorough Mafter of the Nature and Genius of the Country he intends to reform ; becaufe the fame Thing might, in different Countries, produce different Effects, as the fame Medicine may be good for fome Bodies, and pernicious to others. He likewife inform'd me of the Danger I expos'd myfelf to in this $\mathrm{F}_{4}$ Experi-

Experiment, that no lefs than my Life depended on it, which muft be a Forfeit to the State, thould my Project have the Misfortune to be condemn'd by the Judges. He therefore ardently intreated me to beftow a little more Reflexion on this Affair ; tho' he did not plainly diffuade me from my Attempt, fince he thought it not impoffible, that a Sagacity, like mine, might at length difcover fomething ufeful, as well to myfelf, as to the State. I took the Advice of my Friend, and for a Time laid afide my Scheme, and with a laudable Patience continued to difcharge my Duty, by vifiting the various Cities and Provinces of the Kingdom after the ufual Manner. Thefe repeated Expeditions furnifh'd me with an Opportunity of making Enquiries into the State of the Kingdom, as well as that of the bordering Nations; and left what I had obferv'd in my Travels fhould efcape my Memory, I penn'd it all down, and making a little Volume of it, humbly prefented it to the Prince. How much his Serene Highnefs was taken with this Work appear'd afterward, by his doing me the Honour to commend my Labours in full Senate; and having again attentively perus'd my Book, he was pleas'd to make ufe of my Services in a farther Difcovery of the whole Planet Nazar. I expected a different Recompence for my Labours, but was forc'd to fay with the Yoet,

- Virtus laudatur Eo alget.

But fince I was fond of Novelty, and had Hopes that fo bountiful a Prince would never leave me unrewarded after my Return, 1 fet about the Work with a good Degree of Pleafure.

The whole Globe of the Planet Nazar, altho' fcarce fix hundred Miles in Circumference, yet to the Inhabitants appears of an immenfe Extent, by Reafon of the Slownefs of their Motion. And hence to this Day a great many Countries, and particularly the more remote ones, are utterly unknown to the Natives. A Potuan would hardly be able to travel over this Globe on foot in two Years. But what embarrafs'd me moft, was the Fear I had that a Variety of Languages would put me to great Difficulties. But I was foon undeceiv'd, and reviv'd to hear, that the Inhabitants of the whole Planet, tho' wonderfully different in their Manners, yet all fpoke the fame Tongue; and befides this, that the whole Race of Trees were in the main harmlefs, fociable, and beneficent lieings, fo that I might, without the leaft Danger, make the Tour of the whole Globe. This redoubled my Ardour, and in the Month of Poplars 1 began my Journey.

What follows is fo marvellous, that it looks more like a poctic. Fiction, or the Chimæras of ungovern'd Fancy, than Reality and Truth; efpecially fince thofe Varieries, both of Body Mind, which in this

$$
\text { F } 5 \quad \text { Journey: }
$$

1ó $A$ Journey to the Journey I met with, are fuch as one would: never expect to find between the mof diftant Nations. It mult be obferv'd, that many Kingdoms here are feparated from each other by Seas and Straits, not unlike the Archipelago in Europe. Thefe Straits are feldom crofs'd ; but for the Benefit of Travellers, there are certain Ferrymen that keep their Stations on the Banks in Readinefs to tranfport the Paffengers. It is very rare, that the Natives ever venture beyond the Limits of their own Country ; and if compell's, by Neceffity, to make a Voyage, they foon return, as if impatient of a foreign Soil. Hence, as many Nations as there are, you fee fo many new Worlds in a Manner. The principal Caufe of this valt Difiimilitude, is the different Nature of the Lands, as appears from the various Colours on the Surface, and from the furprizing Difference between the Plants, Herbs, and Fruits ; it is the lefs Wonder, therefore, if with that Diverfity of the Soil, and the Products of it, there fhould alfo be found a no lefs furprizing Variety of Inhabitants, and even oppoifte Natures and Tempers. In our World, indeed, even Nations the moft remote, differ very little from each other in Genius, Manners, Learning, Shape and Colour. For fince the Nature of the Earth is almoft every where the fame, except that one Part is more fruitful than another, and fince the Nature of our Plants, Herbs, and Water, is nearly the fame every where, where, hence nothing heterogeneous or uncommon is produc'd, as in this fubterranean Planet, where every. Tract of Land has its own peculiar Property. Strangers are allow'd to trade and travel, but not to fettle out of their own Country; nor, indeed, could fuch a Liberty be well granted, confidering the great Diverfity and Oppofition of Na tures between each other. Hence all Foreigners that you meet with, are either Merchants or Travellers. The Countries which border upon the Potuan Dominions, are nearly of the fame Nature with them. Their Inhabitants were formerly often at War with the Potuans; but at this Day they are either in Alliance with them, or having been fubdued, they now reft contented in their Subjection to fo mild a Power. But if you once crofs the great Sea, which divides their whole Globe, new Scenes prefent themfelves, together with new and Atrange Creatures unknown to the Potuans. One only Thing they have in common, and that is, that all the Creatures of this Globe are rational Trees, and all ufe the fame Dialect. This makes Travelling very pleafant, efpecially as the Merchants and Foreigners, perpetually paffing thro' every Province, give People an Opportunity of feeing Creatures extreamly ftrange and unlike themelves. Thus much I thought proper to premife, left tender Ears fhould be offended with the fubfequent Narration, and the Author reproach'd with Want of Veracity.

It would be a tirefome and an unprofitable Tak, to recount every Thing fingly, and in exact hiftorical Order, that I met with in my Travels. Let it fuffice, that I give an Account of thofe particular People only, whofe Character, Defcription, and Manners have fomething fo unufual and marvellous in them, that upon their Account this Planct of Nazar may be reckon'd one of the principal Prodigies of the Univerfe. I muft here call to Mind an Obfervation I have before made, that this whole Race and Country of rational Trees differ very little in Senfe and Judgment from the Potuans; but in their Rites and Cuftoms, in their Make and Temper, there is fo much Diverfity, that every Province you would fwear to be a new Worid.

In the Province of Quamfo, which is the firlt beyond the Sea, the Inhabitants are fubject to no Infirmities or Difeafes of Body, but each enjoys a perfect Health from Youth to lateft Age. I could not help thinking them the moft happy of Mortals. But upon a flight Acquaintance with them, I found myfelf infinitely miftaken. For as, upon one Hand, I faw nobody fad or forrowful; fo upon the other, I faw nobody pleas'd and joyful. For as we never highly relifh the Serenity of the Heavens, and the Weather, unlefs we have been fenfible of the Hardfhips of a different Temperature of the Air ; fo thefe Trees tafte no Felicity, becaufe it is perpetual and uninterrupted, and never know the Pleafure of Health, for want of knowing the Mifery of Difeafes. Their Life is one cternal Indolence. Their Enjoyments are never exquifite, and thofe alone can tafte the Sweets of Life, who have their Pleafures feafon'd with a little Pain. I proteft, that I never found, in any Country upon the Face of the Earth, fuch lifelefs Creatures, or fuch cold and infipid Converfations. The People are harmlefs, but deferve neither your Love or Hatred. You fear no Affront, and you cxpect no Favour. In a Word, here is nothing either to pleafe or difpleafe. Befides, as that continual Health never brings the Image of Death before their Eyes, nor ever moves their Concern towards the Afficted and Difeafed, fo they pafs their Days in dull Security, and never know the generous Warmths of Pity and Compaffion; nor do the leaft Footfteps of Love, or any fuch tender Affection appear there. In Truth, Difeafes remind us of our Mortality, excite us to die well, and keep the Soul as it were equipt for its Journey to that World from whence none return ; and as they afflict us with Pain, fo they infpire a Sympathy towards others when afflicted. This leads one eafily to difcern how much Difeafes, and the Danger of dying, contribute to Charity, Love, and all the focial Affections, and that thofe People unjuftly complain of

ilo A Journey to the

their Creator for appointing thefe Aflictions, which are fo full of real Advantage. It muft be obferv'd, that thefe Trees, as often as they remove into other Places, are expos'd to the fame Evils and Cafualties of Life that others are. This is a Proof to me, that they are indebted to the Climate for this peculiar Advantage, if indeed it can be call'd an Advantage.

The Province of Lalac, furnam'd Mafcatta, or the Blef, feems to correfpond with its Name; for there the Earth produces all Things fpontaneoufly.
Flumina jam lactis, jam flumina Nectaris ibant, Flavaque de viridi fillabant ilice mella:
Ipfa quoque immunis, raftroque intacta, nee ullis
Saucia vomeribus, per fe dabat omnia tellus.
But this extraordinary Circumftance does not render the Natives one Jot happier. For as there is no Need of Labour to procure their daily Suftenance, they fpend their Days in Softnefs, Sloth, and Luxury, and fo lay the Foundation of innumerable Difeafes, and untimely Deaths. The Nature of this Country affords ample Matter for our ferious Reflexion; in particular it appears, from the Condition of the People, that Hußandmen, Servants and Labourers, are far happier than thofe, who, free from the Fatigue of providing for themfelves, are devoted to Idleneis and Pleafure.

World Under-Ground.

> Nempe inamaref cunt epulca fine fine petite;, Illuffique pedes vitiofum forre recuf(ont Corpus.

Hence follows a Train of vicious Actions, defperate Refolutions, and violent Deaths, which are here obferv'd to be very common. For the perpetual Afluence in which they live, in Length of Time quite wears away all Tafte and Senfe of Pleafure, and almort infallibly introduces a downright Loathing of Life. Thus this Region, which appear'd at firft like the Abodes of the Bleft, was in Reality the Seat of Sorrow, and more an Object of my Compaffion than my Envy.
Hoc celerare fugam, terrâque cxccedere jufit.
The next Province is that of Mardak; they are Cyprefes, all of the fame Form and Height, and differ only from each other by the different Make of their Ejes. Some have long Eyes, fome fquare Eyes; fome have fmall ones, others have Eyes fo large as to take up the whole Space of the Forehead. Some are born with two, others with three, and fome with four Eyes. There are alfo thofe who have only one Eje ; and thefe might be reputed the Offspring of $P_{0}$ lyphemus, but that their one Eye is feated in the hinder Part of the Head. And hence, according to the different Shape of their Eyes, they are divided into fo many Tribes, the Names of which are as follows :
I. Nagiri,

112 A JOURNEY to the

1. Nagiri, or thofe who have long Eyes, and to whom confequently every Object appears long.
2. Naquiri, thofe who have fquare Eyes.
3. Talampi, the fmall Eyes.
4. Faraku, thofe who have two Eycs, one of which is more oblique than the other.
5. Mebanki, three Eyes.
6. Tarrafuki, four Eyes.
7. Harramba, thofe whofe Eyes occupy the Space of the whole Forehead.
8. Skadolki, thefe who have only one Eye in the hinder Part of the Head.

The moft numerous, and of courfe the moft powerful Tribe, is that of the Nagivi, or thofe who have long Eyes, and to whom confequently all Objects appear long. From this Tribe are taken the Senators, the Priefts, and all fuch as bear Office in the State. Thefe fit at the Helm, nor do they adimit any one from another Tribe to a Poft in the Government, unlefs he fhall firft confefs, and confirm his Confeffion with an Oath, that a certain Tablet, dedicated to the Sun, and plac'd in the moft confpicuous Part of the Temple, appears to him to be long. This facred Tablet of the Sun is the principal Object of the Mardakanian Worfhip. Hence the honefter Part of the Citizens, who ftart at Perjury, are excluded from all publick Honours, and what is worfe, are expos'd to a thoufand Sneers, Railleries, and even Perfecutions; and tho' they they over and over proteft, that they cannot dibelieve their Eyes, they are ftill complain'd of, and what is only a Fault of Na ture, is imputed to their Obftinacy and Malice.

The Form of the Oath, which all, who are admitted to publick Employments and Honours, are forc'd to fubfcribe to, is this,

Kaka manafca quibompu miriac facku mefimbrii Cafioni Crukíia Manafcar quebrias Krufundora.

That is, I A. B. do fwear, that the facred Tablet of the Sun appears to me to be long, and I promife that I wiil perfift in this Opinion to my laft Breath.

After this Oath, they are declar'd fit for the Service of the State, and are incorporated into the Tribe of the Nagiri.

The Day after my Arrival, as I was fauntring in the Market-Place, I beheld an old Man, whom they were hurrying away to be fcourg'd. A large Croud of Cyprefles follow'd him, with Scoffs and Revilings. Upon my inquiring the Caufe, I was inform'd, that he was a Heretick, who openly taught, that the Tablet of the Sun feem'd to him to be fquare; and in that diabolical Opinion he had obftinately perfifed, after repeated Admonitions.

This rous'd my Curiofity to go to the Temple, and try whether I had orthodox Eyes or no. I examin'd the aforefaid Tablet with all the Eyes I had, and really it appear'd fquare to me. This I ingenuoufly told my Hoft, who at that Time had the Poft of Rdile. With that he fetch'd a deep Sigh, and confefs'd to me, that it appeap'd fquare to him too, but that he dare not fay fo publickly, for fear of being difpoffers'd of his Employment by the governing Tribe.

$114 A$ Journey to the

All pale and trembling I left this execrable City, fearing left my Back muft expiate the Crime of my Eyes, or left branded with the Title of Heretick, I fhould be fent with Ignominy out of their Dominions. In Truth, no Inflitution ever ap-' pear'd more horrid, barbarous, and unjuft, than this, where Hypocrifies and Perjuries alone are the Avenues to Preferment. And when I return'd to the Potuans, I took every Opportunity to exprefs my Indignation againit that deteftable Race of People. But while I was in one of my angry Moods, and venting my Spleen according to Cuftom, a certain Juniper Tree, with whom I had liv'd in a good Degree of Intimacy, made me this Anfwer: "It is true, fays " he, that the Conduct of the Nagiii will " always appear abfurd and iniquitous to " the Potuans; but to you it fhould not " feem at all ftrange, that this Diverfity of "Eyes fhould caufe fuch Cruelties, becaufe " you have formerly affur'd me, that in " moft of the European Dominions there " are governing Tribes, which fall upon " the reft with Fire and Sword, upon Ac${ }^{66}$ count of fome Defect, not of their Eyes " indeed, " indeed, but of their Reafon; and you " yourfelf extoll'd fuch a Procceding as a "pious Act, and of Advantage to the Go"vernment." I prefently underfood the Drift of this Obfervation, and blufht for Shame. I left him foon, and was ever after a ftanch Advocate for Toleration, and entertain'd milder Sentiments of People under Error.

Kimal, the next Principality, is accounted the moft potent, by reafon of its immenle Wealth. For befides the Silver Mines; which are there in great Abundance, vaft Quantities of Gold are gather'd from among the Sands of their Rivers. Their Seas too afford the moft coftly Pearls. And yet upon a due Examination of this Country, I could difcover, that Happinefs did not confift in Wealth alone. For as many Inhabitants, fo many Divers and Diggers there were, who, bent upon Gain, feem'd condemn'd to perpetual Slavery, and fuch a Slavery as one would think was fit only for Criminals. Thofe who are rich enough to be exempted from the fe Toils, are oblig'd to keep conftant Watch. The whole Country is fo infefted with Thieves and Robbers, that it is not fafe to go without a Guard.

Non tam fefta dies, ut ceflet prodeve furem, Perfidiam, fraudes, atq; omni ex crimine lucrum. Vivitur ex rapto; non bofpes al bofpite tutus, Non focer a gencro, fratrum quoque gratia rara cfl.

Filius.

116 $A$ Journey to the
Filius ante diem patrios inquirit in annos; Vicła jacet pietas, ©゚ virgo cade madentes Ulitima coleffum terras Affraa reliquit.

Hence this Nation, beheld with envious Eyes by their Neighbours, drew Pity from me more than Envy. Fear, Jealoufy, Sufpicion, and Diftruft, reign in every Mind, and each looks upon his Neighbour as a defigning Enemy. So that endlefs Solicitude, watting Cares, and pallid Complexions, are the Fruits of the boalted Felicity of this Province. It was not without Anxiety I travell'd over this Region; for in every Road, and upon every Frontier, I was oblig'd to give an Account of my Bufinefs, Name, and Country, to the Guards and Examiners, and I found myfelf expos'd to all thofe Vexations which Travellers experience in Countries that are jealous of Strangers. There is a Volcano, or burning Mountain, in this Province, from whence afcend perpetual Whirlwinds of Fire.

After having run over this Principality, and that with more Trouble than I experienc'd throughout my whole Journey, I purfued my Courfe full Eaft. I every where found the Inhabitants fociable and wellbehav'd, but extremely paradoxical. The Natives of the little Kingdom of Quamboia furpriz'd me moft. There the Order of Nature is inverted. The more the Natives advance in Years, the more wanton and voluptuous they grow; and Age produces fuch fuch fantaftic Vices, and fuch lafcivious Freaks, as Youth alone, in every other Place, is guilty of. Here none are intrufted with the Cares of State, unlefs they are under forty Years of Age. When they exceed this Term, they are too giddy for Bufinefs, like Children, Quos dura promit cufcdia matrum.

I faw here the Aged frifking and gamboling in the Streets like Boys, and fpending their Time in puerile Diverfions. They did, as the Poct fays, Edificare cafas, ploftello adjunsere mures, Ludere par impar, equitare in arundine longa. While on the other Hand the Youths took the Liberty to reprove them, and fometimes drive them home before them with a Whip. I faw an old decrepit Male Tree whipping a Top in the Market-Place, and was inform'd he was fome Years ago a Perfon of very great Confequence, no lefs than Prefident of the Grand Council. This inverted Order obtain'd alfo in the weaker Sex. Hence, when a certain Youth was to be marry'd to an old Lady, all were of Opinion he muft undergo the Fate of AEtcon; which is diametrically oppofite to what happens among us, where if an old Man has a Mind for a young Bride, he has ample Reafon to fear an Injury of that Sort. Once I remember I met two old Bald-Heads engag'd in a Duel. Amaz'd to find fuch Vi-

118 Journey to the

gour at fuch an Age, I enquir'd the Caufe of this Duel, and was told, that the Quarrel arofe about a Miftrefs they had met with at one of their Haunts, and who had equally pleas'd them both. They who told me this, added, that if the Governors of thefe two old Sinners were to know of their Difference, their Backs would be fure to fmart for it. The fame Evening a Report flew about, that a certain venerable Matron had hang'd herfelf for Defpair, becaufe fhe had met with a Repulfe from a young Beech fhe was enamour'd of.

This inverted Order of Nature demands of courfe an Inverfion of the Laws. Hence, in that Chapter of the Law which treats of Guardianfhip, it is enacted, That the Adminiftration of Goods fhall not be granted to any one, unlefs he be under forty Years of Age. Moreover, Contracts are deem'd ineffectual, if enter'd into by Perfons above Forty, unlefs fuch Contracts are fign'd by their Tutors or Children. In the Chapter concerningSubordination, there is this Injunction, Let the Aged of both Sexes be obedient to their Cbildren. Every Perfon in Office is always difmifs'd before he arrives to the Age of Forty.
-Interdicto buic omne adimat jus
Pretor, $\Xi^{\circ}$ ad juvenes abeat tutela propinquos.
I did not think it convenient to continue longer in this Place, where if I had happen'd pen'd to have ftay'd but ten Years, I muft have been oblig'd by Law to become a Child again.

In the Province of Cocklecu there is a very perverfe Cuftom, and fuch as would be highly condemn'd among us. The Order of Things is indeed inverted, but the Fault is not owing to Nature, but folely to the Laws. The Natives are all Funipers of both Sexes: But the Males alone perform the Drudgery of the Kitchen, and every fuch ignoble Labour. In Time of War indeed, they ferve their Country, but rarely rife above the Rank of common Soldiers. Some few get to be Enfigns, which is the very higheft military Honour the Males ever arrive to. The Females, on the other Hand, are in Poffeffion of all Honours and Employments facred, civil, or military. I had lately derided the Potuans for obferving no Difference of Sex in the Diftribution of publick Offices: But that was nothing to the Phrenzy of this Peopie. I could not conceive the Meaning of fo much Indolence in the Males, who, tho' of far fuperior Strength of Body, could yet fo tamely fubmit to fuch a Yoke, and for Ages together digeft fuch an Ignominy. For it would have been very eafy, at any Time, to have freed themfelves from fo hameful a Tyranny. But long and ancient Cuftom had fo blinded them, that none ever thought of attempting to remove fuch a Difgrace, but quietly believ'd it was Nature's Appointment, ment, that the Government hould be lodg'd in Female Hands, and that it was the Bufinefs of the other Sex to finin, to weave, to clean the Houre, and upon Occafion take a Beating from their Wives. The Arguments, by which the Ladies juftify'd this Cuftom, were thefe: That as Nature had furnifh'd the Males with greater' Strength of Body, her Intention in that could only be to deftine them to the more laborious and fervile Dutics of Life. Strangers are amaz'd, when going into a Houfe they fee the Miftrefs of the Family in the Compting-Houfe, with a Pen in her Hand, and her Books before her, and at the fame Time find her Hubband in the Kitchen fcouring the Difhes. And, indeed, whatever Houfe I went to, if I enquir'd for the Mafter of the Family, I was ftill conducted into the Kitchin.

Hic lavet argentum, vafa afpera tergeat alter; Vox domina fremit inflantis virgamque tenentis.

Horrible were the Effects of this unnatural Cuftom. For as in other Countries there are abandon'd Women, who proflitute themfelves for Hire, fo here the young Men fell their Favours, and to that End hire fome Houfe of Pleafure, which fhall be eafily known, either by a Writing over it, or fome other infallible Sign. And when the Men drive this wicked Trade with too great Effrontery, and in too barefac'd a Manner, they are had to Prifon, and whipt like our Street-Walkers. On the other Hand,

Hand, the Matrons and Virgins here, without the leaft Reproach, can prowl up and down, gaze at the young Fellows, nod, whiftle, tip the Wink, pluck them by the Sleeve, importune them, write Love-Verfes upon their Doors, boaft of their Conquefts, and reckon up their Gallantries with as much Satisfaction as the fine Gentlemen of our World entertain you with their Amours. Moreover, it is no Crime for the Ladies here to make amorous Poems, and fend Prefents to the Youths; who, on the contrary, counterfeit Coynefs and Modefty, as knowing it indecent to furrender to a Lady upon the firft Summons. There was at the Time I was there, a mighty Difturbance about a noble Youth, the Son of a Senator, who had been ravifh'd by a young Woman. I heard, that it was whifper'd among the Friends of the injur'd Youth, that a Suit would be commenc'd againft the Ravifher, and that at the next Confiftory Court fhe would be fentence'd to repair the Difhonour by Marriage, fince it could be indubitably prov'd, that he was a Perfon of an innocent Life and Converfation. During my Stay here, I had not the Courage openly to condemn this deprav'd Cuftom: But upon my leaving the City, I told feveral, that thefe Junipers acted in downright Contradicłtion to Nature, fince from the univerfal Voice and Confent of Nations it was evilent, that the Males alone were form'd for all the arduous and important Aftairs of Life. To this they reply'd, that I confounded Cuftom with Nature, fince the Weaknefs we impute to the Female Sex is deriv'd folely from Education. This is clear, from the Form of Government eftablifh'd at Cockleci, where in that Sex you find all the Virtues, and large Endowments of Mind, which the mafculine Sex, in other Places, arrogate to themfelves. For the Cocklecuanian Women are grave, prudent, conftant, and fecret. The Men, on the contrary, are light, empty, frothy Creatures. Hence, when any Thing abfurd is related, the common Saying is, That's a manly Trifte. Again, when any Thing is done rafhly and unthinkingly, the Proverb is, We muft make Allowances for manly Weaknefs. Notwithfanding this, I could not acquiefce in thefe Arguments, being thoroughly convinc'd of the Impropricty and Deformity of this Cuftom. The Indignation I conceiv'd againft fo much Female Pride and Infolence, gave Birth to an unfortunate Defign, which I put in Execution foon after my Travels, as in its proper Place fhall be related.

122 A Journey to the

Among the fumptuous Edifices of this City, the moft admirable was the Royal Seraglio, the Refidence of three hundred Youths of exquifite Beauty. They were all maintain'd at the Expence of the Queen, and kept for her private Pleafures. As I happen'd to hear, that my Perfon was much commended, I was afraid of being clapp'd up in the Seraglio, and hurry'd away with all imaginable Hate.

——Pedibus metus addidit alas.

From this Place I proceeded to the Philofophical Region, fo ftyl'd from the Inhabitans, who are continually bury'd in the profound Speculations of Philofophy. I was all on Fire to fee this Country, which I fancy'd mut be the Center of Sciences, and the true Seat of the Mules. Inftead of vulgar Fields and Meadows, I expected to find one continued lovely Garden; and in this Imagination I haften'd my Pace, and counted the Hours and Minutes as they flew. However, the Ways thro' which I pafs'd were very flong, with every now and then a Ditch or Cavern, infomuch that Cometimes I was forced to go thro' a Length of craggy Way, and fometimes thro' miry Bugs, where for want of Bridges, I was oblig'd to wade thro', and drag my weary Limbs after me, quite dirty'd to the Wait: Yet I fortify'd myself againft there Accidents, with all the confoling Arguments I could think of. While for a full Hour I had been labouring under there Difficulties, I met a Peafant, of whom I inquir'd how far I had to Mafiattia, or the Pbilofopbica? Province. He reply'd, $I$ ought rather to af e bim, bow mutt there was left of the Journey, fine I was in the very Heart of the Place. Amazed at this Anlwer, How is it possible. fid I, that a Land inhabited only by Pbilofo-

$$
\text { G } 2 \text { phones }
$$

Q24 A Journey to the pibers fiould appear ratber like the Haunts of favage Beafls, than like a cultivated Country? He return'd, That in a little Time Things zuould have a better Face, as poon as cuer the Natives could get Time to think upon fuch Trifles. At this prefent, fays he, we are all folely intent upon an extraordinary Difcovery, no lefs than that of a Pafage to the Sun; that therefore it was very excufable to leave the Soil to itJelf, it being impolible to do two Things at once. I prefently underftood the Drift of this cunning Countryman's Difcourfe ; and purfuing my Journey, I at laft arriv'd at the Metropolitan City Caska. In and about the Gates, inftead of Cuards and Centinels, I faw only a few tame Fowl, and upon the Walls Heaps of Birds-Nefts and Cobwebs. Philofophers and Swine indifferently walk'd the Streets, nor was the one diftinguifh'd from the other but by Shape, being otherwife perfectly alike in Dirt and Nattinefs. The Philofophers had all Cloaks of the fame Form, but what the Colour was, I could not difcern for the Duft upon them. There was one quite bury'd in Thought coming directly towards me; and meeting him, Pray, Sir, fays I, what may be the Name of ibis City? At this he paus'd, and for a ? ime continued as immoveable as if he had no Life in him ; at laft, fays he, turning his Eyes upwards, 'Tis almoft Noon. An Anfwer fo foreign to the Purpofe, was a Demonftration of great Abfence of Mind, and and convinc'd me, that it was better to ftudy faringly, than to run mad with too much Learning. I proceeded directly to the Center of the City, to fee, if befide Philofophers, 1 could have the good Luck to meet with a reafonable Creature. The Forum of the City, which was very fpacious, was adorn'd with Statues and Columns. I was endeavouring to read the Infeription upon one of them, and being thus employ'd, fuddenly I felt my Back grow warm and moift. Turning my Head, to fee from whence this warm Shower proceeded, I faw a Philofopher making Water againft me. For being bury'd in profound Thought, he had taken me for one of the Statues there, that are us'd for Neceflities of this Kind. Stung to the Soul with fuch an Affront, efpecially as the Philofopher, inftead of apologizing for the Miftake, only laugh'd in my Face, I gave him a fmart Box on the Ear. Enrag'd at this, he fell upon me, feiz'd me by the Hair, and dragg'd me round the Forum. But when I found there was no Profpect of appeafing his Wrath, I endeavour'd to make Reprifals upon him with all my Might and Vigour; and I believe, with Regard to our Blows, the Receipts and Difburfements might be pretty equal on both Sides. At length, after a long Conteft, we both fell upon the Ground. At this Spectacle, a Croud of Philofophers flock'd from all Parts, and with inexpreffible Fury fell upon me with their Fifts and Sticks, and then once more dragg'd me by the Hair all round the Market; infomuch that I was juft upon the Point of giving up the Ghoft. At laft, rather tir'd than fatiated, they left off beating me, and brought me to a fpacious Houfe, where when I ftruggled againft the Door with both my Feet, and vow'd I would not enter, Meffieurs the Philofophers threw a Rope round my Neck, and tugging me in, like an Ox at a Slaughter-Houfe, they fell'd me flat upon the Floor. The Houfe, and all Things in it, were in the utmoft Confufion, and not unlike the Diforder People are in at Lady-Day or Michaclmas, when they are moving Houfe. I then humbly intreated there wife Men to put an End to their Refentment, and fuffer themfelves to be mov'd to Pity and Compaffion, reprefenting to them how little for the Honour of Philofophy it was to abandon themfelves to a blind Rage, and give a Loofe to thofe very Paffions they are the forwardeft to declaim againft. But I preach'd to the Winds. For that very Philofopher, who had fo plentifully water'd my Back, forthwith renew'd the Fight, and redoubled his Blows upon me, like a Smith upon an Anvil, as if nothing but my Death could ftop his Fury. This plainly taught me, that no Anger equals a philofophical Anger; and that they who can talk fo well upon the Beauty of Virtue, care to practife it as little as any.

$$
-N_{e r}
$$

- Nec enim minor ira rebullit Pectore in hoc, leviorve exurit flamma medullas.

At length there came in four Philofophers, the Form of whofe Robes fpoke them of a fingular Order. They prefently appeas'd the Uproar, and feem'd to commiferate my Fate; and after they had conferr'd apart, they remov'd me to another Houfe. Glad was I, that I had efcap'd thefe Barbarians, and at laft fallen into honeft Hands. They enquir'd the Caufe of all this Tumult, and I told them every Tittle. They fmil'd at fo pleafant an Accident, telling me, that it was a common Thing for the Philofophers to make Water againft the Statues, and that probably my Antagonift, wholly abforb'd in Meditation, had miftook me for a Statue. They inform'd me likewife, that that Perfon was an Aftronomer of great Eminence, and that my other Perfecutors were Profeffors of Moral Philofophy. I could now hear all this with Pleafure, believing my felf intirely out of Danger. Yet one Thing alarm'd me mightily, and that was the great Attention with which they furvey'd my Form. Befides, their reiterated Queftions concerning my Manner of Life, my Country, and the Caufe of my Journey, together with the Whifpers that enfued, gave me a violent Jealoufy. But, good God! what Horror invaded my Soul, when they conducted me into an AnatomyG 4 Chamber,

128  A Journey to the Chamber, where there was a frightful Heap of Bones and Carcafes upon the Floor, that gave a Stench enough to poifon me. I thought I was fallen into a Den of Thieves and Murderers ; but the anatomical Inftruments which hung upon the Walls took away that Fear, and convinc'd me, that my Hoft muft be a Phyfician, or a Surgeon, Half an Hour was I left alone in this Place, when a Matron enters with my Dinner. She feem'd very humane, and eying me attentively, fhe would every now and then fetch a deep Sigh. Upon my enquiring the Caufe of her Grief, fhe reply'd, that my impending Fate drew thofe Sighs from her ; That I was indecd fullen into very bone? Ilands, for my Ifusbiand, continues fhe, is Lord of this Jfund, beint publick Pbyyician of the City, and Profefor of Medicinc; and the others you faru nie bis Collegues: Bat afoMibled at the extriordinary Moke of your Body, thay buave determin'd to c:annine the inzuard Macbinery of it, and to make a Difjection of you, in crider to add fome nere Light to Anatomy. This Account threw me into a moft violent Palpitation, and fetting up a horrible Cry, Ob! bow! Madam, faid I, can you call them honeft Men, who make no Scruple to rip up the Bowels of an innocent Perfon? To which the anfwered, I Say again you are fallen into the Hands of boneft Men, who will do nothing with a bad Defign, and have refolv'd upon this Operation for the fole Illuffration of the Science of Anatomy. Alas! faid I, I bad rather fall into the Hands of Thieves and Murderers, from whom I might polfibly make my Efcape, than be diffected by fuch very boneft Gentlemon; and immediately throwing myfelf at her Feet, fhedding at the fame Time a Flood of Tears, I implor'd her to intercede for my Life. She told me, her Interceffion would avail very little againft the Refolution of the Faculty, which was irrevocable; but however, that the would deliver me from Death by fome other Means. With thefe Words, the took me by the Hand, and leading me thro' a back Door, brought me as far as to the Gate of the City. Being now ready to take my Leave of my Preferver, I endeavour'd to exprefs my Gratitude in the beft Language I was Mafter of; but the prefently interrupted me, and telling me fhe would not leave me till fhe faw me out of all Danger, fhe continued to accompany me. As we walk'd together, we enter'd into various Converfations concerning the State of the Country, and I heard her with the utmoft Avidity. But at length fhe made a Digreffion to a Circumftance not very agreeable to my Ears, and I conjectur'd, that for her Services, fhe requir'd some Things of me which were morally impoffible. For the told me with the greateft Concern, that in this Country the Fate of marry'd Ladies was extremely hard, for that their philofophick Hußhands, immers'd in Learning, neglceted conjugal Duties.

130

For my Part, I protef, fays the, with an Oath, zue hould all be very wuretched, if now and then a good-natur'd, compafionate Stranger did not adminiffer Comfort to us in cur Misfortunes, and occafionally apply a $R e-$ mody to them. I pretended not to underftand this Harangue, and mended my Pace. But this Coldneff ferv'd only to enflame her. Whereupon, Confumptis precibus, violentam tranfit ad iram, Intendenfque manus, pafis furibunda capillis, fhe reproach'd me with Ingratitude. I neverthelefs continued my Pace, till at laft fhe laid Hands upon my Cloaths, and endeavour'd to fop me. With that I forcibly farted from her, and having vafly the Advantage of her in Swiftrefs, I quickly got out of her Sight. One may judge of the Extremity of the Rage fhe was in, by the Words I could hear her pronounce, namely, Kaki Spalaki, that is, ungrateful Dog. I digefted this Affront with a Spartan Noblenefs of Mind, and was glad at my Heart, that I could any Way efcape from this Land of Philofophers, the bare Remembrance of which fills me with Horror.

The next Province I arriv'd at, was that of Nakir; the Capital of which is a fine, large City of the fame Name. I cannot fay much of this Place, becaufe I pafs'd with the utmoft Hafte thro' the Countries :adjoining to that I lately left, and long'd to be among People lefs philofophically, and crpe-efpecially lefs anatomically given. For fuch a Terror had feiz'd me, that I could not help afking every one I met, whether he were a Philofopher; and even in my Dreams, the Carcafes and Inftruments of Diffection ftill fwam before me. The Natives of Nakir were very courteous; for every one I met offer'd me his Service unafk'd, with long Atteftations of his Honour and Honefty. I thought this very ridiculous, fince I fufpected none of them, nor call'd their Integrity in Queftion. I exprefs'd my Wonder at there Compliments, and obferv'd, that I could not conceive to what Purpofe they were made; at which they only renew'd their Proteftations of Service with a thoufand Oaths. Leaving this Place, I overtook a Traveller bending beneath the Weight of his Burden. Seeing me, he ftopt, and enquir'd whence I came. When I told him I had pals'd thro' the Province of Nakir, he congratulated me upon my Efcape, affuring me, that the Inhabitants were a People famous for their Skill in Tricking, and hardly a Traveller pafs'd, but was their Prey. I anfwer'd, If their Actions at all correfponded with their Words, they muft be Pcople of the greateft Honour, of which every one boafted extremely, and affur'd me of it with a Multitude of Execrations. The Stranger fmiliig at thefe Words, Take Care, fays he, of thofe who trumpet thair coun Virtues, and ifpecially of thofe who readily find themjelves to the Devil to convince your. That Piece of Advice I bury'd deep in my Mind, and I have fince experienc'd that my Advifer had Reafon.

I now arriv'd at a Lake, the Waters of which were of a yellowifh Colour. On the Bank there was a Veffel of three Ranks of Oars, in which Paffengers, for a fmall Confideration, were ferry'd over into the Land of Reafon. Having agreed for my Paffage, I went aboard, and with the highcft Pleafure imaginable began my Voyage, inafmuch as I prefently obferv'd, that thefe fubterranean Veffels are impell'd by fecret Springs and Machines, which cleave the Waters with an aftonifhing Rapidity, and all without the Agency of Rowers. Being landed on the other Side of the Lake, I hir'd one of the Guides, which ply in the feveral Ports, and under his Conduct I travell'd on. In the mean Time my Guide told me every Thing that related to the Government of the City, and the Manners of the Pcople. I underftood from him, that they were all Logicians to a Man, and that this City was the true Seat of Reafon, from whence it had its Name. And upon my Arrival, I found all he had told me was true. Every Citizen from his great Penctration, and the Compofednefs of his Manners, had the Appearance of a Judge. I could not forbear lifting my Hands to Heaven, and crying out, Oh! infinitely happy Country, where every Member is a Cato.

Cato. But when I had more accurately examin'd the Condition of the City, I obferv'd that Bufinefs went but dully on, and that the Republick in a Manner languifh'd for want of Fools. For as their good Senfe weighs every Thing in the jufteft Balance, and as not a Soul can be cajol'd by fpecious Promifes and ftudied Words, it foliows, that all thofe prudent Means and Methods, by which the Minds of Subjects are excited to the beft and nobleft Actions, and that too at the cheapeft and eafieft Rate, muft here lofe all their Efficacy. In fhort, the bad Effects of fuch an exact Knowledge of Things were explain'd to me, and pathetically lamented by the Super-Intendant of the Treafury. "One Tree, fays he, is " here diftinguifh'd from another by no"thing elfe but his Name, and the Make " of his Body. No Emulation among the "Subjects, fince Marks of Diftinction are " thought not worth acquiring, and nobody "' is wife, becaufe every body is fo. Folly, "I confefs, is a Defect, but to have it " wholly banifh'd, may not be fo defirable.
" Let every State, indeed, have a com" petent Number of wife Men for the " publick Employments. Some muft go" vern, and fome muft fubmit to be go" vern'd. What other States effect by the " moft trifling Inducements, our Magi" ftrates can procure only by folid Re" wards, which often drain the Treafury. "Wife Men require the Kernel if they

134 A Journey to the

" ferve their Country, but Fools are put off " with the Shell. Thus, for Inftance, the " Diftribution of Honours and Titles, with " which Fools are taken as with a Hook,
" and fpirited up to the moft hazardous
" Enterprizes, can be of little Force
" among a People, who know that folid
" Fame and Honour is to be acquir'd only
" by inward Worth and Virtue. A Peo" ple of this Stamp are not to be deceiv'd " with fpecious Sounds. Your Soldiers, I
"s think I have heard you fay, are anima-
"6 ted to undergo the utmof Severities,
"from the Hope of an immortal Name in " Hiftory. This is what our Pcople can" not conceive. They think, that this " Mode of Seech, for Inftance, Dying " IN EARNEST, AND LIVING IN A " History, is the verieft Jargon in the " World, and that it is mere Dotage to " proclaim aloud the Praifes of one, who " cannot hear nor underftand them. I "pafs over numberlefs Inconveniences, "which flow only from our exquifite "Knouledge, and which prove to De"s monftration, that at leaft half the Mem" bers of every civil Eftablifhment ought " to be Fools. Folly is to Society, what "Fermentation is to the Stomach; too " much, or none at all, are alike injurious." I heard all this with the greateft Amazement. But when in the Name of the Senate he offer'd me the Freedom of the City, and repeated his Intreaties, that I would.
would fix my Abode here, I could not forbear blufhing, from a Sufpicion that his Requeft proceeded from a pre-conceiv'd Opinion of my Foolifhnefs, and that he took me for fuch a Sort of Ferment as might be of Ufe to a State labouring under the Miffortune of too much Wirdom. I was confirm'd in this Sufpicion, when I heard the Senate had decreed to fend a Colony abroad, and in their Places to take in an equal Number of Fools from the neighbouring Nations. And fo with a Sort of Refentment, I left this Race of Reafoners. Yet for a long Time I could not help reflecting upon that fubterranean Axiom of theirs, unknown to the Politicians of our World, namely, That in a well-confituted Society, it is neciffary that at leaft balf the Members fould be Fools. I wonder'd fo falutary a Maxim fhould remain undifcover'd by the worthy Spirits of our Age. But poffibly it might be known to fome, who were however unwillieg to have it inferted in the Clafs of political Truths, fince with us there are great Plenty of Fools, nor is there (Envy apart!) a Village or City with us, but what is handfomely for'd with this groodly Ferment.

Having refted forme Time, I renew'd my Travels, and vifited feveral Countries, which I pats cver in Silence, as having nothing remarkable in them. I fuppos'd I had now feen all the marvellous Things in the Plaret Nazor. But arriving at the Province of Cabar,

I36 A Journey to the Cabac, frefh Wonders offer themfelves, and even fuch as exceed the Bounds of Credibility. Among the Natives of this Region, fome are born without Heads. They fpeak by a Mouth plac'd in the Middle of the Breaft. Upon Account of this great Defect in Nature, they are exempted from all fuch difficult Employments as require the leaft Headpiece. The only Pofts they are admitted to, are chiefly thofe about the Court. Thus the Chamberlain, the Mafter of the Ceremonies, the Prefident of the Seraglio, and the like, are all taken from the Clafs of Pcople that are without Heads. Neverthe$l=f$ fome that have no Heads are, by the fpecial Indulgence of the Government, receiv'd into the Senate for forme Merit of their Anceftors, and that without much Detriment to the Republick. For Experience tells us, that the whole Authority of the Senate is lodg'd in the Hands of a few leading Members, and that the reft only help to fill up the Number, and to affent and fubfcribe to the Refolutions of others. And in my Time, there were in the Senate two that were born without Heads, who neverthelefs enjoy'd the fenatorial Stipends. For tho' they. were deftitute of Senfe, by reafon of that Defeet of Nature, yet furely they might give their Vote with others; happier in one Thing than their Collegues, namely, that nobody was angry with thofe who had no Heads, but vented all their Rage againft the others. And hence it is evident, that it is fafer fometimes to be born without a Head. This City may vie with any in Magnificence and Splendour. It has a Court, an Univerfity, and feveral noble Temples.

Cambara and Spelek are the two next Provinces. The Natives are all Limes. But in this they differ, that the former feldom live beyond the Age of four Years, whereas the others feldom fall fhort of four hundred. Here you might fee Fathers, Grandfathers, Great Grandfathers, and fo on; they would tell you old Stories and Adventures of their own that happen'd Ages ago, and by their lively Reprefentations make you think you was almoft prefent at them. As much as I pity'd the firf, I envy'd the laft. But after I had more inly examin'd the State of both, I found my Error. In Cambara every one, within a few Months after their Nativity, arriv'd to their full Maturity of Body and Mind. One Year was enough to form and perfect them; in the reft they prepar'd for Death. Not Plato's felf could have imagin'd a more charming Republick; here all the Virtues flourifh'd to Perfection. Being hourly convinc'd of the Shortnefs of Life, they are always ready for Death, and regard this Life only as a Paffage to a better. We may imagine every one of them a Philofopher, who with a happy Indifference to his prefent State, aimis only at fecuring that folid and durable Pleafure, which is the Reward of Virtue and Piety. In a Word, this feem'd to be the Abode of Angels, the King-

138 A Journey to the Kingdom of Saints, and the truelt School of Wifdom and Virtue. Hence one may judge how unjuft their Murmurs are, who complain of the Brevity of Life, making it the Foundation of a Quarrel at their Maker. Our Life is fhort, becaufe we lofe the greatef Part in Slo:h and Pleafure ; it would be long enough if our Time were better employ'd. But in the other Region, where Life is lengthen'd to four hundred Years, I difcover'd all the Vices under Heaven. 'The prefent State of Things they look upon as eternal and immortal.
Hinc fugere pudor, verumque, fidefque Eo boneftum:
In quorum fubiere locum dolus infodicque.
There was alfo another Inconvenience refulting from long Life. Thofe who had unhappily loff their Eftate or Fortunes, thofe who were maim'd in their Limbs, or were fallen into incurable Difeafes, made the moft piercing Complaints, and knowing no End to their Miferies, often laid violent Hands on themfelves. The Shortnefs of Life, therefore, is to the Wretched the beft of Remedies. Both thefe Countries afforded me Matter of much Admiration, and upon my Departure fill'd me with very philofophical Reflexions.

I purfued my Journey thro' certain defert and rocky Places, which lead to Spalank, or the Country of Innocence. This Place is fo call'd from the Innocence and peaceful Humour of the Natives. Thefe are all Beeches, and efteem'd the happieft of the whole Creation. They are fubject to no Paffions and Affections, and confequently free from all Vices.
Sponte fua, fine lege, fidem rectumque colebant; Peena metufque aberant, धoc.
Upon my Arrival, I found all I had heard was true, and that actually they were govern'd not by Laws, but by their own innate Virtue and Difpofition. Envy, Anger, Hatred, Pride, Vain-Glory, Difcord, and all which among Mankind bears the Name of Vice, is here profcrib'd and banifh'd. But with the Vices there were alfo many Things wanting, which adorn the human Species, and feem to diftinguifh them from Brutes. Except Divinity, Natural Philofophy and Aftronomy, all the Arts and Sciences were wholly unknown. They had not the leaft Idea of Law, Politicks, Hiftory, Ethicks, and Eloquence, the very Names of which were never heard of. As there was not the leaft Spark of-Envy, fo there was no Emulation to excite and animate the Soul to worthy Deeds. There were no fplendid Edifices, no Palace, no Senate-Houfe, no Forum, no Magiftrate, no Riches, and confequently no Defire of them, or Contention about them. In two Words, if they had no Vices, they had no Politenefs, Art, or Elegance ; nor any of thofe Things, which, tho' in Reality

140  A Journey to the no Virtues, are yet extremely like Virtues, and render Men civiliz'd and focial. To fay the Truth, I feem'd here to be rather in a Foreft of real Trees, than in a rational Society. I ftood a long Time in doubt what Judgment to form of thefe People, and whether fuch a State were in Reality defirable. At length reflecting, that an uncultivated Creature was however better than a vicious Creature, and that tho' they had no Arts, they had alfo no Thefts, Murders, and other atrocious Crimes, which deftroy both Body and Soul, I could not help pronouncing them happy. Walking carelefly along one Day, while I was among them, I ftruck my left Leg againt a Stone. It fwell'd violently, and gave me excelfive Pain. An honeft Countryman feeing this Accident, prefently ran to me, and with a certain Herb he held in his Hand and apply'd to the Wound, the Anguifh forthwith abated, and the Swelling decreas'd. Thefe Pcople, thought I, muft have extraordinary Skill in the Art of Healing. Nor was my Conjecture wrong. For fince their Studies were confin'd within fo narrow a Compafs, they were not contented with the outward Rind of Knowledge, like our modern Connoifeurs, but went to the Bottom of Things. When I thank'd my Benefactor for his Services, and told him that God would be his Reward, he anfwer'd me in fo folid, fo learned, and fo devout a Manner, tho' in Terms perfeetly fimple and rural, that

that I had really fome Apprehenfions it was an Angel in the Shape of a Tree. It appears hence, with what little Reafon we dinike that calm Philofophy of fome Men, who neither wifh nor grieve, are neither angry, nor pleas'd, who diveft themfelves of all the impetuous Paffions of the Soul, and whom we therefore accufe of leading a Life of Indolence and Softnefs. It appcars alfo how much miftaken they are, who are Advocates for the Neceffity of Vices among Men; who ftile Anger the Whetfone of Courage, Emulation the Spur of Induftry, and Diftruft the Parent of Difcretion. For who does not know, that from ill Eggs ill Birds are hatch'd, and that many Virtues which Mortals pride themfelves in, and which are celebrated in Verfe, are rather the Difgrace than Ornament of Humanity, if beheld with a philofophical Eye.

I left this Place, and arriv'd at Kiliac, where the Inhabitants are born with certain Marks imprefs'd upon their Forehead, fignifying the exact Number of Years they have to live. Thefe furely I thought muft be the moft fortunate People under the Sun, fince an unexpected Death could furprize none of them in a finful Action. But then, as their laft Day of Life was known to every one, they deferr'd their Repentance to the laft ; infomuch that if you found one among them fincerely devout and honeft, it was one whom the Marks upon his Forehead directed to think of his Quietus. Some

142 A Journey to the

I obferv'd who walk'd with their Heads hanging down; they had almont liv'd out their Time, and were counting the Remainder of their Days and Hours upon their Fingers, expecting with Horror their laft approaching Moment. This gave me to fee the general Wifdom of the Creator in concealing from Mortals the Time of their Death.

Having travell'd over this Country, I came to a Streight, the Water of which was black; and being ferry'd over, I landed upon the Province of Askarac. Here new Monfters met my Eyes. As Cabai produces Animals without a Head, fome among thefe People are born with feven Heads. To thefe, as being poffers'd of an amazing Knowledge, the Citizens formerly paid almoft divine Honours ; and out of their Tribes alone, Commanders, Confuls, Senators, and other great Officers were elected. But, alas! as many Heads as they had, fo many different Geniufes they had. They confidently and readily undertook to difcharge various Employments at one and the fame Time; and left nothing unattempted while they held the Reins of Power : But from that Multiplicity of Bufinefs, and from their various Ideas interfering and joftling with each other, they made wretched Work of it ; and in Procefs of Time fo great was the Confufion, that it requir'd the Labour of" an Age to recover from the Diforder thefe omnifcient Magiftrates had thrown Things into. Hence a Law was enacted, to exclude for ever thefe fevenheaded Trees from all publick Offices of Importance, and that the Government fhould hereafter be intrufted to fimple Heads, that is to fay, thofe who have only one Head. Ever fince, thofe very People, who had been rever'd as Gods, have been finking into the fame Contempt as the headlefs Inhabitants of Cabac. For as they, who had no Head at all, could do nothing ; fo thefe with many Heads did every Thing perverfely. But tho' they are for ever remov'd from all State-Trufts, yet they ferve as an Ornament to the Kingdom. They are carry'd about like publick Spectacles, to flew the World how liberal Nature has been in their Formation. Tho' to fay the Truth, had the been lefs lavifh of her Favours, the had been in Reality much kinder. Of all this Race, there were only three in my Time in Employment, to which, however, they were not admitted, till they had confented to an Amputation of fix of their Heads. After this, the confus'd Ideas they labour'd under vanih'd, and they were brought to common Senfe. Thus Men prune Trees of their fuperfluous Branches, to derive more Health and Vigour to the reft. Very few undergo this Operation, upon Account of the extreme Pain and Danger. From hence I drew this ufeful Maxim, 'That all Excefs is hurtful, and that Simplicity is truc Wirdom.

344 A Journey to the

From hence I pars'd to the Principality of Boftanki, a People, as to their outward Make, little different from the Potuans; but as to the inward, they have this Singularity, that their Heart is fituated in their Thigh; fo that it may be truly faid of them, that they carry their Heart in their Breeches. Hence, among all the Inhabitants of this Globe, thefe are accounted the mof fearful and pufillanimous. Upon my Arrival, I enter'd into an Inn near the Gate, and as the Fatigue of Travelling had made me fomething weary and fretful, I rattled my Hoft for being flow in his Attendance. But he, falling on his Knees, implor'd for Mercy, and extending his Thigh for me to feel the great Palpitation of Heart he was in, from ftorming I fell to laughing, and bid him dry his Tears, and caft away all Fear: He rofe, and in a Tranfport kif'd my Hand, and fet about Supper immediately. In a Minute or two the whole Kitchen refounded with Cries and Lamentations. I ran thither, and to my vaft Aftonifhment, there did I behold my very fearful Hoft beating and whipping his Wife and the Maids about. Seeing me, he took to his Heels, and run away. I turn'd to the weeping Family, and begg'd to know what Crime they had conmitted, to provoke fo meek a Man to fo great Rage. 'They, on the other Hand, flood mute, with their Eyes falten'd to the Ground, not daring to tell the Caufe of their Affliction. Bus upon my perfifting to enquire, and adding Threats to my Intreaty, the Miftrefs fpoke to me in this Manner: "You feem, Sir, to be a great Stranger to " the Manners of the World. The Na"tives of this Principality can't bear the " Sight of an armed Enemy, and out of "6 their own Houfes tremble at the leaft "Noife; yet they all domineer in the " Kitchen, they exert their Bravery on " " their defencelefs Family, and are only "s then valiant, when no Refiftance can be "s made. On this Account they are the "Jeft, as well as the Prey, of the neigh" bouring States. But in the bordering " Kingdom, to which we are Tributaries, " the Cafe is ctherwife. There they ne"s ver fight but againft an arm'd Enemy. "s There the Males command abroad, and "ferve at home." I admir'd the Wifdom of the Hofters, whom I look'd upon as worthy of a better Condition. And, indeed, upon a clofer Infpection into the Nature and Difpofition of People, this Matron, it muft be own'd, was extremely in the right, fince from innumerable Examples it is clear, that Hercules is not the only one who has yielded to a Diftaff, but that it is the common Fate of brave and warlike Men to fubmit, with all due Patience, to the Female Yoke : And that, on the other Hand, the verieft Cowards in all Nature, who like the Boftankians, carry their Hearts in their Breeches, are yet Herocs in the Kitchen. 'This People live under the Protection of a neighbouring Kingdom, to whom they pay Tribute for it. From hence I pafs'd by Water to Mikolac. Coming out of the Boat I mifs'd my Cloak-Bag. I prefently charg'd the BoatMan with the Theft, who ftifly deny'd it. Upon this I went and complain'd to the Magifrate, telling him, that if I had not the Liberty of bringing an Action againft the Boat-Man for Breach of Truft or Theft, I hop'd he would at leaft compel him to make fimple Reftitution. But my Adverfiry not only perfifted in denying the Fact, but threaten'd me with an Action of Slander. In a Cafe fo doubtful the Court call'd for Witneffes. But as I could bring none, I defir'd my Antagonift might purge himfelf by Oath. At this the Judge fmil'd, and fpoke as follows. " My Friend, fays " he, in this Province we are bound by no " Religion, nor have we any other Gods " befide the Laws of our Country. Ac" cufations here muft be made good by le" gal Methods, fuch as proving the Delive" ry, eftimating the Value, exhibiting Re"ceipts, and producing Witneffes. Who" ever is deftitute of thefe, not only lofes " his Caufe, but is liable to be fued for Ca " lumny. Make the Cafe plain by proper "Evidence, and what you have loft thall "s be reftor'd to you." Thus lofing my Caufe for want of Witneffes, I not only lamented my own Misfortune, but that of the Kepublick itfelf. For from hence it appear'd, appear'd, what a weak unfettled Society that muft be which depends for its Security upon human Laws alone, and how frail are all political Edifices unlefs cemented together by Religion. I faid three Days here in continual Fears. For tho' the Laws of the Country are in Reality very good, and tho' Crimes are punifh'd with the utmof Severity, yet no Safcty can be reafonably expected in a Country too atheiltical to have the leaft Senfe of religious Obligation, and where they foruple the Commifion of no Crimes, provided they can but conceal them.

346 A Journey to the

From this Land of Atheifts, I travell'd on over a fteep Mountain to the City of Bracmat, which was fituated in the Plain at the Foot of the Mountain. The Inhabitants are Junipers. The firf Perfon I met, came directly rufhing at me, and threw me backwards. I did not well underftand this, and arking the Reafon of it, the Juniper bego'd my Pardon a thoufand Times. Prefently after, another with a Staff he had in his Hand, gave me a Blow upon the Reins that almoft took away my Senfes: But in the fame Moment he made a long Harangue to me in Excufe of his Imprudence. Sufpecting, therefore, this People to be either totally blind, or very weak-fighted, I took Care to avoid every one I met. In fact, all this arofe from the exquifite Senfe of Sighe which fome are here endued with. They can clearly difeern remote Objects, which are impenetrable to vulgar Eyes; but then they do not fee what is nearer and almoft at hand. Thefe are call'd Makatti; and they devote themfelves principally to the Studies of Metaphyficks and Aftronomy. They are of very little Service in the World, by reafon of their too delicate Vifion. They make very pretty minute Pbilofophers; but in folid Matters and Things of daily Ufe, they commit innumerable Blunders. However, the Government makes fome Ufe of them, and fends them to the Mines for the Difcovery of Metals. For tho' they fee farce any Thing upon the Surface of the Earth, their Sight exerts itfelf upon any Thing beneath it. I concluded from hence, that there are fome who are blind from too great a Delicacy in the Organs of Vifion, and that they would fee better if their Eyes were worfe.

Having gain'd the Top of another very fteep and rocky Mountain, I now enter'd the Province of Mutak, the Capital of which look'd like a Grove of Willows, the Inhabitants being all of that Species. Proceeding to the Market, I there found a robuft, healthy young Man, fitting in a Place of Eafe (of which there are many round the Market-Place) and imploring the Mercy of the Senate. I enquir'd the Meaning of this, and was inform'd, that the faid Perfon was a Criminal, to whom they were going to give the fifteenth Dofe. Surpriz'd at the Anfwer, I ftep'd afide, and defir'd my Hoft to explain this Riddle. He reply'd thus:
thus: "Mof Nations punifh Crimes by " whipping, branding, hanging and the " like: But nothing of that Kind obtairs "6 in this Country. For we ftudy not fo "s much to punifh Crimes, as to mend the "Criminal. The Culprit upon the Seat is "s a wretched Author, who for his violent " Itch of Writing, which neither Law ${ }^{6}$ nor Advice could reftrain, has been con"demn'd by the Senate to the publick Pu"' nifhment. This is left to the Cenfors of "s the City, who are all Doctors of Phy" fick, and who are now going to mace6 rate and bring him low by frequent Pur" gings, till they have conquer'd and ex"tinguifh'd the Luft of Scribbling." He ended his Difcourfe with defiring me to go to the Shop of a publick Apothecary. I went with him accordingly, and to my vaft Amazement beheld Phials and Gallipots all properly arrang'd, with fuch Infcriptions as thefe: Powder of Avarice. Pills for Luft. Tincture againgt Cruelty. Lenitive of Ambition. Cortex againft Pleafure, &c. Words cannot exprelis the ftrange Confufion of Mind this odd Spectacle threw me into. But a perfect Ecftafy of Surprize enfued, when 1 obferved a Parcel of Manufcripts with thefe Titles: Sermons of Mafter Pifagus, a Morning's Perufal of zubich gives fix. Stools. Meditations of Dr. Jukes, a Specific in the Coma Vigil, or Want of Sleep, &ic. I thought the People out of their Senfes, and to examine more accurately the Virtue of their Medicines, I open'd the firft of there Books. It was fuch infipid Stuff, that at the firft Chapter I began to make Faces; and reading on, I found my Bowels rumble, and foon after had a Tenefmus. But as I knew I had no Occafion for Purging, I threw the Book down, and run away. I then obferv'd, that nothing in the whole World was without its Ufe, and that the moft pitiful Performances were ferviceable for forncthing. I found alfo, that this People were no Fools, however ablurd I at firft took them to be. My Hoft averr'd to me, that he was cur'd of lying awake from only perufing Doctor fuke's Book, the Virtue of which was fo profound and potent, that Vigilance itfelf muft fnore at it. Thefe Things occafion'd in me a tumultuous Variety of Thought. And left they fhould break in upon that Chain of philofophical Reflexions I had heretofore made, I refolv'd foon to leave the Country. And happily enough, the frange Things I foon faw in other Provinces, joftled out almoft all Thoughts of this Place. But notwithftanding, after I had finifh'd my Tour round this Globe, and was reflecting upon the Mutakian Philofophy, their Manner of curing Diforders was not altogether fo abfurd. For I am convinc'd, that in our Europe there are fome Books that would purge the moft coftive, or give Sleep to the moft wakeful. As to the Diforders of the Mind, I own I could not fubforibe to the Mutakian

150 A Journey to the

> Princi-

Principles in this Point, tho' it muft be confefs'd, there are fome Infirmities of Body, which we confound with the Diforders of the Mind; as a witty Poet of our World has obferv'd in the following Epigram.
Scxte, diu mecum morbo vexaris codem, Humores acres nos cruciare folent.
Cum mibi jit morbus circum precordia verfans, Exofus, querulus, difficilifque vocor.
At te cegrotantem plorant, miferantur amici,
In pedibus morbi vis quia tota Sedet.
Comiter excufant te, cum faltare recufas,
Inmunem clamant, namque podagra tenet. Inter convivas at me cantare negantem, Fafofum, querulum, difficilemque vocant. Cum minus ardua res tibi fit faltatio, Sexte, Quam fit cardiaco pfallere fape mibi.
I departed from Mutak, and crofing over a Lake of a yellow Hue, I arriv'd at Mikrok, and proceeding to the capital City, I found the Gate fhut. I was oblig'd to wait till the drowfy Centinel was pleas'd to open it, which was fome confiderable 'Time, it being fecur'd with a Multitude of Locks, Bolts, and Bars. Entring, I obferv'd a deep Silence reign throughout the whole City, except that my Ears were now and then afiaulted by a Noife as of People fnoring. I could not help fancying I was got into the Region of Sleep, as the Poets talk. Would to God, fays I to myfelf, that feveral of the Magiftrates, Senators, and a few other honeft Countrymen of mine, who are dear

352 A Journey to the

Lovers of Peace, had had the Luck to be horn in this bleffied City! How fweetly and quietly would they live! And yet from the Signs in the Streets, and Inferiptions on the Houses, it was evident, that Arts and Sciences were not unknown here, and that Laws were exercis'd. Led by thefe Signs, I found out an Inn. No Entrance to be had. 'The Doors were all faft. And thu' it was Noon with the re!t of the World, it Should feem it was Night to the Inhabitants of this City. At laft, after having knock'd and bounc'd a long while, I was let in. Time is here divided into twenty-three Hours; nineteen of them are facred to Sleep, the wher four to Bufinefs. Sufpecting, therefore, thefe People to be monftrouny negligent both in their publick and private Affairs, I defir'd fomething to be brought me to eat, which they had ready in the Houfe, fearing, if I had order'd any Thing to be drefs'd, the Cook fhould fall aneep while it was about. But all Things are here done in the concifeft and moft compendious Manner ; every Thing fuperfluous is omitted; and therefore this diminutive Day of theirs is long enough for all Sorts of Bufinefs. After Dinner, which was brought upon 'Table with a furprizing Expedition, my Hoft waited on me round the City. We went into a Temple, where we heard a Difcourfe, fhort indeed, with refpect to the Time, but long enough confidering its Importance. The Preacher went directly to his Subject. He us'd no Flourifhes, no Tautologies, nor faid one fuperfluous Thing. So that when I compare this Difcourfe with the long naufeous ones of Mafter Petre, the former is in Reality more copious than the latter. With the fame i3revity Proceedings in Law are difpatch'd: The Advocates fay all in few Words, and then produce their Witneffes. I remember to have feen a Copy of a Treaty of Alliance between this and a neighbouring Kingdom. It was couch'd in thefe 'Terms: Let there be perpetual Friendfhip between the Mikrekians and Splendikanians. Let the Limits of the two Kingdoms be the River Klimac, and the Top of Mount Zabor. Sign'd, &c. Thus in three Lines they exprefs, what with us would require a Volume. Hence I am per.. fuaded one may come to the Point with lefs Noife and lefs Lofs of Time, if Superfluities were to be retrench'd; as a Traveller would find his Journey half as fhort again, were he always to go directly ftrait. The Natives here are Cyprefies, and are diftinguifh'd from other Trees by Wens in their Forehead, which Wens have a ftated Increafe and Decneafe. When they increafe, a certain Humour diftils from them, which falling upon the Eyes brings on a Drowfines, and is an Indication of the approaching Night.

From hence to Makrok is one Day's Journey. Here the Inhabitants never fleer.. Entring into the City, I Atopp'd a Perfon, tho' he feem'd to be in Hafte, and begg'd

154 A Journey to the
he would be pleas'd to direct me to a giood Inn. He reply'd he was very bufy, and made the beft of his Way forward. So great was the general Hurry of this Place, that they feem'd not to walk thro' the Streets, but to run or fly, as if they were afraid of being too late. The leaft I could think was, that fome Part of the City was on Fire, or that fome other fudden and unlook'd for Difafter had frighted the Citizens out of their Senfes. At laft I caft my Eyes upon a Sign before a Houfe, which fignify'd it was an Inn. Here fome were entring, others departing, others fumbling for Hafte, infomuch that I was a Quarter of an Hour buftling in the Yard before I could gain Admittance. In a Moment I was afk'd a Multitude of impertinent Queftions. One faid, Where do you come from? Where are you going to? How long do you ftay here? Another faid, Will you dine alone, or with Company? If the latter, what Room will you dine in, the sed, the green, the white, or the black Room ? Or will you dine above Stairs, or below? with a thoufand Impertinences of this Kind. My Hoit, who was a Clerk of one of the inferior Courts of Juftice here, went away to Dinner, but foon return'd, and then gave me a long tedious Account of a Law-Suit that had been depending thefe ten Years, the Hearing of which was now coming on before the fourteenth Court. He told me, he hop'd it would be ended within within two Years, fince there were but two Courts remaining, beyond which there was no Appeal. He left me in great Aftonifhment, and convinc'd me, that this Nation was extremely bufy in doing nothing. When my Landlord was gone, I walk'd about the Houfe, and by Chance dropt upon a Library. It was large and well ftock'd, with refpect to the Number of Books, but a very indifferent one with refpect to the Contents. Among thofe Books, which to Appearance were inbeft Condition, I obferv'd the following, 1. Defcription of the Cathedral 24 Vols. 2. Relation of the Siege of Pebunc 36 Vols. 3. Of the Ufe of the Herb Slac i3 Vols. 4. Funeral Oration upon the $\}$ i Vols. My Landlord, at his Return to me, en-. tertain'd me with a Defcription of the State of the City; and from what he faid, I concluded that more Bufinefs was tranfacted by the fleepy Mikrokians, than by the waking Makrokians ; that thefe play'd with the Shell, while the other eat the Kernel. The People here too are all Cyprefles, and. a's to the outward Make of their Bodies, differ very little from the Mikrakians, excepting the Wens upon their Foreheads. They have not the faine Blood or Juice in their Bodics which other Trees of this Globe have, but inftead of Blood, they have a. thicker Juice in their Veins, which is of a. mercurial Quality and Appearance. Nay fome think it is Quickfilver itfelf, inafinuch.
$156^{\circ}$ A Journey to the
as in a Barometer it is found to have the fame Effect.

At the Diftance of about two Days Journey from hence lies the Republick of Siklok, which is divided into two Societies, in Alliance with each other, but govern'd by different and oppofite Laws. The firft is call'd Mibo, founded by Mihac, a famous Lawgiver of old, and the Lycurgus of the Subterraneans. In order to render his Republick ftronger and more lafting, he made fumptuary Laws, which forbid all Luxury on the fevereft Penalties. And accordingly this Society, for its great Continence and Parfimony', may be juftly call'd another Sparta. One Thing I wonder'd at, and that was, that in a Government fo well conftituted, and which piqu'd itfelf upon. the Excellence of its Laws, there fhould be fo many Beggars. For wherever I turn'd my Eyes, there was a Tree begging an Alms, which is a very troublefome Thing to Travellers. Upon a nice Infpection into the State of the Republick, I was convinc'd, that there Miferies flow'd from the too great CEconomy of the People. For all Luxury being proferib'd, and the Rich baulking their Genius, and giving into no Indulgences, the common People of courfe mult lead an indolent, idle, and beggarly Life, for want of Matter to make a proper Gain of. I concluded from hence, that rigid Parfimony in a State produces the fame Inconveniences as an Obffruction of the Blood in a human Body. In the other Province, that of Libo, they live fplendidly and jovially, and fpare no Expence. Here Arts and Profeffions flourifh; the Pcople are encourag'd to Induftry, and every Citizen has an Opportunity to raife a Fortune. Whoever is poor among them may fairly impute it to his own Negligence. Thus the Profufion of the Rich gives Life to the Body politick, as the Circulation of the Blood in the human Body gives Strength and Vigour to the Limbs.

The Territory of Lama borders upon: this. Here is the celebrated School of Phyficians. With fo much Ardour is the Study of Phyfick here purfued, that none are look'd upon as geruine Doctors, unlefs they come from the illuftrious School of Lama. And hence this City is crouded. with fo many Doctors, that you fee more of them than of all other Sorts of People put together. Whole Streets are fill'd with Shops of Apothecaries, and anatomical In-itrument-Makers. Loitering about the Ci ty, I met a Tree offering to Sale the Bills of Mortality for the Year laft paft. I bought one of them, and to my great Surprize found the Births and Burials ftand thus: Born fifty ; buried fix hundred. I could not conceive that in a Place, where Apollo himfelf feem'd to have fix'd his Refidence, there Should be fuch a yearly Havock among the Citizens. I afk'd the Tree what unufual Plague or Peftilence had rag'd in the City

158 A Journey to the
the laft Year. He reply'd, that two Years ago the Number of the Deceas'd was greater, that this was the common Proportion between the Births and Burials, and that the Inhabitants of Lama were perpetually afflicted with Diftempers, which haften'd. their Deaths ; infomuch that in a fhort Time the City would be empty, if it were not fupplied and recruited from the neighbouring Provinces. Upon this I hurry'd out of the City, not thinking it prudent to ftay longer here, efpecially as the Name of a Phyfician, and the Sight of the anatomical Inftruments, after what I had fuffer'd in the Country of Philofophers, could not be very agreeable. Therefore leaving this. Place, I never ftopt, till I came to a Town four Miles diftant, where the People live without Phyficians, and without Difeafes. In the Space of two Davs, I arriv'd at the Land of Liberty. The People here are accountable to no Authority. They confift of feparate Families, without being fubject to any Laws or Power whatfoever. Yet. an Appearance of Society is preferv'd, and in publick Matters they confult the Seniors, who perpetually exhort them to Peace and Unanimity, and admonifn them never to depart from that primary Prccept of Nature, of doing to others, as you would be done by. On all the Gates of the Cities and Viliages a Statue of Liberty is erected trampling upon Chains and Fetters, with this Infcription: over the Head, GOLDEN LIBERTY.

In the firft City I enter'd, all was quiet. enough; yet I obferv'd fome of the Citizens diftinguifh'd themfelves by certain Ribbands which they wore, and which, as I afterward underftood, were Marks and Symbols of two Factions which then divided the People. The Avenues and Court-Yards of the Houfes of the Great were lin'd with arm'd Soldiers, who always held themfelves in Readinefs, becaufe the Truce being about two Days ago expir'd, the War was upon breaking out afrefh. I fled away trembling as faft as I could, nor thought myfelf free, till I had convey'd myfelf out of Sight of this Land of Liberty.

The next Province is Focbtan, of which I had heard a fhort Defeription, which very much alarm'd me, and led me to think it muft be the Seat of Diforder, Confufion, and Infecurity. For this Country was the Sink and Receptacle of all Religions. All the feveral Principles and Doctrincs which prevail in any Part of this Globe, retire here as to their Center, and are taught publickly. Recollecting, therefore, what Troubles had been excited in Europe by religious Differences, I was almoft afraid to approach the capital City, the feveral Streets and Portions of which have all Churches and Temples for different and oppofite Sects. But my Fears foon vanifh'd, when I obferv'd a profound Agreement and Concord reign in every Part. With refpect to their Politicks, there was the fame Face, the fame Sentiments, the fame Tranquillity, and the fame Care in all. For as the Laws made it capital for one Member of the State to difturb another in his Way of Worfhip, or to moleft him upon Account of any religious Difference, hence whatever Diffenfions they had were without the leaft Appearance of Hoftility, their Difputes were without Bitternefs or Invectives, and they had no Averfions, becaufe they had no Perfecutions. There was a perpetual, but very boneft and worthy Emulation among the feveral Sects, every one of which endeavour'd to demonftrate the Excellence of their Religion by the Purity of their Life and Morals. Thus by the Wifdom of the Magiftrate, all thefe different Sentiments excited no more Troubles in the State, than did the different Shops of the Arcifts and Merchants in the Forum, where the Buyers are invited by the fole Goodnefs of the Commodity, and where they ufe neither Fraud, Force, or Difparagement. By thefe Means, the leait Seed of Difcord is flifled in the Birth, and that Sort of Emulation only encourag'd, which is honourable in itfeif, and advantageous to the State. This convinc'd me, that the religious Troubles which reign in many Places arife not from the Variety of Religions, but from Perfecution alone. A fenfible and learned Fochtanian explain'd to me more at large the Genius of this Government, and the Caufes of its. Tranquillity. I heard him with Rapture, and his Obfervations I fhall keep en-

160 A Journey to the

World Under-Ground. 163

grav'd on the Table of my Heart. I did indeed, for fome Time, make Replies and Objections to him, but was at laft forc'd to own myfelf vanquilh'd, fince he irrefiftibly prov'd all his Points by Arguments drawn from Experience. Afham'd, therefore, to contradict my Senfes, and give the Lie to politive Matter of Fact, I was forc'd to own, that Liberty of Belief was the true Fountain of this Tranquillity and Concord. However, once more I attack'd my Adverfary with an Argument difierent from all I had us'd. I told him it was the Duty of a Lawgiver, in erecting a Government, to regard the future, rather than the prefent Happinefs of Mortals, and that he fhould conform his Scheme not fo much to their Palate as to the Laws of God. 'To this he reply'd in this Manner: "My good Friend, " fays he, you are greatly deceiv'd, if you " imagine that God, the Fountain of " Truth, can be pleas'd with diffembled "Worfhip. In other Nations, where "s all are oblig'd by publick Authority to " one certain Rule of Faith, what a Door is "open'd for Ignorance and Hypocrify! " Few, or none, have the Will or the " Courage to difcover their true Sentiments, " and fo they profefs one Thing, and be"6 lieve another. This makes the Study of " Divinity a cold, lifelefs Thing, and be" gets a Negligence in the Difcovery of " Truth. This alfo makes profane Learn" ing more cultivated: For the Priefts " them-
" themfelves, left they fhould be branded " with the Title of Hereticks, relinquifh " the Purfuit of facred Things, and divert "s their Studies to other Subjects, where
"s their Minds may range without Danger, "s and where their Liberty is not fetter'd.
" The Vulgar will fill condemn all who de" part from the reigning Doctrines. But " Hypocrites and Diflemblers muft be hate"f ful to God, to whom a fincere, tho' er" roneous Belief, muft be infinitely lefs dif"s pleafing than an orthodox, but pretended " Faith." Hearing this, I kept Silence, unable to difpute the Point any longer with fo wife a People.

I had now been almoft two Months out upon my Travels, when at laft I arriv'd at Tumbac, a Territory contiguous to the $P_{0-}$ tuan Dominions. I thought myfelf now at home, my wearifome Journey being almoft finifh'd. The Inhabitants of this Region are chiefly Wild Olives, extremely devout, and extremely cenforious. In the firft Inn I enter'd, I waited two Hours for my Breakfart, knocking and calling for it almoft all that Time in vain. The Reafon of this Delay, was the unfeafonable Devotion of my Hoft, who would not, for the World, put his Hand to the leaft Thing, till he had finifh'd his Morning Prayers.
Tandem intrans magno porrexit murmure panem Pallidus, $\sigma^{\circ}$ caulem mifero mihi ponit olentem Lanteram.

However,

However, that Breakfaft was one of the deareft in all my Travels, and I proteft I never met with a Landlord more devout, or more unmerciful. Well! thought I to myfelf, this Landlord had better have pray'd lefs, and been more honeft. But I diffembled my Refentment, well knowing how dangerous it is to provoke a Saint. The Citizens here were all Cato's, all Cenfors of Manners. They walk'd up and down the Streets with penfive Looks and folded Arms, declaiming againft the Vanity of the Times, and condemning every innocent Pleafure. Not a Gefture, not a Smile efcap'd their Obfervation. And thus by their perpetual Cenfures, and envenom'd Zeal, they pafs'd for Perfons of eminent Sanctity. For my Part, as I was feent and exhanfted with Fatigues, I made no Scruple of indulging in feveral innocent Diverfions. But I got a bad Name by fo doing, infomuch that every Houfe I cnter'd was like a Court of Juftice, where I was fure to be arraign'd. Some, when they faw I was not at all mov'd by their Rebukes and Admonitions, fhunn'd me like a Plague or a Contagion. I forbear to fay more upon the Morofenefs of this People: However, one Circumftance I muft not omit, becaufe it gives you their exact Character; and from this Sample you may judge of the reft. A certain Tumbacian, with whom I had been acquainted at Potu, being at an Inn, and feeing me go by, ftept out to me, and prefs'd

164 A Journey to the
me to go in. I waited on him. As he had heard that I was far from being an Enemy to Pleafure, he gave me fuch a Lecture, and upbraíded me with my Life and Morals in fuch Terms, that my Hair flood on End, and every Joint of me fhook. But while our Cato was difcharging thus the Artillery of his Cenfures, the Glars had pafs'd very infenfibly, but very brifkly, from one to the other, till in fhort we both fell fairly fuddled on the Floor, and were carried off half dead. Having flept off this Debauch, and recover'd my Reafon, I fet myfelf to examine into the Nature of thefe People's Religion; and I made a fair Difcovery, that their Zeal flow'd rather from fome vicious Humours, or a Predominancy of the bilious Juices, than from true Piety. But I never communicated this to any one, and left them without faying a Word.

At laft, after two compleat Months, I arriv'd at Potu, fo extremely weary with fuch inceflant Exercife, that my Legs had fcarce. Strength to fupport my Body. It was on the tenth Day of the Month of Beeches that I enter'd this Capital. I went forthwith to his Serene Highnefs, and offer'd him my little Hiftorical Cöllection, which he immediately order'd to be printed. (For it mult be noted, that the Art of Printing, of which the Europeans and Chinefe boait themfelyes to be Inventors, was of far greater Antiquity among the Potuans.) The People in general were fo pleas'd with this Account of my Travels, that they were never weary of reading it. All Day long, they were running about the Streets felling my Jour-nal, and crying, as loud as they could, A Fourney round the World, by Scabba, the King's Mefenger. Elated with this Succefs, I gave a Loofe to my Ambition, and afpir'd. to fome Employment of greater Weight and Dignity. But feeing my Hopes not quickly anfiver'd, I preferr'd a new Petition to the Prince, wherein extolling my late Labours, I carneftly implor'd his Highnefs to vouchfafe me a proper Recompence. The Prince, who was Humanity in the Abftrach, was fenfibly touch'd with my Cafe, and graciouny promis'd that he would have a due Regard to me. He was as good as his Word: But his whole Favour terminated in the Enlargement of my annual Salary. I thought I had Reafon to expect a far better Recompence, and therefore 1 could not reft contented with this. But as I would not trouble his Highnefs any further, I open'd my Grief to the Chancellor. He heard me with his ufual Humanity, and promis'd me all the good Offices in his Power; but at the fame Time admonifh'd me to defift from fo wild a Petition, and begg'd me to confider the Meafure of my Abilities, and the Weaknefs of my Judgment. "Nature, fays he, has been but a "Step-Mother to you, and has deny'd " you thofe Powers of the Mind, which

E66 A Journey to the

"6 are requifite for the more arduous Offices "s of the State; and therefore you fhould " not ain at what it is not poffible for you "to procure. Nay, the Prince himfelf, "' were he to comply with this weak Re"queft of yours, muft fuffer in his Fame, "s as a Violator of the Laws. Reft con" tented therefore with your Condition, " and renounce a Hope, which Nature has " made unreafonable:" In Conclufion, he own'd I had fome Merit, and particularly extoll'd my late Performance. But it is not, fays he, Merit of this Kind that paves the Way to State-Preferment. 'Tis true, you have drawn a very pretty Picture of the World; but if for a Performance of this Kind we were to gratify you with the moft honourable Employments, why might not a Painter for drawing a great Likenels, or a Sculptor for exhibiting a Statue in juft Proportion, with as much Reafon expect to be made a Senator? Merit fhould doubtlefs meet with a Recompence, and Rewards fhould be affign'd to the Deferving; but then they fhould be Rewards of fuch a Nature, as that the Commionwealth receive no Detriment, and fuffer no Ridicule.

Thefe Admonitions filenc'd me : for a While. But as I could not bear to think of growing old in this vile Employ, I refum'd that defperate Refolution, which had laid dormant a long Time, of attempting a Reformation in the State, by which Project I might, at one and the fame Time, help help forward the publick Good, and my own too.

World Under-Ground. 167

A little before I fat out upon my late Travels, 1 had clofely ftudy'd the Naturc of this Government, to fee if I could difcover any Defects, and at the fame Time what Remedies were proper for them. Since that, in the Province of Cockle'ku, I had obferv'd that the Government there was in a tottering Condition, by reafon of the Admiffion of Women to the Management of publick Affairs, that Sex being maturally: ambitious, Atill aiming to extend their Power, nor ever refting till they have acquir'd a full and abfolute Authority. Hereupon I determin'd to bring in a Bill to exclude that Scx from the Adminiftration of publick Affairs. I flatter'd myfelf I fhould find Multitudes to abct and efpoufe this Point, fince it was an ealy Matter to make it very clear, and to fhew beyond Contradiation the Misfortunes that flow from this Defect in the State, and the Danger the Male Sex was in, unlefs the Wings of fuch an ynnatural Power were timely clipt. And if it fhould fo happen, that the Abolition of this ancient Cuftom fhould appear to fome to be too hazardous an Attempt, in fuch Cafe I humbly offer'd, that the Female Power fhould be at leaft reftrain'd and abridg'd.

This Scheme of inine had three Ends in view. Firft, to remove an Inconvenience the State labour'd under. Secondly, by producing a Specimen of my Sagacity and Judgment, I had Hopes to mend my Condition. And, thirdly, I thought by thefe Mieans to revenge certain Taunts and Affronts I had receiv'd from many of the Females of this Country. I frankly confefs, that my own private Intereft, and a Defire of Revenge, were the primum Mobile of this Project. But then I artfully conceal'd thefe Views, left under a Pretence of publick Good, I fhould feem only to purfue my own, and fo tread in the Steps of other Innovators, whofe Schemes breathe nothing but the publick Good, when it is evident to the dulleft Obferver, that their private Intereft is the Spring that moves the whole Machine.

And now, having dre? my Project out to the beft Advantage, and ftrengthen'd it by the moft powerful Reafons I could invent, I waited upon the Prince, and humbly offer'd it to him. His Highnefs, who had always teftify'd a great Regard to me, was thunderftruck at the Boldnefs and Folly of my Undertaking, which he foreboded muft end in my irreparable Ruin. Wherefore he endeavour'd to diffuade me from this mad Attempt by the ftrongeft Intreaties:

- Precibufque minas regaliter addait.

I, for my Part, relying as well upon the Utility of my Project, as upon the Favour of the Male Sex (who I was in Hopes would not defert the common Caufe) remain'd immovable movable to all his Highnefs faid, nor could his repeated Admonitions vanquifh my Ob ftinacy. In fine, according to the Cuftom of the Country, I was brought to the Forum, and there, with my Neck in a Halter, I ftood waiting the Judgenent of the Senate. That venerable Body debated the Matter, and foon came to a Refolution; which Refolution was fent up to the Prince for his Confirmation ; and being return'd by him, was read aloud by a publick Officer. It run thus:
" After due Examination, we are of "Opinion as follows: That the Project of "S Sabba, the King's Meffenger, to exclude 's the Female Sex from publick Bufinefs, " cannot take Effect without the higheft " Detriment to the Commonwealth, fince " no lefs than Half of the Nation, which " confifts of the faid Sex, mult look upon "s this Innovation as a very great Hardfhip, "' and their Refentment may occafion infi" 6 nite Diforders. Moreover we are of Opi"s nion, that it is abfurd and unjuft, intirely " to exclude Trees of the fineft Talents " from publick Honours, efpecially as Na" ture, who does nothing in vain, can 1 e"6 ver be fuppos'd to have given them all " thofe noble Advantages to no Purpofe. "We are perfuaded, that for the Welfare "s of the State, Regard ought to be had not " to the Name, but the Abilitics of a Per"fon. And as a Country may often ba" bour under a Want of able Perfons, we

I70 A JOURNEY to the
6s think it a great Folly, by one Act of ${ }^{66}$ Senate, to render one intire Half of the " Nation incapable and unworthy of Em" ployment, folely upon Account of their "Birth. For thefe and divers other good " Reafons we are of Opinion, that the faid "Scabba, for this foolifh and rafh Attempt, " ought to be punifh'd according to the "Cuftom of our Anceftors."

The Prince was extremely concern'd for my Misfortune, but as he never refcinded the Decree of the Senate, he fign'd it with his own Hand, and affix'd the Royal Seal to it, and commanded it to be made publick; inferting however this mollifying Claufe, That as I was a Foreigner, a Native of a new and unknown World, where forward Geniufes are in great Efteem, I fhould be exempted from capital Punifhment. But left by a total Remiffion of the Sentence the Laws hould fuffer an Infringement, it was therefore thought fit to detain me in Prifon till the Beginning of the Month of Birches, and that then, with other Violators of the Law, I fhould be banifh'd to the Firmament.

This Sentence being publifh'd, I was clapt into Prifon. Some of my Friends perfuaded me to proteft againft this Sentence, fince among my Judges there were fo many Matrons and Virgins, all Judges in their own Caufe. Some advis'd me, as the fafer Way, to make a fair Acknowledgment of my Crime, and lay the Blame upon my own native human Weaknefs. But this laft Advice I rejected with great Conftancy, out of Refpect to Mankind, upon whofe Character fuch a Confeffion would leave an indelible Blemifh.

World Under-Ground.

I heard foon after, that his Highnefs had determin'd to give me an abfolute Pardon, if I would but only proftrate myfelf at his Feet, confefs my Fault, and implore his Favour, although Rahagna the Treafurer oppos'd that Motion with Might and Main. But, to fpeak the Truth, I was not difpleas'd with the Sentence. For Death was not half fo terrible to me as that Employment they pick'd out for me ; and I was weary of converfing longer with thefe Trees, who had fo high an Opinion of their Wifdom. I hop'd alfo to meet with better Treatment in the Firmament, where I had heard, that all Strangers, without Diftinction, were kindly receiv'd.

C H A P. X.

The Autbor's Banifbment to the Fir-MAMENT.

IHave hitherto faid nothing concerning the ftrange and very fingular Punifhment the Patuans have, of banifhing to the Firmament: Wherefore I think myfelf oblig'd in this Place, to give fome Account of it.

Iy2 A JOURNEX to the Twice every Year certain Birds of an enormous Magnitude appear upon this Globe. They are call'd Cupac, that is to fay, Birds of Poti, and at ftated Seafons they come and go. It has long perplex'd the Subterranean Naturalifts to account for this periodical Vifit. Some think they defcend upon this Planet in Queft of certain Infects, or large Flies, of which there are prodigious Numbers about this Time of the Year, and of which thefe Birds are exceedingly voracious. This Opinion is ftrengthen'd by this Circumftance, that when thefe Flies difappear, the Birds fly off towards the Firmament. An evident Proof of this we have in other Countries, where Birds by the fame Inftinct of Nature appear, and for the very fame Caufes. Others think that thefe Birds are train'd up and inftructed to this very End and Purpofe by the Inhabitants of the Firmament, like our Falcons and other Birds of Prey. 'This Hypothefis receives fome Countenance from that Tendernefs, Care, and Dexterity, which thefe Birds ufe in bringing home their Prey, and laying it gently down before their Mafters. Other Circumftances alfo fhew, that thefe Creatures are either thus inftructed, or elfe that they have a certain Portion of Reafon to direet them; for at the Approach of the Seafon of Departure, they are ro tra&table and tame, that they fuffer certain Nets, or fmall Chains, to be thrown over them, under which they lie quiet for many Days, and are fed out of Hand by the Inhabitants with the aforefaid Flies, of which they take Care to provide a great Quantity for this very Purpofe. For it is neceffary to keep feeding them till all Things are prepar'd and got ready for thofe who are to be banifh'd. The Apparatus for their Departure is as follows: On thofe Nets, in which they are intangled, a Box or Cage is faften'd with Cords. Every Cage is capable of containing one Perfon. The Time now drawing near, and the Infects failing which fupply'd then with Food, the Birds mount upon Wing, and cutting the Air, return to the Place from whence they came. Such was this wonderful Paflage, by which I and feveral other Exiles were to be tranflated to a new World.

There were alfo at this Time two Citizens of Potu, who for different Crimes were fentenc'd to Banifhment, and were now preparing for their Journey. One of thefe was a Metaphyfician, who had incurr'd this Punifhment by difputing concerning the Effence of God, and the Nature of fpiritual Subftances. He had fatisfy'd the Law for his firft Offence of this Kind, by undergoing the Punifhment of the Arm; but being a fecond Time detected, he was condemn'd to be banifh'd to the Firmament. The other was a Fanatick, who having conceiv'd fome Doubts concerning Religion, and concerning the civil Rights of the State, attempted to fubvert the Foundations of each. He refus'd to obey the publick Laws, under Pretence that fuch Obedience was contrary to the Dictates of his Confcience. His Friends endeavour'd, by the moft powerful Arguments, to cure him of this Conceit, by fhewing him how many Delufions thefe Impulfes of Confcience and imaginary Infpirations were fubject to; they told him, that Zeal and Confcience were often confounded with Melancholy and certain corrupt Humours of the Body; they demonftrated to him the egregious Folly of thus appealing to the Authority of Confcience, and how unjuft it was to contend that the Impulfes of his Mind fhould be $a$ Rule to others, who might make ufe of the fame Argument, and oppofe Confcience to Confciencc. At laft they prov'd to him, that whoever firnly held this Principle, pretending Confcience for his Difobedience, ought to be excluded from the Rights and Benefits of the Community, fince every good Subject fhould pay an implicit Obedience to the Laws ; but that a Fanatick neither cou'd nor wou'd pay fuch an Obedience, fince his Confcience was his fole Rule of Politicks. But as thefe Reafons had no Effect upon the Mind of our Fanatick, he continued obftinate and incorrigible, and fo was condemn'd to the Firmament. Thus at this Time there were only three of us to undergo this Punifhment, a Projector, a Metaphyfician, and a Fanatick.

174 A Journey to the

About the Beginning of the Month of Birches, we were all carry'd from Prifon to feparate feparate Places. What became of the Metaphyfician and the Fanatick I know not, as being too full of Cares for myfelf to mind any Thing elfe. Being brought to the deftin'd Place of Departure, I was forthwith thruft into the Box or Cage, with as much Provifion as would ferve me for two or three Days. Soon after this, when the Birds found no more Flies brought them, as if they took the Hint, they left the Place, and Aew off with incredible Celerity. The Diftance of the Firmament from the Planet Nazar, is reputed by the Subterraneans to be about an hundred Miles. How long I was in paffing from the one to the other I cannot fay, but tō me this ætherial Voyage feem'd to be no more than about four and twenty Hours. After a profound Silence, at laft a confus'd Noife feem'd to reach my Ears, from whence I conjectur'd I was not far from. Land. Then it was I perceiv'd that thefe Birds had:been carefully exercis'd and inftructed; for with great Art and Care they landed their Burden, fo as not in the leaft to injure or hurt it. In a Moment I was furrounded with a prodigious Number of Monkies, the Sight of which put me into a very great Fright, remembring what I had fuffer'd from thefe Animals upon the Planet Nazar. But my Fright redoubled, when I heard thefe Monkies articulately difcourfe with one another, and when I beheld them clad in diverfe-colour'd Veftments. I then conjectur'd that they were the Inhabitants of this Country. But as after that Heap of Wonders I had been accuftom'd to, nothing now could well feem new or ftrange, I began to recover my Cousage, efpecially as I had obferv'd that thefe Creatures approach'd me with an Air of Civility and Good-nature, taking me gently out of my Cage, and receiving me with the Humanity due to Strangers. Even Ambaffadors in our World are hardly receiv'd with more Ceremony than 1 was. They all came one after another, and addrefs'd me in thefe Words, Pul Afler. When they had repeated this Salutation pretty often, I repeated the fame Words. Upon this they fet up an immoderate Laugh, and by a Multitude of comic Geftures, fignify'd they were highly delighted to hear me pronounce them. This made me conclude thefe People to be a light, babbling Race of Creatures, and vaft Admirers of Novelty. When they fpoke, you wou'd think fo many Drums were beating, with fo much Volubility, and fo little out of Breath, they held on their Chattering. In a Word, as to Drefs, Manners, Speech, and Form of Body, they were the very Reverfe of the Potuans. At firft they were all aftonifh'd at my Figure, and the chief Reafon of that Aftonifhment was, that I wanted a Tail. For as among the whole Brute Creation none fo much refemble the human Form as Monkies, fo, had I had a Tail, they would have taken me for one of their own Species, efpecially as all thofe who had hitherto been tranfported from the Planet Nazar to this Place, were of a Form extremely unlike their own. About the Time of my Arrival here the Sea run very high, by reafon of the near Approach of the Planet Nazar: For as with us the Tides of the Ocean correfpond with the Courfe of the Moon, fo the Ocean of this Firmament increafes and decreafes according to the Vicinity or Remotenefs of the aforefaid Planet.

: 76 A Journey to the

Prefently I was conducted to a very noble Houfe, all bcautifully fet off with coftly Stone, Marble, Mirrors, Vafes, and Tapeftry. At the Gate were Centinels pofted, which gave me to underftand that this could not be the Dwelling of a vulgar Monkey. And I was foon inform'd, that it was the Houfe of the Conful or chief Magiffrate. He was very defirous of converfing with me, and therefore hir'd fome Mafters to inftruct me in their Language. Near three Months had been fpent upon my Initruction, at the Expiration of which, as I could now fpeak the Tongue pretty fluently, I hop'd to gain the Applaufe and Admiration of all, upon Account of the Forwardnefs of my Genius, and the Strength of my Memory. But my Tutors thought me nower and duller than ordinary, infomuch that they loft all Patience, and threaten'd to leave me off. And. as at Potu I was call'd in Derifion Scabba, or Quick-Parts, fo here, by reafon of my Stupidity and Dulnefs, they gave me the Name of Kadicoran, which fignifies a Clown, or Dunce. For thofe alone are here efteem'd, who are quick and nimble, and cover their Senfe in a confus'd and rapid Volley of Words. While I was learning the MonkeyLanguage, my Hoft took me round the City, which I beheld diffolv'd in every Kind of Luxury. What with the Multitude of Coaches, Chaifes, Valets, and a Croud of People hurrying every $W_{\text {ay }}$, we were obliged to ufe a Sort of Force to get on. Yet this was nothing, if compar'd to that Luxury which reign'd in the Metropolis, where, as in its Center, you might fee all that mortai Vanity could invent. Being now taught the Language, I was brought to this famous Capital by my Hoft, who hop'd to purchafe the Favour of a Senator, by making him a Prefent of fo uncommon a Curiofity as I was. For the Form of Government here is ariftocratical, fo that the Sovereign Authority refides in the Grand Senate, the Members of which are all noble from firf to laft. None of plebeian Family cain ever hope to be more than a Centurion or Preetor in the Provinces or leffer Cities. Sonietimes, indeed, one of this Clafs may arrive at the Confulate, yet never without fome very extraordinary Merit. Thus it was my Hoft obtain'd the Confulfhip; for fo fertile was his Genius, that in the Space of one Month, he projected twenty-eight new Laws. And though not half of them were calculated for the Good of the Publick, yet they were Specimens of a fruitful Invention, and procur'd him a great Character. For throughout the whole fubterranean World; there is no Place where Projectors are in more Efteein than in this. The eapital City is call'd Martinia ; it gives Name to the whole Country, and is famous for its fine Situation, for the Grandeur of its Buildings, its Commerce, and naval Force. For Extent of Ground, and Number of Inhabitants, I believe it may rival Pairis. So crouded was every Street, that we were forc'd to beat our Way through to go to that Part of the City where the Syndick of the Senate liv'd. For hé it was to whom the Conful was to prefent me.

178 A Journey to the

When we drew near to the Syndick's Houfe, my Friend the Conful went into an Inn, to put himfelf in Order, and to compofe his Perfon and Habit in a Manner fit to appear before the Syndick. Immediately there appear'd a little Army of occafional Valets or Footmen, commonly call'd Mafkatti, whofe Affiftance èvery one makes ufe of before they énter the Palaces of the Seriators. Thefe brufh your Cloaths, take out the Spots, and with the exacteft Care adjuft whatever is difcompos'd, even to the fmalleft Plait. One of there Maskatti took the Conful's Sword, and wip'd it clean and bright, and then return'd it him. Another drefs'd his Tail with Ribbands of various Colours: For thefe Monkies have nothing more at Heart than the Ornaments of their

Tails. There were fome Senators, and efpecially fome of the Wives of the Senators, whofe Tails on high Occafions could fcarcely be drefs'd out to the beft Advantage under two or three hundred Pounds Sterling. A third approach'd the Conful with a geometrical Inftrument, to take the Dimenfions of his Cloaths, and to fee if all hung in due Proportion. A fourth brought a Bottle of Paint, and with it improv'd his Vifage. A fifth examin'd his Feet, from which he par'd the Superfluities. A fixth brought him perfum'd Water to wafh with. In fhort, one brought a Towel, another a Comb, another a Looking-Glafs, and all with an Exactnefs not inferior to that of a Geometrician meafuring and adorning his Map. Oh! thought I to myfelf, how much Time and Expence muft the Drefs of the Ladies here require, when there is fo much Fufs in tricking out one of our Sex ? And, indeed, the Martinian Ladies exceed all Bounds, and cover their Defects with fuch a Load of Paint, as makes their Perfons offenfive. For when the Sweat and Paint are pretty well united, it exhales an Odour like that of your great Kitchens; what you fmell you know not, but this you know, that it is fomething very difagreeable.

My Hoft thus painted, powder'd, comb'd and polifh'd, went to the Syndick's Palace, attended only with three Valets. When he came to the Court-Yard he pull'd off his Shoes, left he fhould afterwards difoblige the Marble Floor with Dirt or Duft. He was forc'd to ftay a full Hour before the Syndick was inform'd that he was there, nor was he introduc'd without a proper Gratification to fome of the Guards and Servants. The Syndick, feated on a gilt Settee, as foon as he efpy'd me entring with my Hoft, burft out into an ungovernable Laughter, and afterward afk'd me a thoufand trifling, foolifh Queftions. To every Reply I made him, he redoubled his Fits of Laughter.

Ingeminat tremulos nafo crijpante iachinnos.

For my Part, I was of Opinion, that to play the Buffoon was reckon'd among the Virtues here, fince the Government had made this Perfon Syndick, which is the fecond Dignity in the Senate ; and I obferv'd as much to my Friend. But he affur'd me, he was a Monkey of great Abilities, as appear'd from the Multitude of Bufinefs of various Surts, which even in his greener Years he went through. For fuch was his Readinefs of Perception, that even over a Gias he would tranfact Affairs of the utmoit Weight ; nay even at Dinner, or at Supper, between the Courfes, he would often draw up a new Law. I enquir'd if fuch Laws, conceiv'd in fo fhort a Space of Time, were of any confiderable Duration. To this he only reply'd, that like other Laws they continued in Force, till it pleas'd the Senate to abrogate or repeal them.

The Syndick, having convers'd with me about half an Hour, and with full as great a Degree of Loquacity as our European Barbers, turn'd himfelf about to my Friend, and told him, he would take me into the Number of his Servants, though upon Account of my flow Intellects he much doubted whether I could be good for any Thing. I have my Jelf, reply'd my Friend the Conful, obferv'd a natural Torpor or Dulnefs in bim, but give him Time for Reflexion, and you will find be bas no contemptible 'Fudgment. That fignifies little here, return'd the Syndick, fince our Multiplicity of Bufinefs admits of no Delay. With thefe Words he fell to examining my Limbs and my Body, and after having furvey'd them a fhort Time, he commanded me to lift up a certain Weight from the Ground, which I did without much 'Trouble. Upon this he told ine, that though Nature had been unkind to me with refpect to my Intellects, yet that the had in a Manner compenfated that Defect by an extraordinary Strength of Body. I was then order'd to withdraw to another Apartment, where the Domefticks and Atterdants receiv'd me with a good deal of Pleafure, though their exceffive Impertinence and Geftures were troublefome enough. So many Queftions they ank'd me concerning our World, I knew not how to anfwer them, and fo gave them what came uppermolt, forne Truth, fome Falihood, juft to allay their impatient Curiofity.

At length my Friend returning, told me his Excellence did me the Honour to retain me in his Court. From the foregoing Converfation of the Syndick I could guefs, that the Employment defign'd for me was no very important one, probably his Valet, or his Butler ; and upon enquiring what it was, my Friend faid to me, His Excellence has been gracioufly pleas'd to appoint you one of bis Body Chairmen, with an annual Salary of twentr-five Stercolates. (A Martinian Siercolate is equal to about feven Shitlings and Six-pence Sterling.) He has moreover engag'd, that you thall have the Honour of carrying only himfelf, or his Lady. I was thunderftruck with this Anfwer, and remonftrated in the mont pathetic Manner how unworthy an Office this was for one of my ingenuous Education and Eamily. But fome Courtiers rufhing in in Heaps, interrupted me from fpeaking more, and half kill'd me with their Impertinence. For all the Martinians are light, frothy, talking Creatures, that have a fmooth, fluent Jargon of Words, without the leaft Mixture of Serioufnefs or Gravity. At length I was conducted to an Apartment, where Supper was ready; and having taken a moderate Repart, I retir'd to my Repofe.

I threw myfelf upon my Bed, but fuch was the Diforder of my Mind, I could take no Sleep. The Difdain I was receiv'd with fhock'd me to the higheft Degree, and nothing lefs than a Spartan Patience could digeft

184 A Journey to the

geft fo grofs an Indignity. I heartily deplor'd my Fate, which feem'd feverer now than what I had experienc'd in the Planet Nazar, and I could not help faying to myfelf, " What would here become of the "Kadoki, or High Chancellor of Potu, a " Perfon of ineftimable Worth in his own " Country, but who requir'd at leaft ant
" intire Month to form a new Law? What " would be the Fate of Palmka in this " Place, where the Senators make Laws " between the Courfes at Meals?" After a ferious Confideration, I found myfelf tranflated from a Land of Sages to a Country of Fools. At laft being tir'd with thinking, Sleep overpower'd me. I know not how long I flept, fince there is here no Difference between Night and Day. For it is never dark except at one ftated Time, when the fubterranean Sun is in an Eclipfe by the Interpofition of the Planet Nazar. This Eclipfe is very remarkable, becaufe the aforefaid Planet, being not far from the Firmament, overfhadows the whole Sun, and fo always makes the Eclipfe total. But as this happens but feldom, it makes no Alteration of Seafon, which is here invariably the fame upon Account of the conftant Prefence of the Sun. Hence the Inhabitants are forc'd to have Recourfe to various Inventions, as Groves, Baths, Walks, and Grotto's, to qualify the Heat.

I was fearce awake, when a Monkey enter'd my Chamber, who told me he was my Comrade in Office, and with a fight Cord (being order'd fo to do) he apply'd a fictitious Tail to my Pofteriors, to make me look more like a Monkey. He then bid me get ready, becaufe the Syndick with-. in an Hour was to be carry'd to the Academy, to which Place he and his Brother Senators had receiv'd a formal Invitation. It feems there was to be a Promotion to a Ductor's Degree at Ten o'Clock that Morning. It muft be noted here, that though the Days are not diftinguifh'd from the Nights, by reafon of the perpetual Prefence of the Sun, yet are they diftinguifh'd into Hours, half Hours, and Quarters, and that by Means of Clocks or Hour-Glafies, fo that Day and Night together take up about twenty-two Hours. Hence, if all the Clocks in the City were to ftop at once, it would be impoffible for the Citizens to recover the true Time, till they had confulted fome of the Clocks in the next Neighbourhood. For there neither are, nor can be, any SunDials, becaufe there is never any Shadow, the Sun continually darting perpendicular Rays upon the PJace. So that were you to dig a Well here, it would te illuminated to the Bottom. As to the Year, that is regulated and governed by the Courfe of the Planet Nazar round the Sun.

World Under-Ground. 185

At Ten o'Clock we took up his Excellence, and carry'd him to the Academy. Entring into the Auditory, we beheld the Doctors and Mafters feated in Order, every one of which rofe up as the Syndick pafs d by, and turning themfelves about paid him their Compliments with their Tail. This is their Manner of doing Reverence. And this accounts for their Care in adorning their Tails. For my own Part, I confefs thefe inverted Salutations feem'd extremely foolifh and abfurd. For to turn one's Back upon any one, is among us a Mark of Indifference or Contemipt: But every Nation has its particular Tafte. The aforefaid Doctors and Mafters were feated on each Side of the Auditory. In the lower Part of it was plac'd a Chair, in which fat the Candidate. Before the Act of Promotion, the following Queftion was difcufs'd in a folemn Difputation, namely, Whether the Sound, which. Flies and other Inferts make, comes through the. Mouth, or the Pofteriors? The Prefident undertook the Defence of the former Opinion, which was attack'd by the Opponents with fo much Ardour, that I was a fraid it would bave terminated in a bloody Battle. And moft certainly they had come to Blows, but that the Senate rofe up, and cool'd the Flame by their Authority. During the Difpute, a certain Monkey play'd upon a Pipe: This was the Moderator, who by the Management of his Mufick, either in foft, or in finart Strains, would quicken the Difpute when it flagg'd and languifh'd, or bring it down when it was noify and violent. Tho' very often all his Art had no Effect : So very hard a. Matter it is to preferve the Temper, when when the Difpute is upon fuch interefling Subjects. The fame Thing often happens in our World, where, when the Difpute turns upon fome very dubious and almuft inexplicable Point, one may obferve the Combatants are often work'd up to the moft violent Agitations of Mind or Body. However, this threatning Quarrel which promis'd nothing bit Blood and Slaughter, ended all in Compliments and Praifes. Something like this obtains in our European Univerfities, where, according to general Cuftom, the Preffent, when the Difpute is clos'd, defcends victorious and triumphant from the Chair.

This Preamble ended, they proceeded to the Act of Creation with thefe Ceremonies. The Candidate was plac'd in the Middle of the Auditory: Three of the UniverfityBeadles walk'd gravely up to him, and threw a whole Pail-full of cold Water upon his Head; they then perfum'd him with. Incenfe, and laftly gave him a Vomit to take off. Having perform'd this with the utmoft Solemnity, they retir'd bowing, and declar'd him aloud a true and legitimate Doctor. Amaz'd at fo many wonderful Ceremonies, I afk'd a certain learned Monikey who ftood near me, the Meaning of all this. He told me, (pitying at the fame Time my Ignorance) that by the Water, the Incenfe, and the Vomit, it was underftood that the Candidate was to for rake his old Vices, and to aflume a new Set of

188 A Journey to the
Manners, to diftinguifh him from the Vulgar. Hearing this, I deplor'd my own Stupidity, and full of Admiration, forbore to afk any farther Queftions, for fear I fhould be thought to have never convers'd with any Thing above Brutes.

At laft all the mufical Inftruments ftruck up at once, and the new Doctor, cloath'd in a Robe of Green, and girt with a Safh of the fame Colour, was efcorted home from the Auditory with all Parnafus at his Heels. But as he was of a plebeian Family, he had not the Honour of a Coach, but was feated in a Vehicle not unlike a Wheelbarrow, and drawn by Hand, the Univerlity-Beadles marching before in their refpective Habits. The Whole ended in a very handrome Entertainment, where the Guefts drank fo plentifully, that many of them were carried home extremely intoxicated, and were fo ill for many Days after, that without the Help of proper Medicines they would hardly have recover'd. So that from the Beginning to the Ending of this whole Ceremony, nothing was wanting to the due §olemnity of it; and I proteft, I never, even in our World, faw a more truly academical Promotion, or any Candidate commence Doctor more legitimately than this.

In the Courts of Juftice, Caufes are difpatch'd with a furprizing Dexterity, and I was charm'd with that Readinefs of Apprehenfion, that Velocity of conceiving Things, fo peculiar to this Nation. Very often, before the Advocates have wound up their Pleadings, the Judges rife and give Sentence with equal Expedition and Elegance. I often frequented thefe Courts, to inform myfelf thoroughly of their Manner of Proceeding. At firft hearing, their Decrees feem'd juft and equitable enough ; but upon a more careful Examination, they were in Reality abfurd, unjuft, and full of Contradictions, infomuch that 1 would fooner commit my Caufe to the Chance of a Die, than to the Judgment of the Martinian Lawyers. I forbear to fay any Thing concerning the Laws of this People, by reafon of the capricious Changes they perpetually undergo. They are as fickle in the fe as in their Fafhions. Many are here punifh'd for Crimes, which were not Crimes at the Time they were committed, but commence fuch by Virtue of an After-Law to make them fo. For which Reafon nothing is more common than Appeals from the inferior to the fuperior Courts, the Plaintiff having Hopes, that, while the Suit is depending, the old Law (which loft him his Caufe in the lower Court) may be repeal'd. This is owing to the Suddennefs with which their Laws are invented and promulged. Such Lovers of Novelty are this People, that they perfectly naufeate the moft ufeful Statutes, folely upon Account of their Antiquity. The Adrocates are in $\frac{8}{4}$ reat Reputation for their Shrewdnefs in Difputation. Nay, there are fome among them, who difdain difdain to undertake a Caufe that is not unjuft, or at leaft very doubtful; for in fo doing they might be depriv'd of an Occafion of exerting their Parts, and giving Specimens of their Ability to turn Black into White. The Judges will often favour a bad Caufe, in Compliment to the Council for defending it fo well. " We perceive well es enough, fiy the Judges, the Injuftice of " this Caufe, but then it has been manag'd © 6 with fuch inimitable Art, that in Juftice "6 to the Advocate for his Performance, we "s ought to ftrain a Point of Law." The Students in this Profeffion are taught Law at different Prices; for Inftance, Thofe who teach their Pupils to manage a bad Caufe, or, according to the Proverb, to make the beft of a bad Market, require twenty Stercolates for their Trouble ; the Art of managing a good one fhall coft but ten. Their forms of Law are fo many, they refemble a huge Cbaos, without Bottom and without Shore. For the Martinians, having a fublime Genius and a quick Perception, deteft every Thing that's plain and fimple, and think nothing worth their Care that is not very knoty and intricate.

World Under-Ground.

The fame Tafte prevails in Religion, which does not confift in Practice, but in idle Speculations. Thus there are two hundred and thirty different Opinions about the Form or Figure of the Supream Being, and three hundred and ninety-fix about the Na ture and Quality of Souls. The Martinians never refort to their Temples or Churches with the View of hearing any Thing ufeful, -or of improving themfelves in the Art of living and dying well, but only to obferve with what Art and Dexterity the holy Orators acquit themfelves; for the more obfcure their Language is, the more they are admir'd, their Audience having very little Relifh for what they underftand. More P'ains are taken about the Expreffion, than about the Matter, the Preachers affecting the fmooth, round Period more than the Strength of Reafon, and the Audience expecting to be amus'd with a founding Pomp of Words without a Meaning. For this Reafon I did not dare fay any Thing concerning the Chriftian Religion, which confifting of naked, fimple Truths, could never recommend itfelf to their Goût.

Projectors are no where in fo high Reputation as here. The more odd and impracticable the Scheme, the greater is the Inventor's Glory. When I had accidentally been explaining to a certain Monkey the Nature of our terraqueous Globe, and had inform'd him that the Surface of it was inhabited, he prefently conceiv'd a Project of digging through the Earth, and opening a Paflage to the Superterraneans. This Device met with univerfal Applaufe, and a Society was thereupon inftituted, and call'd 'THE SUPERTERRANEAN COMPANY, to which the Inhabitants flock'd in Shoals, and, according to the Language of thofe Times,

192 A Journey to the Times, bought in Stocks. However, as this Affair introduced a great deal of Confufion into the Kingdom, and ruin'd a Multitude of Families beyond Redemption, they found the Folly of the Scheme, and drops it all at once. And though the Nadion farted fo Severely by it, yet the Projector not only efcap'd with Impunity, but with almoft general Praife, this People entertaining the higheft Idea of his great Abslities.

Perceiving this Turn of Mind to prevail, I endeavour'd by the fame Means to procure myfelf a Reputation among the Martinians, and to mend my Fortune by forme new Project of my own. After a due Examination of the State of the Publick, I difcover'd feveral Flaws in it. I law the whole Conntry was full of the more fubtle Sort of Artiffs, but that it labour'd under a Want of ufeful Traders and Workmen. Upon this I propes'd a Law for the Inftitution of ertain Manufacturers, that might be of great Service to the Nation. But every Propofal of this Kind met with nothing but Sneers and Contempt from this vain People. I then accus'd my own Stupidity in the fe Terms, What a Sot have I been? and how richly do I deferve to end my Days in the ignole Office of Chairman? Yet I did not altoaether defpond, and being convinced I fhould never do them, nor my elf, any Good by falutary Counfels, I refolv'd to try whether I could not get over the Difficulty by fome ridiculous Invention or other. I open'd my Defign to one of the gravelt Monkeys I knew, who encourag'd me to it mightily. And when he prov'd to me, that Numbers there had made their Fortunes by mere Trifles and boyifh Gewgaws, and more efpecially by the Invention of fome new Fafhion, I then refolv'd to fwim with the Tide, and among Fools to play the Fool myfelf. Upon this I call'd to Mind all the moft ridiculous and extravagant Inventions of Europe, and being at Liberty to pick and chufe, I fix'd upon thofe Ornaments of the Head, which we call Perriwigs, and determin'd with myfelf to introduce this Fathion. What contributed to bear me out in this Attempt, was the great Number of Goats in this Kingdom, whofe Wool or Hair would be very proper for my Purpofe. And as my good Tutor (now at Reft) long exercis'd the Occupation of a Perriwig-Maker, I was not altogether ignorant of the Art. In fhort, I procur'd fome Goat's Hair, and made a Perriwig fitted to my own Head, and thus adorn'd, I appear'd before the Syndick. Startled at fo new and unufual an Appearance, he afk'd me what it was, and immediately fnatching it from my Head, he put it upon his own, and run to the Glafs to furvey himfelf. But how fhall I exprefs his Wonder and Delight? He burft into an Ecftaly of Pleafure, crying, $O$ ye Gods! and forthwith fent for his Lady to join with him in his Joy. Her-

194 A Journey to the Wonder was equal to his, and embracing the Syndick, fhe vow'd fhe never faw any Thing fo charming, and every Soul in the Family was of the fame Opinion. The Syndick then turning towards me, My dear Kakidoran, fays he, if this Invention of yours fould take with the Senate as it does with me, you may promife yourfelf every Thing. I thank'd his Excellence, and foon after put a Petition into his Hands, addrefs'd to the Senate, which I begg'd the Favour of him to offer. It was conceiv'd in thefe Terms.

Mof Excellent, mof Generous, mof Illuftrious, moft Noble, and moft Wife Senators.

:HE natural Propenfity, by which I am influenc'd to promote the "s publick Good, has now mov'd me to " contrive this new and hitherto unheard6s of Ornament for the Head, which here I " moft humbly offer to your Excellencies, "s and fubmit it to the Examination of " this auguft Tribunal, not doubting but it
"s will meet with a moft gracious Recep" tion, efpecially as the Invention muft 's conduce to the Glory, as well as Orna"s ment of the Nation, and make the ad" © miring World confefs, that the Marti" nians excel the reft of Mortals, not only os in the Virtues and Endowments of the " Mind, but in thofe Ornaments of the "Body which render the Perion grand and

* majeftick. I folemnly vow to all your " Excellencies, that in this I never con"s fulted my own Intereft, and therefore I " require no Reward: It is enough for me
" in my flender Capacity to have promoted
's the public' Welfare, and the Kingdom's
" Honour. But if the moft illuftrious Se-
"s nate are pleas'd to decree me a fuitable
"Reward for my Labours, I thall receive
" it with a grateful Heart, that fuch their " Munificence may be known throughout os the World, and others animated to the " like, or greater Inventions. In this View
" I cannot oppofe the Liberality of the Se-
's nate and People of Martinia. As to
"s the reft, I commend myfelf to the Fa-
"s vour of your Excellencies, and am,

May it pleafe your Excellencies,

Martinia, Your mof obedient, 7 th Day of Aftral.

And moft bumble Servant,
Kakidoran.
The Syndick produc'd the Petition with the Perriwig in open Senate. I heard that all Bufmefs was laid afide that Day, fo much did the Examination of the Perriwig engage the general Attention. Upon the Clofe of all, they prais'd the Work, extoll'd the Artift, accepted of his Good-will, and appointed him a Reward. In the whole Senate there were but three who oppos'd this

$$
\mathrm{K}_{2} \text { Motion; }
$$

196 A Journey to the Motion ; but they got no Credit by it, and were look'd upon as rude, unpolifh'd Creatures, totally unworthy of the fenatorial Function.

This Decree being pafs'd, I was commanded to appear before the Senate, where a fenior Monkey rifing up, thank'd me in the Name of the whole Commonwealth, and affur'd me they would reward me in a Manner fuitable to my great Merit. He likewife afk'd me, how much Time it would require to make fuch another Ormament? I reply'd, that as to the Reward, it was fufficient Recompence to receive the Applaufes of fo venerable a Body: As to the other Point, the making a fecond Perriwig, provided I might have the Affiftance of as many Monkeys as I could inftruct in the Art, I could undertake in one Month to furnifh almoft the whole City. At thefe Words, the Syndick rofe and faid, Heav'n forbid, Kakidoran, that fuch an Ornament fould be common to all the City, and grow into Difefteem by frequent Ufe! No; let the Nobility be by this difinguifh'd from the Vulgar. This Opinion was feconded by all the Senate, and the publick Cenfors were order'd to take due Care that this Decree fhould be inviolably obferv'd, that the Nobility receive no Difhonour by the promifuous Uie of Perriwigs, and that fo bright an Ornament fhould be referv'd folely for their Ufe. But this Edift had the fame Effect that all fumptuary Laws have, and only excited a fronger Defire in the Commons to tranfirefs them. And as this Invention had the Happinefs to pleafe every one, the richer Citizens, by Friends or Money, procur'd Titles of Honour to qualify them to wear Perriwigs, infomuch that in a Mhort Time a very great Part of the City was cnobled. At length, when Petitions arriv'd from the feveral Provinces, to be allow'd to come into this Fafhion, the Senate took the Matter under Confideration, and made a Repeal of the Law, with a Permifion for the promifcuous Ufe of Perriwigs; fo that I had the Pleafure to fee the whole Nation perriwig'd, if I rnay ufe the Exprefion, before I left.Martinia. And a moft delightful Sight it was! Such general Satisfaction did this Contrivance give, that it gave Birth to a new Epoch, or Date of Time, which was calld in the Martinian Annals, THE YEAR OF PERRIWIGS.

To return to myfelf. Surrounded with Applaufes, and cloath'd in a Purple Robe, I was carried back in a Chair to the Syndick's Houfe, and my Comrade Chairman now perform'd the Office of a Horfe for me. From that Hour I was admitted to the Syndick's Table. After this lucky Prelude of my Fortune, I purfued my Delign, and by the joint Labours of thofe I inftructed, I in a fhort Time finifh'd off Perriwigs enough to accommodate the whole Senate; and about the End of the Month the following Diploma of Nobility was brought me. K 3 "Whereas

198 A Journey to the

"Whereas a certain Perfon, by Name "Kakidoran, Native of a City call'd Europe, " has by a glorious and ufeful Invention " highly oblig'd the whole Martinian Na" tion: It is our Will and Pleafure to affo" ciate him into the Body of our Nobility; "s and we do accordingly decree, That he "s and his Heirs henceforth be reputed as " true and genuine Nobles, and enjoy all " fuch Privileges, Rights and Immunities, " as are claim'd by the Martinian Nobility.
" Moreover we have decreed to honour " him with a now Name, fo that inftead " of Kakidoran, he fhall now be flyld Ki"kidorian. And laftly, it is our Will and "Pleafure to fettle an anmual Stipend upon " him of two hundred Patari, to enable " him to fupport his new Dignity."

Given at our Court of Senate in Martinia, the 4 th Day of Merian, under our Great Sea!, &c.
Thus from a poor Chairman was I tranfform'd to a Nobleman; and for fome Time I liv'd in the higheft Repute, and with the utmoft Felicity. And as the Martinians faw I was in high Favour with the Syndick, every Creature made his Court to me. The Flattery of the Preferment-Hunters went fo far as to ftrive which fhould write the moft fulfome Panegyricks upon me, in which they kindly gave me a great many Virtues I never had. Some, though they knew I was a Native of an unknown World, yet reckon'd up for me a long Lift of Anceftors, and drew out Genealogies in a direct Line from Heroes of the earlieft Ages. Thefe Computations could not be very agrceable to me, nor was it poffible for me to think it an Honour to be defcended from Monkeys. Moreover, as it is ufual with the Martinians to celebrate the Tails of the Quality, as our Poets fing the Beauties of their Miftrefles, accordingly fome of the Martinian Poets celebrated my Tail in Verfe, though I never had any. In mort, to fuch a Height did their Flattery rife, that a certain Perfon of no mean Extraction, and whofe Name I fare upon Account of his Family, actually offer'd me the Enjoyment of his Wife, if in Return I would uie all my Intereft for him with the Syndick. This vile Propenfity to Flattery, to which all the Martinians are extremely fubject, makes it not worth one's while to read their Hifto-ries, which are little more than a Heap of extravagant Encomiums, though the Language of them is every where polite and elegant. Hence this Country produces better Poets than Hiftorians, which is owing to the fine Imagination of the Martinians.

I enjoy'd a tolerable good Share of Health while I was in this Country, tho the Heat, occafion'd by the continual Prefence of the Sun, was not a little troublefome. Once I was feiz'd with a Diarrhea, attended with a high Fever; but it was of no great Continuance: But during my Illnefs, the Phyftcian I made ufe of was ten Times more troublefome than my Diforder, by reafon of his Impertinence and Loquacity, which are fo peculiar to this People. Having Occafion for a Phyfician in that ill State of Health, a Ductor of Phyfick came a Voluntier, and offer'd me his Affiftance: I could not forbear laughing at the Sight of him, becaufe who fhould this be but my very Barber? I queftion'd him, how it happen'd that from a Barber he was fo foon metamorphos'd into a Doctor? He reply'd, he exercis'd both Profeffions. Upon this I was a little dubious, whether I ought to truit the Care of my Health to fuch a general Trader, and frankly told him, that I had rather have a Phyfician who profefs'd the Art of Phyfick alone; but he vow'd and protefted to me, that there was not one fuch throughout the whole City. I was therefore oblig'd to venture myfelf with him. The Hafte the Doctor was in increas'd my Wonder; for having prefcrib'd for me a Potion, he abruptly took his Leave, declaring he could not poffibly ftay longer, becaufe he was oblig'd to attend upon fome other Affairs, in which he was engag'd, at that very Time. And when I afk'd him what thofe Affairs could be which requir'd fuch violent Hafte, he told me, he was under a Neceffity of being at a MarketTown in the Neighbourhood by fuch an Hour, to act as a Notary-Publick, which was another of his Employments. This Multiplicity of Bufmeis is in great Vogue here, and every body is very ready to undertake any the moit oppofite and contradictory Offices. This Confidence is occafion'd by that wonderful Livelinefs of Genius, which difpatches Bufmess in a Trice. Yet from the various Miftakes and Blunders they daily commit, I concluded that thefe Geniufes, which are fo full of Fire, are rather an Ornament to the Commonwealth, than of any real Ufe to it.

World Under-Ground.  201

After I had fent two Years in this Territory, partly as a Chairman, and partly as a Nobleman, I fell into an Adventure which had like to have been fatal to me. In his Excellency's Palace, I had met with the higheft Civilities; I had alfo the Honour to be extremely in the good Graces of his Lady, infomuch that I feem'd to have the firlt Place in her Friendfhip. She often favour'd me with tete a tete Converfations; and the' the feem'd highly pleas'd with my Company, yet all fhe faid was with fo much Mo. defty and Delicacy, that it was impoffible to put a finifter Interpretation upon her Conduet in this Refpect, nor could I with all my Penetration guefs, that the Source of all this wondrous Goodnefs was an impure Parfion, more efpecially as the was a Lady of Quality, and as eminent for her Virtue, as for her Birth and Family. But, in Procefs of Time, from fome equivocal Speeches of hers, I could not but entertain a few Sufpi-

202 A JOURNEY to the
cions, which were confiderably increas'd by feveral evident Symptoms,
The wan Complexion, and the dying Eye, The ftedfaft Gaze, th' involuntary Sigh.
At length the Myftery was clear'd up, a young Virgin, her Confidante, bringing me the following Billet.

Lovely Kikidorian,

" $\quad$ Y Birth, and the natural Modefty of my Sex, have till now con" ceal'd thofe Sparks of Love, which lurk'd "s within my Bofom, and with-held them " from burfting into an open Flame. But " now, finking under the Oppreffion, I "can no longer refift the Violence of my " Wifhes.

Let this foft Secret all thy Pity move, Extorted from my Soul by raging Love.

> I am Yours,

> Ptarnusa.

Words cannot utter the Confufion this paffonate Declaration threw me into. But as I thought it better to be expos'd to the Vengeance of difappointed Love, than to difturb the Laws of Nature by mixing my Blood with a Creature not of the human Species, I return'd the following Anfwer.

MADAM,

THE repeated Favours I have receiv'd from his Excellency the Syndick, the Benefits he has heap'd upon an undeferving Stranger, the moral Impoffibility of complying with your Requeft, together with innumerable other Reafons which I forbear to recount; all this, Madam, determines me to hazard your Ladyfhip's Refentment, rather than confent to an Action which would render me of all two-footed Creatures the moft vile and abominable. Not Death itfelf is half fo terrible. The Crime too would bring an indelible Stain upon a moft illuftrious Family, and the who commands it muft be the greateft Sufferer. Let me conjure you, therefore, to pardon this Refufal, and be fatisfy'd, that in every other Refpect I thall always pay the profoundeft Obedience to your Lady hip's Commands. I am,

Madam,

Your moft bumble,
And moft obedient Servant, Kikidorian.
This Anfwer I feal'd up, and gave it to the Bearer to deliver to her Miftrefs. It had the Effect I fufpected. Hèr Love was chang'd chang'd into the ftrongeft Averfion. However, fhe deferr'd her Revenge till the had recover'd that Letter fhe fent to me. She then fuborn'd falfe Witneffes, who fwore that I attempted to violate the Syndick's Bed. This Story was cook'd up with fo much Art, and fuch an Air of Probability, that the Syndick, not making the leaft Doubt about it, threw me into Prifon. In this Extremity, there was but one Thing to be done, and that was, to make Confeffion of the Crime, and implore his Excellency's Mercy. By thefe Means, I hop'd to divert or foften his Anger, and procure a Mitigation of my Punifhment. For it was ridiculous to think of contefting the Matter with a powerful Family, efpecially in a Country, where not the Merits of the Caufe, but the fole Quality of the Perfon is regarded. Therefore omitting all Sort of Defence, I had Recourfe to the moft abject Supplications and Tears, imploring not a total Remiffion of my Punifhment, but only to have it moderated.

Thus by the Confeffion of a Crime I never dreamt of, I chang'd the Punifhment of Death for a perpetual Captivity. My Diploma of Nobility was taken from me, and torn in Pieces by the Hands of the common Hangman, and I myfelf was condemn'd to be a Galley-Slave all my Days. The Galley, or Veffel, I was fent to work in, belong'd to the Government, and lay in Readinefs for its Voyage to the Mezendores, or

Land of Wonders. This Voyage is undertaken at a ftated Time of the Year; namely, in the Month Radir. They fail to thele Parts in Queft of fuch Commodities as are not to be had in their own Country, fo that the Mezendores are a Kind of Indies to the Martinians. A Body of Merchants, as well Nobles as Citizens, are erected into a Society called the Mezendorian Company, among whom the IMerchandife of the returning Veffel is divided, according to their feveral Subferiptions and Shares. The Veffel moves both by Sails and Oars, and to every Oar two Slaves or Captives are affign'd: And to this Drudgery was I condemn'd during this Voyage. With what Reluctance I enter'd upon it, it is eafy to guefs, efpecially as I had done nothing to deferve being thus expos'd to fervile Labour, and to the Lafh, among Wretches and Slaves. Various were the Sentiments of the Martinians concerning my Misfortune. Some were of Opinion I was culpable, and therefore deferv'd the Punifhment; but then the Sight of me in that miferable Condition drew Compaffion from them. Others thought fome Regard ought to have been had to my former Services, and that therefore my Punifhment need not have been fo fevere. But fome of the honefter Monkeys mutter'd among themfelves that I was accus'd falfely, though no one dar'd openly undertake my Defence, through Fear of my powerful Accufers. I determin'd, however, to bear my Calamity with Patience. My greateft Comfort was the approaching Voyage ; for as I had always a ftrong Paffion for Novelty, I was in Hopes of meeting with fomething new and wonderful, though I could not give Credit to all the Sailors told me, nor bring myfelf to think that there were fuch Prodigies in Nature, as I afterwards met with. There were feveral Interpreters in our Veffel, whofe Affiftance the Mezendorian Company made ufe of in thefe Expeditions ; for all Contracts, as to Buying and Selling, were made by them.

206 A Journey to the

C H A P. XI.

> The Author's Voyage to the Land of W O NDERS.

BEFORE I proceed to the Defcription of this Voyage, I mult caution the rigid and cenforious Critick not to be too much out of Humour at the Relation of fome Things which perhaps may appear not to deferve any Credit, as being contrary to the ufual Courfe of Nature. If fall here recount Things very incredible, but very true, and of which I myfelf was an EyeWitnefs. The Vulgar and Illiterate, who never have fet a Foot beyond the Limits of their own native Country, are apt to look upon all fuch Things as fabulous to which they have not been accuftom'd from their Infancy. But the Learned, and efpecially fuch of them as are converfant in phyfical Enquiries, who know how fertile Nature is in her Productions, will look with a more favourable Eye upon the wonderful Parts of this Narration.

World Under-Ground.
Quis tumidum guttur miratur in Alpibus? aut quis
In Meröe craljo majorem infante mamillam, &c.
It is now well known, that there were a People formerly in Scytbia, called Arimajpians, who had only a fingle Eye apiece in the Middle of their Foreheads; and others in the fame Parts of the World, whofe Feet were fet on the contrary Way to ours. We read of People in Albania, who were grey-headed from their Childhood. The Sauromatians us'd to make a Meal but once in three Days, and to faft the intermediate ones. Mention is made of certain Families in Africa, who had the Art of fafcinating or bewitching People with the Sound of their Voices. The Inhabitants of Illyrium were remarkable for having two Pupils in each Eye, and us'd, when they were provok'd, to ftare their Enemies to Death. In the Mountains of India, there are fome Men with Dogs Heads, and who have been heard to bark like thofe Animals; others, with Eyes in their Shoulders. And in the fartheft Parts of the fame Country, there have been

203 A Journey to the

been found Animals refembling Men, with hairy Bodies, and Wings like Birds, who never eat, but live upon the Scent of Flowers, which they draw through their Noftrils. Now I may afk, Who would have given Credit to thefe, and the like Things, if Pliny, a very grave Hiftorian, had not folemnly affirm'd, not that he had heard or read of fuch Things, but that he himfelf had feen them? In like Manner, who would ever have thought that the Earth was hollow, and that another Sun, and other Planets, were contain'd within its Bowels, had not my own Experience clear'd up that Myftery? Or how could an Account of a World, inhabited by Trees endued with Reafon, and a Power of local Motion, have ever gain'd Belief, had not my Difcoveries prov'd the Exiftence of it beyond a Poffibility of Doubt. I am not inclin'd, however, to quarrel with any Man for his Incredulity, fince I mult confefs, that before I undertook this Voyage, I was a little in doubt myfelf, whether the Relations of Travellers in general were any Thing better than pompous Fables, and infignificant Amufements.

It was in the Beginning of the Month Radir that ive fet Sail. We had a fair Wind for fome Days, and our Veffel failing right before it, we had no Occafion to handle our Oars, and were therefore at Liberty to divert ourfelves. But on the fourth Day the Wind funk, and we were forc'd forc'd to take to our Oars. The Captain perceiving I was unaccuftom'd to fuch hard Labour, and unfit to bear it, would often give me Leave to reft a while, and at length he entirely freed me from this fervile Office. Whether he thought me innocent, and therefore fhew'd me fo much Kindnefs, or whether he judg'd me worthy of better Treatment on Account of the curious Invention of Perriwigs, which I had the Honour of, as I have before related, I cannot take upon me to determine. I mult however obferve, that he carry'd three Wigs along with him this Voyage, the Combing and Buckling of which was committed to my Charge. So that I was on a fudden advanc'd from being a Galley-Slave, to the Dignity of the Captain's Wig-Dreffer. This Civility of the Captain's to me was the Reafon that as often as we arriv'd at any Port, I was always one of the Number who were appointed to go on Shore. This was extremely agreeable to me, as it gave me an Opportunity of fully fatisfying my Curiofity.

We kept on our Courfe for fome Time without meeting with any Thing remarkable; but after we had loft Sight of Land we fell among the Syrens, who as often as the Wind abated, and the Sea grew calm, would fwim to the Ship, and beg our Charity. The Language they fpoke refembled the Martinefe, fo that fome of our Ship's Crew were able to talk with them without the the Help of an Interpreter. One of the Number, after I had given her a Piece of Meat, fixing her Eyes ftedfaftly upon me, cry'd out, Hero! proceed, and rule a conquer'd World!
I only finil'd at the Prophecy, as thinking it an empty Piece of Flattery, though our Sailors aflur'd me very ferioufly, that thefe Syrens were feldom or never out in their Predictions. We had been under Sail about eight Days when we difcovered Land, which the Mariners call'd Picardania. As we were entring the Harbour, we faw a Jack-Daw hovering about us, who upon Enquiry I found to be a Perfon of great Dignity, and at that Time Infpector-General of the Cuftoms. I could farce refrain from laughing, when I heard that an Office of fo great Truft was committed to a Jack-Daw, and from the Appearance of their Chief, I conjectur'd; that Wafps and Hornets muft be the Tide-Waiters and Cuftom-Houfe Officers. After this Bird had flown two or three Times round the Ship, he made for the Shore again, and prefently after return'd with three other Daws, and alighted upon the Fore-caftle. I was ready to burft with laughing, when I faw one of our Interpreters approach thefe Birds with a profound Refpect, and immediately enter into a long Converfation with them. The Reafon of their coming, was to infpeet what Merchandife we had on board, it being their Bufinefs to enquire, whether we had any contraband Goods, and particularly any of the Herb commonly call'd Slac. It is very common for thefe Creatures to fearch every Corner of the Ship, and to unpack every Bale of Goods, to fee if they can difcover any of this Herb, the Importation of which is prohibited by the Magiftrate, under a very fevere Penalty. The Inhabitants barter feveral Sorts of Commodities, which are very ufeful and neceffary towards the Support of Life, in Exchange for this Herb; from whence it happens, that the Plants which grow in Picardania, though every whit as good as this, are held in no Efteem. The Picardanions in this refemble the Europeans, who are often fond of Things for no other Reafon, but becaufe they are fetch'd from remote Countries, and grow in foreign Soils. The Infpector, after he had had a long Conference with our Interpreters, went down into the Hold with the reft of his Companions, and returning foon after, with an angry Countenance declar'd, that he forbad us trading with the Picardanians, becaufe we had acted contrary to the Faith of Treaties, in importing prohibited Goods. But the Captain, who knew by Experience how to mitigate the Officer's Anger, prefented him immediately with a few Pounds of Slac, upon which his, Anger fubfided, and he gave us Leave to unload our Cargo. As foon as this was over, a vaft Flock of Daws came fluttering about us. Thefe were all Merchants, chants, who came to traffick. The Captain intending to go afhore, order'd me, and fome others, to accompany him. Accordingly four in Number of us left the Ship, namely, the Captain, myfelf, and two other Monkeys, to wit, our Supercargo and Interpreter. We were invited to Dinner by the Infpector-General. The Inhabitants have no Tables, as not making any Ufe of Chairs, for which Reafon the Cloth was laid in the Middle of the Floor. A moft delicate and magnificent Repaft was prefently ferv'd up, but in very fmall Difhes: And as the Kitchen was at the Top of the Houfe, each Dih was brought in fupported by two Pair of Jack-Daws, as if it defcended from the Clouds. After Dinner the Officer took us along with him, to fhew us his Library. There was a vaft Collection of Books, but of a mighty fmall Size, the largeft Folios being fcarce fo big as one of our Primmers. I had much ado to withhold laughing when I faw the Librarian fly up to the Top-Shelves to fetch down fome of the Octavos and Duodecimos. The Houfes of the Picardanians are very little different from ours, as to the Building, and the Difpofition of the Apartments; but the BedChambers are fufpended juft beneath the Roof, after the Manner of Birds-Nefts. It may be afk'd, perhaps, how it is poffible for Daws, (who are reckon'd amongtt the Birds Minorum gentium) to build Houfes of fuch a Magnitude? But it was evident, from a Houfe

Houfe which was then building from the Ground, that the Thing was very poffible; for feveral thoufand Labourers were employ'd about it at the fame Time; fo that what was wanting in Strength was fupply'd by Numbers, and by the Agility with which they flew about their Work. For this Reafon they will finifh a Houfe almoft as quickly as our Bricklayers can. The Infpector's Lady did not appear at Table, by reafon of her Lying-in; for at fuch Times the Mother never ftirs out as long as her little ones are callow, but as foon as ever they begin to be fledg'd, her Hufband gives her Leave to go abroad. We did not ftay long in this Country, for which Reafon I can fay nothing as to the Government thereof, or the Manners and Cuftoms of the Inhabitants. Every Thing was in great Confufion at that Time, on Account of a War which was juft then broke out between the Daws and their Neighbours the Thruhbes, efpecially as News was brought the Day after our Arrival, that a great Batt'e had been fought in the Air, in which the Daws were entirely routed. The General was afterwards try'd by a Court-Martial, and fentenc'd to have his Wings clipt, which is look'd upon as a very heavy Punifhment in this Country, and very little different from what is inflicted for capital Offences. After we had difpos'd of the Cargo, we fet Sail from thence. At a little Diftance from the Shore, we faw great Quantities of Feathers floating about about upon the Water, and from thence conjectur'd, that it was the Spot where the late Battle had been fought.

After a profperous Voyage, which lafted only three Days, we arriv'd upon the Coaft of Crotchet-Ifland. We immediately came to an Anchor, and went on Shore, preceded by an Interpreter, who carry'd that Sort of mufical Inftrument along with him, which is generally call'd a. Bafe. This Ceremony appear'd very ridiculous to me, as I could not comprehend for what Reafon he fhould load himfelf with fuch an ufelefs Burden. As the Coafts feem'd to be deferted, and there was no Appearance of any living Creature, the Captain order'd our Interpreter to play a March, to give Notice of our Coming. Upon this about thirty mufical Inftruments, or Bafes, with one Leg, came hopping towards us. I thought at firft, that what I faw was all Inchantment, as I never, in all my Travels, met with any Thing fo wonderful. The Make of thefe Bafes, whom I afterwards found to be the Inhabitants of the Country, was as follows: Their Necks were pretty long, with little Heads upon them; their Bodies were flender, and cover'd with a fmooth Kind of Bark or Rind, in fuch a Manner, as that a pretty large Vacuity was left between the Rind and the Body itfelf. A little above the Navel, Nature had plac'd a Sort of Bridge with four Strings. The whole Machine refted upon one Foot, fo that their Motion was like that of Hopping, which they perform'd with wonderful Agility. In hhort one would have took them for real Bafes, from their Similitude to that Inftrument, had it not been for their Hands and Arms, which were in every Refpect like our own. One of thefe Hands was employ'd in holding the Bow, as the other was in flopping the Strings. Our Interpreter begun the Conference, by taking up the Inftrument he , had brought with hin, and playing a flow Strain.

Sufinet a lavâ, tenuit manus altera plectrum, Artificis fatus ipfe fuit: Tum famina docto Pollice follicitat.
An Anfwer was prefently return'd him in the fame Strain, and thus they went on warbling their Thoughts to one another for a confiderable Time. Their Converfation began with an Adagio, which I cannot but fay had a good deal of Harmony in it, but it foon nid into Difcords which were very grating to the Ear. The Conference ended with an harmonious and delightful Prafto. Upon hearing this laft our Men were exceedingly pleas'd, fince it was a Token, as they told me, that the Price of their Cargo was agreed upon. I was afterward inform'd, that the now Mufick in the Beginning was only a Prelude to the Difccurfe, and was employ'd in mutual Compliments on both Sides: But that when we heard the Difcords they were difputing about the Price of our

216 A Journey to the Commodities, and that the Prafto in the Conclufion fignify'd that the Bufinefs was happily determin'd. Accordingly a little while after we unloaded the Ship. The Commodity for which there is the greateft Demand in this Country is Rofin, with which the Inhabitants rub their Bows, which are their Inftruments of Specch. Such as are convicted of any great Crime in this Country, are generally fentenc'd by the Judge to be depriv'd of their Bows ; and a perpetual Privation of the Bow is equal to capital Punifhment amongft us. As I underftood there was to be a final Hearing of a Law-Suit in a neighbouring Court of Juftice, while I ftaid there, my Curiofity prompted me to hear fome of their mufical LawProceedings. The Council, inftead of making a Speech, mov'd their Bows, and play'd each of them a Kind of Tune. So long as the Pleadings lafted, I could diffinguifh nothing but diffonant and jarring Sounds; for all the Eloquence of the Bar confilts in the Loudnefs of their Notes, and the quick Motion of their Hands. After the Hearing was over, the Judge rifing flowly from the Bench, and taking up his Bow, gave the Court an Adagio, which is the fame Thing as pronouncing Sentence. For as foon as he had made an End, the Executioners advanc'd directly to the Criminal, to take away his Bow. The Boys in this Country refemble that Kind of InAtrument, which in our Parts of the World we call a Kitt. They are never fuffer'd to handle a Bow till they are three Years old. Upon their Entrance into their fourth Year they are fent to School to learn their Gamut, from Mafters appointed for that Purpefe, as Children in Europe are, to learn their Alphabet. They are kept under the Difcipline of the Ferula till they are able to play thoroughly in Tune, and to give their Inftruments a clear and diftinct Expreffion. We were very much molefted by thefe Boys during our Stay there, as they were perpetually teazing us with their fcraping. Our Interpreter, who had a very good Hand himfelf, and perfectly underftood the Language, told us, that the only Meaning of this Mufick was to beg a little Rofin of us. They begg'd in a whining Tone of the Adagio Kind, but as foon as ever they had got what they wanted, they run into the Allegro, or Jig-Time, which was their Method of returning Thanks. However, a Repulfe would at any Time fpoil all their Mufick.

Having difpatch'd our Affairs to our Satisfaction, we left this Place about the Month Eufan, and after a Voyage of a few Days came in Sight of a nother Coaft. Our Crew guefs'd it to be Pyglofra, from the fæetid Smell which came from thence. The Inhabitants of this Country are not un!ike human Creatures, except in one Particular, which is the Want of Mouths. This lays them under a Neceffity of fpeaking a pofteL rioris,
riori, if I may be allow'd the Phrafe. The firft Perfon who came aboard our Ship was a wealthy Merchant. He very civilly faluted us from behind, according to the Cuftom of the Country, and then began to talk with us about the Price of our Goods. The Barber belonging to our Ship, to my great Misfortune, was at that Time fick; for which Reafon I was oblig'd to make ufe of a Pygloffian Barber. The People of this Profeffion are more talkative, if poffible, in this Country, than they are in Europe; fo that whilft he was fhaving me, he left fuch a horrid Stench behind him in the Cabin, that we were oblig'd to burn great Quantities of Incenfe to fweeten it again after his Departure. I was fo accuftom'd to fee ftrange Things, and fuch as were contrary to the ufual Courfe of Nature, that nothing now appear'd furprizing to me. As the Converfation of the Pygloffians was difagreeable and offenfive, by reaion of this natural Imperfection, we were willing to get away from thence as foon as poffible, and therefore weigh'd Anchor before the Time we had appointed. We haften'd our Departure the more on Account of our being invited to Supper by one of the principal Inbabitants. We all fhrugg'd up our Shoulders at this Invitation, and nobody would accept of it, but upon Condition that a general Silence fhould be obferv'd all Supper-Time. As we were going out of the Harbour, the $P_{y}$ glofians crouded to the Shore to wifh us a good Voyage; but as the Wind blew directly from the Land, we made all the Signs we could, by nodding our Heads, and waving our Hands, to let them know we would excufe their Compliments. I could not help reflecting, upon this Occafion, how very troublefome a Man may prove by ftriving to be over-complaifant. The chief Trade of the Martinians to this Country, confifts in Rofe-Water, and divers Kinds of Spices and Perfumes. We fteer'd our Courfe from hence to Iceland, a Country the mof horrid, defert, and inhofpitable, that ever my Eyes beheld. Hardly any Thing is to be feen, but Mountains continually cover'd over with Snow. The Inhabitants, who are all made of Ice, are difpers'd here and there amongit the Tops of the Hills, in Places where the Sun never comes. For all between the Summits of the Mountains, to fpeak poetically, is bound up in eternal Froft. On this Account likewife it is perpetually dark here, or if there is any Light, it is only what proceeds from the Glittering of the Hoar-Froft. But the Valleys which lie between thefe Hills of Snow are (full as miraculoufly) fcorch'd with Heat, and burnt up by the fiery Vapours with which the Atmofphere abounds. For this Reafon the Inhabitants never dare venture down into the Valleys, unlefs it be in hazy Weather, or when the Sky is overcaft. And as foon as ever they porceive the leaft Glimmering of the Sun's Rays, they either get back into the Mountains, or plunge directly into fome Cavern. It often happens, that whifft the Inhabitants are upon the Road into thefe Valleys, they are either melted, or come to fome other Misfortune. The extraordinary Heat in thefe Places furnifhes them with a ready Means of punifhing notorious Criminals. The Executioners take the Opportunity of the firft cloudy Day to carry fuch Criminals down into the Plain, where they tie them to a Stake, and there leave them expos'd to the burning Rays of the Sun, which foon diffolves and melts them. The Country produces all Kinds of Minerals, except Gold. Thefe are bought up by foreign Merchants, in the crude State in which they are digg'd out of the Earth. For the Natives being unable to bear the Fire, know nothing of the Art of fmelting or working up of Metals. 'Tis thought that the Iceland Trade is the mof beneficial of any that is carry'd on in thefe Parts.

All thefe Countries, which I have been hitherto defcribing, are fubject to the great Emperor of Mezendoria, properly fo call'd; for which Reafon thefe, as well as others which have not been mention'd, are by Travellers call'd by the general Name of the $M_{e-}$ zendores, or Mezendorian Ifiands, tho' they are diftinguifh'd from one another by peculiar Names, as has been fhewn in this Itinesary. That Empire, which is no lefs fpacious than it is extraordinary, was the End, and as it were the Center of our Voyage. Eight

Fight Days after we left Iceland, we arriv'd. at the Imperial City. Whatever the Poets have faid about Societies of Animals, or 'Trees, we here found to be real. For Mezendoria is a Country which is actually poffefs'd in common by Animals and Trees, who are alike endued with Reafon. Any Kind of Animal or Tree whatfoever is allow'd to enjoy the Privileges of this City, provided he is obedient to the Laws, and to the eftablifh'd Government. One would be apt to think, that a Mixture of fo many Creatures of different Forms and oppofite Natures hould neceffarily create Diforder and Confufion. But by Virtue of prudent Laws and Conftitutions, this Contrariety is made to produce happy Effects. For by Means thereof, a different Office or Employment, and fuch as is fuited to his different Genius, Temper, and Abilities, is prudently affign'd to each of thefe mifcellaneous Subjects. Lions, becaufe of their innate Magnanimity, are here made Generals of Armies; Elephants, by reafon of their natural Sagacity, and the Soundnefs of their Judgments, are appointed Members of the Supreme Council of the Nation. All Offices at Court are fill'd up by Cameleons, which Animals being by Nature fubject to Change, can the more readily accommodate themfelves to Times and Circumftances. The Land-Forces are made up of Bears and Tygers, and fuch warlike Animals. Bulls and Oxen are admitted into the Sca-

Service; for thefe being fimple and wellmeaning Creatures, and at the fame Time hardy and obftinate, and not overburden'd with good Breeding, are therefore efteem'd the properef Inhabitants for that boifterous Element. They have likewife' a Seminary of Calves, which are inftructed in the Art of Navigation, and train'd up for the Service of the Fleet ; thefe are call'd Sea-Calves, and are promoted by Degrees to the Dignity of Captains and Admirals. Trees, by reafon of their Uprightnefs, are created Judges. Geefe are Advocates in the Supreme Courts of Juftice, and Magpyes have the Management of Caufes in the inferior Courts. Foxes are made Plenipotentiaries, Envoys, Confuls, Agents and Secretaries to Embaffies. Rooks are generally appointed Adminiftrators to the Goods and Chattels of fuch as die inteftate. Goats are Philofophers, efpecially Grammarians, as well out of Regard to their Horns, with which they are us'd to pufh their Adverfaries upon the flighteft Provocation, as on Account of their venerable Beards, in which Refpect they furpals all other Animals. Horfes are Civil Magiffrates; and Vipers, Moles, and Dormice, Farmers and Hufbandmen. Birds are employ'd as Couriers and Poft-Boys. Affes, on Account of the Loudnefs of their Voices, are made Deacons; and Nightingales execute the Office of Singing-Men and Choirifters. Cocks are the Watchmen in great Towns, and Dogs are Porters at the Gates. Wolves

Wolves are the fuperior Officers in the Treafury and Cuftom-Houfe, and Hawks and Vultures are their Deputies.

By Means of thefe excellent Inflitutions all publick Offices are duly, and faithfully executed, and every Thing tranfacted in the moft orderly Manner. This Empire, therefore, ought to be a Pattern for all Legiflators to copy after in the Eftablifhment of new Forms of Government. For that fo many worthlefs Wretches get into Employments is not owing to any Want of Perfons of Abilities to fill them up, but folely to an improper Choice. But if this Matter was taken Care of as it ought to be, and wife and able Men promoted not on Account of their general Merits, but of their Fitnefs to that particular Poft, we gould fee publick Offices far better manag'd than they now are, and Governments in a more flourifhing Condition. What a falutary Inftitution this is which we have been fpeaking of, is evident from the Example of this Empire. We find in the Annals of Mezendoria, that about three hundred Years ago this Law was repeal'd by the Eniperor Lilak, and that publick Employments were conferr'd upon all Sorts of People indifferently, provided they had Merit of any Kind, or had fignaliz'd themfelves by any extraordinary Action. But this promifcuous Diftribution of Places of Truft occafion'd fo many and fuch great Diforders, that the Government feem'd upon the Point L 4 of Example, a Wolf having acquitted himfelf with Reputation in the Management of the publick Revenues, lays Claim, on that Account, to a fuperior Dignity, and becomes a Senator ; on the other Hand a Tree, having fignaliz'd himfelf by the Integrity of his Decifions, was rewarded by an Employment in the Treafury. By this prepofferous Promotion, two able Men at once were rendered abfolutely ufelefs to the Publick. A Goat, or a Philofopher, who was extoll'd to the Skies by the Scholafticks, for his Keennefs and Obftinacy in defending an Argument, defiring to advance himfelf, requefted the firft Place that fhould happen ta be vacant at Court, and obtain'd it; whillt a Cameleon, noted for his Good-Breeding and his Compliance with the Times, obtain'd by thefe Qualities a Profeffor's Chair in the Univerfity, which he follicited for the Sake of the Salary. The Effect of this was, that the former from an able Philofopher became an abfurd Courtier; and the latter from an excellent Courtier, was tranfform'd into a moft empty Philofopher. For that Perfeverance in maintaining his Opinions, which does a Man Credit as a Philor fopher, is an Imperfection in the other Character, fince Ficklenefs and Inconftancy are cardinal Virtues at Court, and he that would rife there muft regard not fo much what is true, as what is fafe, and muft affume a different Alpect juft as the Face of Affairs.

Affairs happens to change. What is there a Vice, is a Virtue in the Schools; where Pofitivenefs, and a determin'd Refolution to adhere, at all Events, to the Point you have undertaken to defend, is a Token of a very great Man. In fhort, the Subjects in general, even fuch as were remarkable for very extraordinary Abilities, were by this Alteration in the Conftitution render'd ufelefs to their Country, and the Republick of courfe began to totter. In this State of Affairs, when every Thing was running to Ruin, an Elephant of great Prudence, named Baccari, at that Time a Senator, laid this Grievance before the Emperor in very pathetick Terms. That Prince, being convinc'd of the Truth of what was told him, determin'd to put an immediate Stop to the growing Evil. The Manner in which a Reformation was brought about was this. Such as were in Employment-were not immediately turn'd out, for by that Means the Remedy would have been worle than the Difeafe ; but as faft as Offices became vacant, fuch as already were in Employments, for which they were unfit, were remov'd to others better adapted to their Capacities. The good Effects of this Change foon became vifible; and Baccari, for the great Service he had done his Country, had a Statue erected for him, which is to be feen in the great Square in Mezendoria at this Day. Ever fince that Time the ancient Laws have ऊeen religioufly obferv'd. Our Interpreter

$$
\text { L } 5 \text { affirm'd,' }
$$

236 A Journey to the

affirm'd, that he had this Relation from a. certain Goofe, with whom he was very intimate, and who was reckon'd one of the moft eminent Lawyers in the whole City.

Many unufual, and even ftupendous Phænomena, are daily offering themfelves to View in this Country, and attracting the Eyes of Strangers and Travellers. The Sight alone of fo many Kinds of Animals, to wit, Bears, Wolves, Geefe, Magpyes, $\mathcal{E}^{\circ} c$. walking up and down the different Streets and Quarters of the City, and converfing familiarly with each other, cannot fail of exciting Admiration and Delight in thofe who are unaccuftom'd to fuch Kind of Sights. The firft Perfon who came on board us was a meagre Wolf, or CuftomHoufe Officer; he was attended by four Kites, or Under-Officers, fuch as in Europe are call'd Searchers. They feiz'd whatever they had a Mind to of our Cargo, and by that Means made it appear that they had learnt their Leffon perfectly, and were very far from being Novices in their Trade. The Captain, according to his ufual Civility, always took me along with him when he went afhore. We were met at our Landing by a Cock, who having afk'd the ufual Queftions, namely, what our Bufinefs was, and from whence we came, gave Notice of our Arrival to the chief Officer of the Cuftoms. We met with a very civil Reception, and were invited to fup with him. His Wife, who, as we were told 2 was a celébrated

Beauty

Beauty among the Wolves, did not make her Appearance at Table. The Reafon of her Abfence, we heard afterward, was her Hufband's Jealoufy, who did not think it proper to expofe a Perfon of her Beauty to the View of Strangers, and efpecially of Sailors, who by reafon of their long Abftinence, being generally very loving when they come on Shore, ufe little or no Diftinction in their Addreffes. Divers other marry'd Females fat down to Supper with us. One of our Company; a white Cow with black Spots, was the Wife of a Sea-Officer. Next to her fat a black Cat, who was Wife to one of the King's Huntfmen, and was juft come up out of the Country. The Perfon that fat next to me at Table was a particolour'd Sow, Wife to a Gold-finder, all Offices of this Kind being filld up by fuch as are of Hoggiih Extraction. She was very fluttifh, and fat down to Table without wafhing her Hands, which is a common Thing amongtt thofe of her Tribe; but then fhe was extremely officious, and help'd me feveral Times with her own Hands. Every body was furpriz'd at her unufual Civility, efpecially as thefe Creatures are by no Means remarkable for Politenefs. For my Part, I wifh'd the had not been quite fo well-bred, fince the being help'd by fuch Hands was not in the leaft agreeable to me. I muft here obferve, that though the Inhabitants of Mezendoria refemble Brutes, as to their Shapes, yet they have Hands and Fingers which grow out of their Forefeet, in which Refpect alone they differ from our Quadrupeds. They have no Occafion for Cloaths, as their Bodies are cover'd over with Hair or Feathers. The Rich are diftinguifh'd from the Poor only by certain Ornaments, as Collars of Gold, or Pearls, or Garlands wound in a fpiral Manner round about their Horns. The Sea-Officer's Lady was fo fet off with Ornaments of this Kind, that one could fcarce fee any Horns the had. She excus'd her, Hupand's.Abfence, by faying he was detain'd at home by a Law-Suit, a Hearing of which was to come on the Day following. After Supper was over, the particolour'd Sow, whom I. have been fpeaking of, took our Interpreter afide, and had a long Conference with him, the Purport of which was, that the had conceiv'd a violent Paffion. for me. He comforted all he could, and promifing her a mutual Paffion on my Part, he next began to make his Attack on me. But as he found his Words made no Impreflion upon me, he advis'd me to make. my Efcape as foon as poffible, fince he knew. the Lady would leave no Stone unturn'd to. gratify her Wifhes. From that Time forward I kept clofe on board, efpecially after I. heard that a former Admirer of her Lady-. thip's, a Student in Philofophy, who was grown jealous of me, had form'd a Defign againft my Life. I was fcarce fecure even on board againft the repeated Attacks of this.

228: A Journey to the
this Inamorata, who fometimes by Meflages, and at other Times by Billet-doux and LoveVerfes, endeavour'd to foften my obdurate Heart. Had not I unfortunately loft there: Letters, when I afterwards fuffer'd Shipwreck, I could here have prefented the Reader with a Specimen of Piggifh Poetry. But they are now flipt out of Memory, and all that I can at prefent recollect of them are the following Lines, in which the thusfets off her Beauties.
'Tis true, in dread Array my Brifflés rife; But let me not for this be hateful to thee. What is the Steed, without his flowing Mane? What are the feather'd Race, without their Plumes?
What is a Tree, fript of its leafy Honours? What is a mortal Man without his Beard? And what, ye Gods! a. Sow without her Briftles?:

We made an End of our Market with fuch Expedition, that we were in a Condition to fet Sail from thence in a few Days. Our Voyage, however, was retarded fome Time, by a Quarrel which happen'd betwixt our Sailors, and fome of the Inhabitants of the Country. The Occafion of the Quarrel was this. As one of our Men. was paffing through the City, a Cuckon; who had a Mind to be arch upon him, call'd him in Derifion Peripom, which fignifies the fame as a Stage-Plajer amongft us. For as Monkęs

230 A Journey to the
Monkeys in this Country are commonly Rope-Dancers and Comedians, the Cuckoo took our Martinian for a Player. The Sailor, refenting the Affront, fell upon him with a Cudgel, and repeating his Blow, almot maim'd him. The Cuckoo calling out for Help, defir'd the By-Standers to bear Witnefs of the Affault, and fummon'd them the next Day to give Evidence in a Court of Jufice. The Witnefes having been examin'd, the Matter was laid before the Senate. The Sailor being ignorant both of the Laws and Language of the Mezendorians, was furc'd to fee a Pje, or Lawyer, to be Counfel for him. The Caufe was thus brought before the Senate, and after a Hearing, which lafted about an Hour, Sentence was given to the foilowing Purpofe: That the Cuckoo, as being the Aggreffor, mould undergo the Punifhment in that Cafe provided, and pay the Colts of the Suit. However, the Lawyer's Fees had fwallow'd up all his Cafı already. The Judges who determin'd this Affair were Horfes, two of which were Confuls, and the other four Senators. An equal Number of Colts were likewife prefent, who had a Right of giving their Opinions, but not of voting, and were admitted into the Court as Pupils and Candidates to fill up Vacancies upon the Bench.

Having finifh'd our Affairs to our Satiffaction, and got our Loading which was very valuable on board, we thought of resurning home. Soon after we were out at Sea, a fudden Calin at once put a Stop to. our Courfe. Upon which we fell to our Diverfions, fome to fpearing of Fifhes as they leapt above the Surface, others to angling for them. By and by we had a Gale of Wind, and proceeded in our Voyage.

Having long plough'd the Ocean with a profperous Gale, we at length came in Sight of other Syrens, who by Intervals. would fet up a moft hideous and difma! Yell. This flruck an uncommon Terror into the Sailors, who knew, by woful Experience, that fuch mournful Mufick portended Storms and Shipwrecks. Hercupon. we immediately took in our Sails, and every Man was order'd to his Poft. We had fcarce made an End of our Work before we faw the Heavens cover'd with black Clouds. The Waves began to fwell, and fuch a Storm follow'd, that the Pilot, wh:o had us'd the Subterranean Seas for almoft forty Years, declar'd he had never known fo terrible a one. Every Thing that happen'd to be upun Deck was immediately wafh'd overboard, partly by Means of the Waves, which were every Moment breaking over it, and partly by the violent Rairis which fell at the fame Time, attended with dreadful Lightning and loud Claps of Thunder. So that all the Elements feem'd to confpire together for our Deftruction. Our Main-Maft was prefently broke fhort off and carry'd away, and the reft fon follow'd it. We had nothing now but Death before before our Eyes. One was calling out upon his Wife and Children, another upon his Friends and Relations, and the whole Veffel refounded with their mournful Cries. The Pilot, though without Hope himfelf, was neverthelefs oblig'd to footh the reft with Hopes, and to advife them not to give Way to unavailing Sorrows. Whillt he was in the Midft of this Difcourfe, a fudden Guft of Wind hurry'd him overboard, and he was quickly fwallow'd up by the Waves. Three others underwent the fame Fate, namely, the Purfer, and two Suilors. I was the ouly one who bore the general Calanity without repining. Life was grown a Burden to me, and I had no Inclination to return to Martinia, where I had forfeited my Liberty and good Name. All the Compaffion I had left was for the Captain, who had treated me with fo much Kindnefs during our whole Voyage. I ftrove with all the Eloquence I was Mafter of, to raiee his drooping Spirits; but in vain; he perfifted in his Sighs and womanifh Complaints, till a Wave came rolling over us, and carry'd him away with it into the Ocean.

232 A Journey to the

The Storm increafing ftill, no farther Care was taken about the Ship. Not a Maft, not a Rudder, or even fo much as a Rope or Oar was left; and our Veffel floated at Random on the Waves. We were tofs'd about in this Condition near three whole Days, half dead with Fear and Hun-

$$
\underset{\sigma}{\sigma} \in r_{0}
$$

World Under-Ground.
ger. The Sky appear'd ferene by Intervals, but neverthelefs the Storm continued with its ufual Violence. At length we difcovered land, the Sight of which, though it appear'd to be nothing but craggy Rocks and Precipices, was fome Comfort to thofe of the Crew who were ftill left alive. As, the Wind blew towards the Shore, we were in Hopes that we fhould foon be driven thither. But this could not happen without our fuffering Shipwreck, by reafon of the Cragginefs of the Coaft. It feem'd however probable, that fome of t:s, if not. all, by the Help of fome Fragments of the. Ship, might for the prefent at leaft efcape. But whilft we were comforting ourfelves: with thefe Hopes, we ftruck upon a Rock, which being under Water had efcap'd our Notice, with fuch Violence, that the Veffel was in an Inftant dafh'd into an hundred Pieces. In the Midft of this Confufion I. laid hold of a Plank, being only anxious formy own Safety, and little minding what became of my Companions, whofe Fate I am yet a Stranger to. It is moft likely that they were all loff, fince I could not hear of the Arrival of any of them into. that Country. I was carry'd with great Rapidity to the Shore, by the Help of the Tide and of the Waves. This was a Means of faving me, for had I continued a little longer in the State I was in, I mould certainly have perifh'd through Hunger and. Eatigue. After I had doubled the Point of.
a certain Promontory, the Waves abated, and I heard the Murmuring of them at a Diftance only, and that too by Degrees grew weaker and weaker, till it intirely vanifh'd.

This whole Region is mountainous, And hence the frequent Windings of the Mountains, their overhanging Tops, together with the Deepnefs of the Vales below, are the Occafion of very great Echoes here. As foon as I foumd myiclf near the Shore, I hollow'd out as loud as I was able, in hopes that fome of the Inhabitants upon the Coafts might hear me, and come to my Affiftance. My firt Shout was not return'd, but after I liad repated it, I heard a Kind of Noife from the Shore, and at length faw the Inhabitants runming out of the Woods, and coming to miset me with a Boat, which was made of Ofier Branches and Oaken Tvigs, a Proof that they were not a very improv'd or civiliz'd People. But the Sight of the Rowers gave me a Tranfport beyond Defcription ; for as to their exterior Figure, they did not differ at all from Men, and were the only Creatures of my own Species that I had beheld during this whole Subterranean Tour. They are fomething like the Inhabitants of the Torrid Zone. For they have black'Beards, and thort, curl'd Hair; and thofe who have long, flaxen Hair, are reputed a Kind of Monfters. At length they drew near to the broken Piece of the Ship I was upon, and took me into their: Boat

World Under-Ground.

Boat in a dropping Condition. They then row'd to Shore, where after I had been refrefl'd with fome Meat and Drink, though in a very plain and coarfe Manner, I foon: recover'd my Vigour and Spirits, notwithftanding I had been three whole Days and Nights in a Manner combating with Thirt and Hunger.

C H A P. XII.

The Aution's Arrival at Quama.

AND now a Croud of People furrounded me. They talk'd to me in their Ianguage, of which, as I was wholly ignorant, I was at a Lofs what to anfwer. They often repeated the Word Dank, Dank, which founding' like Hig' Dutch, I anfwer'd fir? in that Language, then in the Danifb 'Fongue, and laftly in Latin. But to all this they only fhook their Heads, to intimate that thefe Languages were utterly unknown to them. Then I try'd them in the Subterranean Languages, namely, the Na zaric, and the Martinian; but all to no Purpofe. This made me conclude, that they were an unfociable Nation, who had no Kind of Commerce with the reft of the World, and that therefore I fhould be under a Necefity in this Country of turning Boy',

236 A Journey to the Boy, and going to School once more to Iearn my Letters.

After we had convers'd fome Time together, but in fuch a Manner that we did not underftand one another, they brought me to a Cottage made of Ofiers. There were no Seat3, Benches, or Tables in it; for they eat upon the Ground, and for Want of Beds, they ufe only Straw, and fleep promifcuoufly on the Floor, which is the more to be admir'd, as they have Plenty of Timber among them. Their Food is Milk, Cheefe, Barley-Bread, and Flefh; which laft they broil upon the Coals, having no Notion of any other Sort of Cookery. In Goort, they liv'd in as plain a Manner- as the firft Race of Mankind. So that I was forc'd to live like a Cynic Philofopher, till I had made fuch a Progrefs in their Language as enabled me to converfe with the Inhabitants, and affift their Ignorance. And, indeed, all my Orders and Directions were obferv'd as fo many Oracles. Nay to fuch a Height my Reputation rofe, that they flock'd to me in Crouds from all the adjacent Towns and Villdges, as to an illuftrious Doctor, or a Teacher fent from Heaven. I heard aliö, that a new Computation of Time was made ufe of among them, which commenc'd from my Arrival. All this, I own, was fo much the more grateful to me, as in the Planet Nazar, and at Martinia, I had been a publick Jeft; in the former Place for my Vivacity and quick Conception, and in the latter for my Dulnefs. And here I experienc'd the Truth of that vulgar Saying, " Among the Blind, he that "fquints is a King." For I was now in a Country, where with a flender Share of Knowledge, and with ordinary Abilities, I could arrive at the higheft Honours. And Room enough there was here, to try my own Strength, and exercife my Talents; for the Country abounded to Profufion with every Thing neceffary for the Ufe of Man. Many Things it produc'd fpontaneoufly, and whatever Grain was fow'd, repaid the Hurbandman with ample Intereft. The Inhabitants were of a docil Difpofition, and by no Means deftitute of Wit and Underftanding; but then, as they had never been taught any Thing, they remain'd in the Depth of Ignorance. When I related to them the Circumftances of my Family, my Country, my Shipwreck, and the other Accidents that befel me in my Travels, nobody could be brought to believe it. For they were pofitive, that I was an Inhabitant of the Sun, and that I defcended from that glorious Luminary. Agreeably to this Conceit, they commonly call'd me by the Name of Pikil-Su, that is, Embaffador of the Sun. As to their Religion, they did not deny the Exiftence of a Supreme Being, but then they did not trouble their Heads about the Proof of that high Point; it was fufficient to them that their Fathers before them believ'd it : And this is their whole Syftem of Divinity. As to their Morality, they knew nothing except this fingle Precept of Not doing to ctbers what you would not have done to yourfolf. They knew no Law befide the fole Will and Pleafure of their Emperor, and therefore no Crimes, but thofe of a publick Nature, were ever punifh'd. Whatever Mifdemeanour was otherwife committed, all the Revenge the Neighbours took, was to avoid the Company of the Offenders, to whom fuch a general Contempt was ufually fo intolerable, that many have died for Grief, and as many more have laid violent Hands upon themfelves through a Wearinefs of Life. Chronology they know nothing of, only they compute their Years from the Eclipfe of the Sun, which happens by the Interpofition of the Planet Nazar; fo that when you enquire how old any one is, their Anfwer is, that he is fo many Eclipfes old. Their Phyficks are exceffively barren and abfurd; they believe the Sun is a Golden Plate, and the Planct Nazar 2 Cheefe. Wlen I enquir'd the Reafon why at ftated Times the Planet Nazar increas'd and decreas'd, they reply'd, that they knew nothing at all about it. Their Wealth and Subftance confifts chiefly in Swine, which they diftinguifh by fome particular Mark, and then fuffer them to run loofe in the Woods. They fourge and beat all fuch Trees as bear no Fruit, from a foolifh Opinion, that their Sterility proceed's from Malice and Envg. Such was the State of this poor miferable People; whom I almoft defpair'd of ever reducing to Humanity; but recollecting that Affertion of the Poet,

238 A Journey to the

Nemo adeo ferus eft, ut non mitefcere pollit, Si modo cultura patientem prabeat aurem,
I took Courage, and employ'd the whole Force of my Capacity and Abilitics in reforming thefe Barbarians. For thefe my Endeavours, and the Succefs which attended them, they regarded me as fomething above the Race of Mortals, and fo extravagant an Opinion did they entertain of my Wifdom, that they thought nothing was impoffible to me. Upon the Lofs of Cattle or Goods, they would come, at all Hours, to my Hut, and implore my Affiflance. One Day I faw a poor Peafant proftrate before my Door weeping and wringing his Hands, and crying out to me to help him. Upon Inquiry into the Occafion of his Grief, he complain'd to me of the Perverfenefs and Ill-Nature of his Trees, and bege'd me to interpofe my Authority to make them bear more Acorns.

I was inform'd, that the whole Country was in Subjection to a Monarch, whofe Refidence, at that Time, was about eight Days Journey from the Place I was now in. I fay at that Time, becaufe the Metropolis of the Empire was moveahle, thit is, his Majefty (whofe Place of Refidence was look'd upon as the Capital) had no Palace, or fix'd

Habi-

240 A Journey to the
Habitation, but liv'd in Tents, which he -tranfported, together with his Royal Family and the whole Court, from one Province to another. The Prince, who then fway'd the Sceptre, was a Man in Years, and was call'd Casba, which fignifies, Great Emperor. This Territory, with refpect to the Extent of it, merits indeed the Name of an Eimpire; but thro' the Ignorance of the Inhabitants, who do not know their own Strength, it makes no great Figure, but is expos'd to the Infults and Ridicule of its Neighbours, and is often oblig'd to become tributary to Nations in Reality more contemptible than themfelves.

Fame had now fpread my Name and Virtues over all the Provinces. Nothing of Moment was undertook without firft confulting me, and every unfucceffful Enterprize was afcrib'd to my Coldnefs and Want of Favour. Nay, fome had it in their Heads to appeafe my Anger with Sacrifices. I forbear to recount all the Follies of this flupid Nation, and fhall only give one or two Inftances, by which you may eafily judge of the reft. A big-bellied Woman came to me, to defire the might have a Boy. Another intreated me to make his old Parents young again. Another begg'd me to take him with me up to the Sun, that he might return from thence with as much Gold as he could carry. With there, and fuch unaccountable Requefts, was I continually pefter'd, tho' I fill reprimanded their Folly

World Under-Ground.

Folly in a fevere Tone: For I was afraid left that abfurd Conceit of my Power might terminate in divine Worfhip.

At length it reach'd the Ears of the Monarch, that a Stranger was arriv'd in his Dominions, who call'd himfelf the Ambaffador of the Sun, and who by giving moft wife and divine Inftructions to the Quamites (fo were call'd the Inhabitants of this Country, the Name of which was Quama) had convinc'd the People that he was more than Man. Upon this he prefently difpatch'd an Embafly to me, inviting me to Court. The Embafladors were in Number thirty, all cloath'd with Tigers Skins, a Drefs fo much the more honourable in this Country, as the Ufe thereof is permitted to none but thofe who have behav'd themfelves with Gallantry in the War againft the Tanachites. (Thefe are rational Tigers, and implacable Enemies to the Quamites.) But during all this Time, in the Village where I continued, I had run up a Stone-Houfe of two Stories, after the Manner of the Buildings in Europe. The Embaffadors beheld it as a ftupendousW ork, exceeding humanStrength, and therefore when they came to me to fignify his Imperial Majefty's Pleafure, they enter'd my Houfe with a religious Awe, as into a Temple or Sanetuary. The Speech they made to me, on this Occafion, was nearly this:
"Whereas the great Emperor Casba, our s6 Sovereign Lord and Mafter, derives his

242  A Journe: to the

"Origin from the great Spynko, Son of the "Sun, and Founder of the 2uamitic Em"s pire, he therefore thinks nothing could © be more fortunate or agreeable, than your " Arrival, efpecially as it muft be of the *s higheft Advantage to his Dominions, and "s as there is all the Reafon in the World to © hope, that under fuch an illuftrious and " celeftial Teacher, the Kingdom will, in 6s a fhort Time, wear another Face. For ©6 which Reafon he hopes you will fo much © the more willingly honour his Court, as " the Capital of the Empire is a more am" ple Field for the Exercife of your Vir" tues."

This Harangue being ended, I returned my humble Thanks to the Embaffadors, and accompanied them immediately to the $\mathrm{Pa}-$ lace. Though they had taken up fourteen Days in coming, yet in returning we fpent only four, which was owing to a Contrivance of mine. For as I had obferv'd a vaft Multitude of Horfes in this Country, which were of no Manner of Ufe, but rather a Burden upon the People, inafmuch as they liv'd in the Woods like wild Beafts, I laid open to the Natives the feveral Advantages which would accrue from the Service of thofe generous Brutes, and taught them the Art of breaking them. In a fhort Time a great Number were tam'd, and upon the Arrival of the Embaffadors, I had as many broke and prepar'd, as would ferve us all in our Return. At the Sight of the Horfes thus thus inftructed, the Embaffadors were amazed, but were afraid to mount them. But when they faw me and others guiding and turning them which Way we pleas'd, by Means of the Bridle, and that without Fear or Danger, they took Courage, after two or three Trials, and ventur'd upon the Journey. And this was the Reafon that they return'd in one Third of the Time they came. When we drew near the Place where the Royal City was fuppos'd to be, we heard that this famous Metropolis was remav'd into another Province, which oblig'd us to bend our Courfe another Way.

Upon our Approach to the Capital, the Fright and Surprize of the People is not to be exprefs'd. Many, ftruck with a Panick, abandon'd the Royal City. The Emperor himfelf kept fhuddring in his Pavilion, nor dar'd to go out of it, till one of the Embaffadors alighting from his Horfe, went and explain'd the Myftery to him. I was introduc'd foon after in great Form, and with a Train of People behind me, to the Emperor's Prefence. Casba was fitting on a Carpet, furrounded by his Courtiers. Having paid my Compliments to his Imperial Highnefs, he rofe, and afk'd me how the Emperor of the Sun did, the Founder of the Royal Family of Quama. To this Queftion, as I conceiv'd it neceffary to keep up the popular Error, I reply"d, "That I was " fent from the Monarch of the Sun to re"form the favage Manners of the 2 uaM 2 " mites ss mites with falutary Inftructions, and to "s open a Way for them not only to repel " the Infults of their Neighbours, but alfo " to enlarge the Bounds of their Empire, "s and that I had Orders to end my Days " among them." This Speech highly pleas'd the Emperor. He commanded a Tent to be erected for me near his own ; he alfo affign'd me fifteen Domefticks to attend on me, and, laying afide the Monarch, behav'd to me always like a Friend.

244 A JOURNEY to the

C H A P. XIII.

The Rife of the fifth Monarchy.

FROM that Time forward, I was wholly taken up in giving a new Form to the Government, and inftructing the Youth in military Difcipline.
Ante urbem binc pueri, Eo primevi fore juventus Exercentur equis, domitantque in pulvere curAut acres tendunt arcus, aut lenta lacertis Spicula contorquent.

I began with teaching them the Management of Horfes, and training them for War, as I 'hop'd that by our Horfe alone our Neighbours might be kept in Awe. The Emperor was foon fupply'd, through my Diligence, with fix thoufand Horfe. The

$$
\text { World Under-Ground. }{ }^{245}
$$

Tanacbites were at that Time preparing for a frefh Invafion, on Account of the Delay of the annual Tribute, the Payment of which had often been follicited in vain. I was order'd by the Emperor to go and meet the Enemy with my new-rais'd Cavalry, to which were added a Body of Infantry. Thefe were arm'd with Pikes and Javelins, with which they might engage the Tanacbites at a Diftance. For the Quamites had hitherto made ufe of thort Swords or Daggers only; for which Reafon being oblig'd to engage Hand to Hand with very fierce Enemies, who were much fuperior to them in Strength, they had always fought upon unequal Terms:-

Being appointed General in this Expedition, as foon as I heard that the Tanachites were drawn up in Order of Battle, not far from the Borders of our Empire, I march'd to meet them with all my Forces. The Enemy, thunderftruck with the Sight of an unexpected Army, remain'd for fome Time motionlefs: But our Forces advancing towards them, began to handle their Pikes and Javelins as foon as the Enemy came within Reach, and made a heavy Slaughter of them. The Tanachites, however, did not lofe Courage, but made a brifk Attack upon our Infantry: But the new-rais'd Horfe falling upon their Flanks, their Ranks were quickly broken, and they themfelves put to Flight; fo that the Fortune of the Battle wholly turn'd on this Affault. A.

246 A JOURNEY to the terrible Slaughter enfued, and the General of the Tanachites, together with twenty Tigers of the firft Quality, were taken Prifoners, and led in Triumph to Quama. It is fcarce to be exprefs'd what Joy this extraordinary Victory diffus'd throughout the Empire ; for the Quamites had generally been routed in all former Battles, and forc'd to beg a Peace upon the moft difhonourable Termis. The Emperor, according to Cuftom, immediately fentenc'd all the Prifoners. to be executed: But as I had an Abhorrence of this Cuftom, I advis'd the keeping them in Cuftody, thinking the Tanachites (with whom we could neither be faid to be at War, nor in Peace, at that Time) would be quiet, until they faw what was to become of their Prifoners. And befides I urg'd, that a Truce was neceflary for me, to put fome Schemes in Execution which I was then projecting. I had before taken Notice, that the Country abounded with Salt-Petre, and had got together a large Quantity of it, in order to make Gunpowder. I had not however communicated my Defign to any body but the Emperor, whofe Authority I ftood in need of, to erect Offices for cafting Barrels for Guns, and other Kinds of Weapons: And I was in Hopes, that by the Help of thefe Inftruments all the Encmies of this Empire might in a fhort Time be fubdued. After I had got fome Hundreds of Murkets made, together with a Quantity of Ball, I gave a publick Specimen

World Under-Ground.

men of my Invention, to the great Aftonifhment of every body. A certain Number of Men were immediately fet afide, to be continually exercis'd in the Management of thele Mufkets. After the Mufketeers came to be pretty ready in their Exercifes, I was declar'd Yacbal by the Emperor, or Generaliffimo of all his Forces, and all the fubordinate Officers were order'd to receive their Commands from me. Whilft thefe Affairs. were tranfacting, I had frequent Conferences with Tomopoloko, the General of the Tanacbites, in order to difcover the State, the Manners and Difpofition of that Nation. I found him, to my great Surprize, to be a Perfon of Prudence, Learning, and Politenefs, and was inform'd by him, that Literature and Arts were in no fmall. Efteem in the Country of the Tanachites. He told me likewife, that there were a very warlike People Eaftward of them, whom the Tanacbites were oblig'd to be perpetually upon their Guard againft. The Inhabitants were fmall of Stature, and much inferior to the Tanachites in Strength of Body; but then their Underftandings were very acute, and they were eminent for their Dexterity in managing their Javelins, or Darts, and for this Reafon had often compell'd the Tanachites to fue for Peace. I learnt afterward, that that Nation was compos'd of Cats, and that of all the. Inhabitants of the Firmament, they were the moft remarkable for their able Judgment M 4 and and Skill in Politicks. It was no fmall Grief to me to be inform'd, that Learning, Wifdom, and Politenefs, flourifh'd amony all the Creatures of this Subterraneous World, Man only excepted, and that the 2uamites alone were barbarous and unciviliz'd. I hop'd, however, that this Reproach would foon be remov'd, and that the Quamites would recover that Dominion which Nature has given to Man over all other Animals.

The Tanachites continued quiet for a long Time after their laft Defeat; but after they had difcover'd, by Means of their Spies, the State and Difpofition of the new Body of Horfe, namely, that thofe Centaurs, which had ftruck fuch a Terror into them, were nothing elfe but Horfes, which had been broke and manag'd, they refum'd new Courage, and rais'd frefh Forces, which the King himfelf commanded in Perfon. The Army confiffed of twenty thoufand Tigers, all veteran Troops, except two Regiments which had lately been inlifted. There newrais'd Forces were however a nominal, and not a real Addition to their Strength: This Army, flufh'd with Hopes of Vietory, ftruck a Terror into the whole Empire of Quama. Twelve thoufand of our Foot advanc'd to meet them, among which were fix hundred Mufketeers, together with four thoufand Horfe. As I had no Doubt about the Succefs of the Battle, left the Emperor fhould be defrauded of the Glory of the Vicaory, I intreated the old Man to put himfelf

World Under-Ground.

 249himfelf at the Head of his Forces. I loft nothing of my . Credit by this feign'd Modefty, fince the whole Army look'd upon me as their Leader. I thought it molt advifable not to let my Mufketeers have any Share in the firft Affault, having a Mind to try, whether we could not carry the Vietory by Means of the Horfe alone. But this Piece of Management coft me dear. For the Tanachites attack'd our Foot with fo much Violence, that they oblig'd them to give Way: They ftood likewife the Shock of our Horfe fo valiantly, that for a long Time it could not be faid to which Side the Victory inclin'd. While we were in the Heat of the Battle, I led my Murketeers on to the Attack. At the firf Difcharge of our Artillery, the Tanachites were in a Manner ftupefy'd. They could not conceive from whence thofe Thunders and Lightnings proceeded; but when they faw the dreadful Effects thereof, they were feiz'd as it were with a Panick. This firft Salutation laid two hundred Tigers proftrate on the Ground, amongft which were two Chaplains belonging to the Camp, who wers each of them pierc'd thro' with a MufketBall, whilft they were encouraging the Soldiers to do their Duty by very pathetick Difcourfes in Praife of Valour. Their Fate. was bitterly lamented by all, for they were reckon'd admirable Orators. As foon as I perceiv'd the Terror our Enemies were in, I- order'd a fecond Difcharge to be made: M 5

250 A Journey to the

This did more Execution than the former : Great Numbers were kill'd, and among the reft, the King himfelf. Upon this the Enemy lofing all Hopes, turn'd their Backs. Our Horfe purfued them, and made fo great a Slaughter of them as they fled, that the Multitude of Carcaffes with which the Field was covered, at length put a Stop to their Purfuit. After the Battle was over, and we had Time to take an Account of the Number of the Slain, they were found to amount to thirteen thoufand. The Enerny being thus intirely routed, the victorious Army enter'd the Country of the Tanachites, and' after a few Days March encamp'd under the Walls of the Metropolis. Such a Terror had at that Time feiz'd all Peoples Minds, that though the Town was ftrong, and well fecur'd by its Situation, Walls, and Forts, and well ftor'd with Provifions of all Kinds, yet the Magiftrates came out in the moft fuppliant Manner to meet the Conquerors, and to offer them the Keys of the City. This City was no lefs remarkable for its great Extent, than for the Cleannefs of its Streets, and the Neatnefs of its Buildings. And it was certainly Matter of great Wonder, that the Quamites, who were encompafs'd on all Sides by Nations fo polite, fhould have continued fo long in their Barbarity. But they were in this Refeect like fome other Nations, who though ignorant of what paffes in foreign Countries, entertain a bigh Conceit of themfelves, felves, and who having no Commerce or Communication with others, live hugely contented in their own Sordidnefs and Ignorance, of which it would be very eafy to produce Inftances among the Europeans. This Defeat became a new Æra among the Tanachites; and as this decifive Battle was fought, according to their Computation, upon the third Day of the Month Torul, they reckon this among the unlucky Days. At this Seafon of the Year, the Planet Na zar, whofe Revolution round the Subterranean Sun regulates the Time, and diftinguifhes the Seafons, is at its fartheft Diftance from this Part of the Firmament. The whole Firmament likewife makes its Revolution round the Sun, but as the Planet moves with greater Velocity, Nazar feems to increafe or decreafe, according as it is nearer to, or more remote from this or that Hemifphere. The Increafe or Decreafe of this Planet, as alfo the Eclipfes of the Sun, are the Subject of aftronomical Obfervations in this Country. I once took the Pains, at my Hours of Leifure, to examine the Tanachitifl Kalendar, and it feem'd to me to be an orderly and well digefted Thing.

The Taking of the capital City was follow'd by the Surrender of the whole Kingdom; fo that the Contempt with which the Quamites had been before ftigmatiz'd, was chang'd into Renown ; and the Empire of 2uama, by the Addition of this conquer'd Nation, became almof twice as powerfu!
powerful as it was before. But as every body look'd upon this Succefs to be owing to my Induftry and Management, the Efteem which they had for a long Time conceiv'd for me was heighten'd almoft into Adoration. The Tanachites being thus fubdued, and Governors appointed in every City, to keep this fierce and warlike People in their Duty, I went to work, to finifh the Tafk I had begun, and to root out that Barbarity in which the Guarnites were as yet involv'd. It was a. Matter of, great Difficulty, however, to introduce the Study of the liberal Arts at once; for the Latin Tongue, and a few Scraps of Gireek, which I had learnt in Europe, would not, I knew, be here of any Ufe. For this Reafon, I caus'd twelve of the moft learned Tigers to be fent for out of the Enemies Country. Thefe were made Profeflors, and commanded to found an Univerfity upon the Model of thofe in their own Country. I likewife order'd the Royal Library of Tanachin to be remov'd to $2^{2 u a}$ ma. I was determin'd, however, that as foon as the 2 uamites had made fuch a Progrefs in Literature as to be able to ftand upon their own Legs, I would fend thefe: Foreigners back into their own Country.

I was very defirous of feeing the Tanasbitijh Library, becaufe I had been inform'd by their General Tomopoloko, that amongft. other Manufcripts in the Archives of the Library, there was one compos'd by an Author who had been in our World, and had, left.
left a Defcription of its different Kingdoms, especially the European ones; he told me likewife, that the Tanacbites had got Pufferfin of this Book while they were at War in a very diftant Country, but that the Name of the Author was conceal'd, nor. could it ever be learnt who he was, or how. he was carry'd to the Superterranean Habistations.

Upon looking over the Book, I found what Tomopoloko had told me concerning the Author was true, and therefore I candidly. difcover'd my Race and Country to him, affuring him at the fame Time, that I had declar'd the fame Thing to the Quamites at. my firft Arrival, but that the ftupid Mortals gave no Credit to my Narration, but would needs have me to be an Embaflador from the Sun, and fill continued to perfiff obelinately in that Error. I added likewife, that as I look'd upon it to be a Crime to keep fo vain a Title any longer, I was at length determin'd to difcover my Origin to the Publick, by which ingenuous Confeffion. I thought my Reputation would not in the leaft fuffer, especially as I hop'd, that the Reading of this Book would convince. every body how much the Europeans exce all other People in Virtue and in Knowledge. The prudent Tomopoloka did not rem pleas'd. with my Defign, and gave me his Sentiments upon it, as I remember, in the following Terms. "Good Sir, bess fore you proceed in your Defign, it will

254 A Journey to the

"f be neceffary for you to fee the Book, the " Reading of which may, perhaps, divert
" you from your Purpofe; for either the "Author has mifreprefented them, or the " Manners of the Superterraneans are fool-" ifh and abfurd, and they are govern'd by "Laws and Cuftonss more worthy of " Laughter than Regard. But" after you " have read the Book, you may ufe your " own Difcretion. One Piece of Advice,
" however, I will prefume to give you,
" and that is, not rafhly to reject a Title-
" which has render'd you fo venerable in " the Opinion of the 2 uamites: For no" thing ferves more effectually to reftrain
" Men within the Bounds of Duty, than " the Opinion which the Vulgar entertain " of Birth and high Defcent."

I took the Advice, and determin'd, with the Affiftance of Tomopoloko, to read the Book. The Title of it is this; Tanian's Fourney to the Superterrancan World, or a $D_{e}$ fiription of the Kingdoms and Countries uponEartb. The Name of Tanian is thought to be fictitious, and as the Book was grownmouldy for want of being taken due Care of, and imperfect in feveral Places throughLength of Time, what I wanted moft to fee, namely, which Way the Author got up to our World, and down again, was miffing. Thefe are the Contents of what remain'd of the Work.

Fragments of Tanian's Fourney above Ground, tranflated from the Original, by the celebrated, noble, and valiant Tomopoloko, General of the Tanachites.

*     *         * This Country (i. e. Germany) goes by the Name of the Roman Empire; but this is merely titular, for the Roman Monarchy has been extinct for feveral Ages. The Language, which the Germans ufe, is with. much Difficulty to be underftood, becaure the natural Order of the Words is inverted; for what goes firft in other Languages, comes. laft in this, fo that you may be oblig'd to. read to the End of a Page before you can comprehend the Meaning of it. The Form of Government is ftrange. The Germans think they have a King, and yet in Reality they have none. Germany is faid to be one Empire, and yet it is divided into many feparate Principalities, each of which has the Sovereign Power within itfelf, fo that. they often make War upon one another, and have moft certainly a Right fo to do. The Empire is faid to be always Auguft. though it is fometimes very much diminih'd; Holy, tho' without any Holinefs; Invincible, though often expos'd to the Depredations of its Neighbours. Nor are the Rights and Privileges of this Nation lefs wonderful, fince many have Rights, which they are prohibited from making any Ufe of. Infinite are the Comments which have been

256 A Journex to the

been publifh'd upon the State of the German Empire, but fo intricate is the Subject, that in Spite of all their Labours they are at every Turn as much at a Lofs as ever concerning it ; for ****

*     *         *             * The Capital of this Kingdom (France) which is very large, is call'd Paris. It may in fome Senfe be ftyl'd the Capital of Europe: For it exercifes a Kind of Juridiction over all other European Nations. For Example, it prefcribes Rules to them about their Eating, and about the Fafhion of their Cluaths; fo that let any Fafhion be as ridiculous and as inconvenient as it will, all, other Nations are oblig'd to follow it, whenever the Parifians are pleas'd to lead the Way. How or what Time they acquir'd this Right, I could never learn. Their Authority, however, did not, as I underftood, extend to other Things, for the reft of the European Nations are often at War with the French, and fometimes force. them to accept of Peace upon very fevere Terms; but the Servitude they are under with regard to Drefs, and the Manner of Eating is perpetual ; fo that whatever Fa fhion is invented at Paris, the reft of Europe are ftrictly oblig'd to come into it. The Parifans very much refemble the Marsinians in Quicknefs of Apprehenfion, the Love of Novelty, and a Fertility of Invention.
. Having left Bomonia, we went to Rome. This City is fubjeft to a Prieft, who, who, though his Dominions are very narrow, is reckon'd the moft powerful of all the European Kings and Princes. For other Princes exercife Dominion only over the Perfons and Eftates of their Subjects, but this can deftroy their Souls likewife. The Europeans in general believe, that the Keys of Heaven are in the Cuftody of this Prieft. I was very defirous of feeing fo great a Cu riofity, but I loft my Labour, nor do I know, to this Day, what Form they are of, or in what Cabinet they are kept. The Authority which this Pontiff exercifes, not only over his own Subjects, but over all Mankind, chiefly confifts in this, that he can abfolve whom God condemns, and condemn whom he abfolves. An enormous Power, indeed! and fuch an one as our Subterraneans will never believe can fall to any Mortal's Share. But it is an eafy Matter to impofe upon the Europeans as one pleafes, and to make them fwallow the greateft Abfurdities, though they imagine that nobody has any Underftanding but themfelves; and being puff'd with this Opinion, they look down with Contempt upon: all other Mortals, as if they were Barbarians in Comparifon of them.

For my Part, I do not undertake to juftify the Manners, Laws, and Cuftoms of our Subterraneans; I will only produce fomeInftances of the Cuftoms of the Europians, in order to make it appear how undefervedly they:

258 A Journey to the
they pafs a Cenfure upon the Manners of other' Nations.

It is a Curtom all over Europe for People to fcatter a Kind of Meal, which is made by grinding the Fruits of the Earth, and which Nature intended for Food, over their Hair and Cloaths: This Meal is commonly call'd Porvder, and great Care and Pains are us'd to cleanfe their Hair from it every Morning, with an Infrument call'd a Comb, in order to make Room for more of the fame Sort. They have another Cuftom which appear'd to me no lefs ridiculous, which is this. They have a Kind of little Cover, or Hat, to defend their Heads againft the Cold, which Cover they very often wear under one of their Arms, even in the very Depth of Winter: This appear'd as abfurd to me, as it would have been to have feen a Man walking through the Streets with his Coat or his Breeches in his Hand, and leaving his Body to be expos'd to the Inclemencies of the Air, from which they were intended to defend it.

The religious Opinions of the Europeans are very found and agreeable to right Reafon. They are under an Injunction carefully to ftudy the Books in which the Rule of Faith and Practice is contain'd, in order to difcover their true Senfe and Meaning. Thefe books recommend Indulgence to weak Brethren, and fuch as happen to be miftaken; but if any fhould chance to underftand a Thing in a different Senfe from

World Under-Ground.

from the Majority, he is punifh'd for this' Defect of Judgment by Fines, Imprifonment, Whipping, and even fometimes by dying at a Stake. This feem'd to me the fame Thing, as if a Man, who happen'd to. be fhort-fighted, fhould undergo the Baftinado, only becaufe Objects, which feem. fquare to me, appear round to him. I was inform'd, that Thoufands had been hang'd and burnt, by Order of the Magiftrate, on this Account.
In almoft every Town and Village, yous fee Men flanding up in Places of publick Refort, and feverely reprimanding others for thofe Sins which they themfelves are daily guilty of; which is juft as if one fhould hear a Man in Liquor declaiming againft Drunkennefs.
Oftentimes a Perfon who is born humpback'd, crooked, or lame, fhall be ambitious of being thought handfome; and another fprung from the Dregs of the People, fhall be ambitious of a Coat of Aims, or a Title: Which is full as abfurd as if a Dwarf fhould affect to be call'd a Giant, or an old Man, young.

It is a Cuftom in great Towns, for Friends and Acquaintance to vifit one another after Dinner, in order to drink a Kind of black Broth made of burnt Beans. This Broth is commonly call'd Coffee. When they make thefe Vifits, they are fhut up in a Box, which is fix'd upon four Wheels, and drawn to the Place of Rendezvous by two Beafts of very great Strength : For the Europeans think it a Difgrace to ufe their Legs.

260 A Journey to the

Upon the firf Day of the Year the Europeans are feiz'd with a Difeafe, which we have no Knowledge of amongit us. The Symptoms of it are ffrange Commotions and Agitations of Mind, and an Inability to fit flill in any Place. They run about at fuch Times from one Houfe to another, as if they were diftracted, without knowing why they do it. The Difeafe fometimes lafts for fourteen Days. At length, when they are quite fatigu'd and fpent with continually running about, they come to themfelves again, and recover their former Health.

As the Europeans have innumerable Difeafes of Mind, fo they have innumerable Remedies. Some are feiz'd with a ftrange Paffion of walking in fuch a Manner, as that the left Sides of their Bodies may be turn'd towards the right Sides of others. The farther North you go, the ftronger you find this Humour, which proves that it is all owing to the Climate, and the Intemperature of the Air. This Difeafe is cur'd by certain feal'd Papers, fill'd with Characters of a particular Kind. As long as the Patient carries thefe Papers about him, by Way of Talifman or Charm, he grows better and better by Degrees, till he is quite recover'd.

World Under-Ground.

Another raging Diftemper they have, which is cur'd by the Sound of a Bell, at the Noife of which the Mind immediately grows calm, and the Diforder abates: Yet this Remedy is by no Means effectual, becaufe in two or three Hours Time the fame raging Evil returns.

In Italy, France, and Spain, during the Winter Seafon, an epidemick Madnefs prevails for feveral Weeks. They put a Stop to it at length, by fprinkling the Foreheads of the Patients with Afhes, at an appointed Time. But in the Northern Parts of Europe thefe Afhes have no Virtue, and the Inhabitants of the North recover by the Help of Nature only.

Moft of the Europeans enter into a folemn Covenant with God, which they call the Communion, three or four Times a Year, and break it as foon as ever they have made it. So that they feem to make it for no other Reafon, but that they may fhew that they are refolv'd not to ftand to their Agreement.

When they confefs their Sins, and implore the Mercy of God, their Words are generally fet to Mufick. Flutes, Trumpets, and Drums, are fometimes added to the Concert, according to the Greatnefs of the Crime, for which they are fuing Pardon.

Almoft all the European Nations are obliged to confefs their Belief of a Doctrine contain'd in a certain facred Book. But the

262 A Journey to the
the reading this Book is totally prohibited in the Southern Countries, fo that People there are laid under a Neceffity of believing what it is criminal to read or enquire into.

In the fame Countries, Men are forbad to worfhip God in any, but an unknown Tongue; fo that fuch Prayers only are thought to be legitimate, and agreeable to the divine Being, as are put up by Perfons, who do not underftand a Word they fay.

In the great Cities, fuch as arrive at Honours and profitable Employments are all paralytick; for they are oblig'd to be carry'd along the Streets, like weak and impotent People, on a Kind of Couch, made in the Figure of a Cheft or Box.

Moft of the Europeans fhave their Heads, and to conceal their Baldnefs, wear an artificial Covering made of other Peoples Hair.

The Controverfies which are commonly difcufs'd in the Schools in Europe, are about Things, the Knowledge of which neither concerns Mankind, nor is within the Reach of their Comprehenfion. But the moft learned Subjects of all, which the Europeans comment upon, are the Rings, Robes, Slippers, Shoes, and Burkins of certain antiquated People, who liv'd many Centuries ago. As to the Sciences, as well facred as profane, the Generality do not judge for themfelves, but fubfrribe implicitly to the Opinion of others. Whatever Sect they happen to fall into, they ftick to it with all ima-imaginable Firmnefs. As to what they fay of pinning their Faith upon the Slecve of others who are wifer than themfelves, I fhould approve of it, were the Vulgar and Illiterate proper Judges of this Matter; for to be able to diftinguifh who is this wife Man that may be rely'd upon, requires the greateft Wifdom.

In the Southern Countries, a Sort of little Cakes or Wafers are carry'd about the Streets, which the Priefts fay are Gods: But what is moft furprizing, the very Ba kers themfelves, who fhew you the Flour of which they were made, will take their Oaths upon it, that the World was created by thefe Wafers.

The Englifh are very fond of Liberty, and are fubject to nobody but their Wives. As to their Religion, it is hard to fay what it is, for they take up an Opinion one Day, and throw it afide the next. I imputed this fickle Difpofition to the Situation of the Country. For the Englifb live upon an Inand, and being a maritime Pcople, partake much of the Nature of the inconftant Element that furrounds them.

The Englifh are very follicitous about the Health of every one they meet, fo that a Man would take them all to be Phyficians. But that common Queftion, How do you do? I found to be only an empty Form of Speech, and a Scund without any Senfe or Meaning in it. Many of thefe Inlanders take fo much Pains to improve their Minds, and polifh their Underftandings, that at length they intirely lofe them.

264 A Journey to the
Towards the North, there is a Republick confifting of feven Provinces. Thefe go by the Name of the United Provinces, tha' there is but little Sign of Concord or Unity amongft them. The People here boaft of their Power, as if the whole Authority of the Republick was lodg'd in their Hands; and yet the Populace are no where more excluded from publick Employments, and the fupreme Power is vefted in a very few Families. The Inhabitants of thefe Provinces are deeply attentive upon heaping up Riches, which they make no Ufe of; fo that while their Purfes are full, their Bellies are empty. They feem to live upon Smoke only, which they fuck in thro' a Tube or Pipe, which is made of Clay. It muft be allow'd, however, for the Honour of this Nation, that they are the neateft of all People, for they take great Care to wafh every Thing except their Hands.

In the Cities and great Towns in Europe, a Watch is kept in the Street by Night. The Watchmen go their Rounds every Hour, and wake People out of their Sleep, by wihhing them a good Night.
Every Country has its peculiar Laws, and its peculiar Cuftoms likewife, which are ofttimes diametrically oppofite to thofe Laws. For Example: A Wife, according to the Laws, ought to be fubject to her Hubband;

World Under-Ground.

but according to Cuftom, fhe has a Right to govern him.

Thofe who live moft luxurioully, and confume the greateft Quantity of the Products of the Earth, are held in moft Efteem in Europe; and only Hufbandmen, and fuch as fupply Materials for the Luxury of the Great, are treated with Contempt.

The great Number of Gibbets, Gallows's, and Places of Execution, which are every where to be feen, fhew the Europeans to be People of very bad Difpofitions, and fubject to many Kinds of Vices. There is a publick Executioner in every City. The Englifh are an Exception to this Rule, amongit whom, I believe, there are no Executioners; for the People in that Country hang themfelves.

One would fufpect the Europeans to be Anthropophagi, or Men-Eaters; for it is a Cuftom amonglt them to fhut up a great Number of able-body'd Men in Cloifters, which they call Monafteries, for no other End, but that they may grow fleek and fat: And whilft they are kept in thefe Cells, they are utterly exempted from all Labour, and have nothing to do but to eat and drink.

The Europeans have a Cuftom of drinking Water every Morning, to moderate the Heat of their Stomachs; but before they are well grown ccol by this Means, they go to work to warm them again, by fwallowing N down

266 A Journey to the

down Draughts of fiery Liquors, which they call Drams.

The Religion of the Europeans is divided into two principal Sects, one of which are call'd Proteftants, and the other Papifts. The former worfhip one God only; but the latter adore feveral, for they have as many Gods and Goddeffes, as there are Towns and Villages. All there Gods and Goddeffes are made by the Roman Pontiff, or High-Prieft. This Pontiff himfelf is made by Prefbyters, commonly call'd Cardinals. Hence it appears how great the Power of thefe Cardinals muft be, fince they can make him who makes the Gods.

The ancient Inhabitants of Italy conquer'd the whole World, and were only fubject to their Wives: But the modern ones tyrannize over their Wives, and are Slaves to all Mankind befides.

The Animals in Europe are divided into terreftrial and aquatick. There are fome amphibious ones likewife, as Frogs, Dolphins, and Dutchmen. The laft dwell in a marfhy Soil, and live upon Land or Water indifferently.

The Europeans ufe much the fame Food that we do: But a Spaniard will live upon Air.

Trade flourifhes much in every Part of Europe, and many Commodities are fold there in which we never traffick: Thus, for Example, the Romifh Church fells Heaven; the Swifs fell themfelves; and in  Crowns, Scepters, Sicepters, and the Royal Authority itfelf are fet to Sale.

In Spain, Lazinefs is the Token of a Gentleman, and nothing is a greater Recommendation of Nobility than fleeping much. Thofe are call'd good Men and true Believers, who believe what they do not underftand, and never think it worth their while to examine what they hear. Some have even been reckon'd Saints merely for their Slothfulneis, their Want of Curiofity, and their neglecting to enquire into religious Matters. But thofe who are follicitous about their own Salvation, and happen, through a diligent and accurate Enquiry, to diffent from any reigning Opinion, are faid to be damn'd to all Eternity.

It is a prevailing Opinion in Europe, that future Happinefs or Mifery does not depend upon good Works, or the Exercife of Virtue and Religion, but upon the Place of a Man's Nativity. For all agree, that if they had been born in another Place, or of other Parents, they fhould have been of a different Religion. Hence they in Reality condemn People not fo much on Account of their Religion, as the Place, or other Circumftances of their Birth. But how this Opinion is reconcileable with the divine Juftice or Goodnefs, I cannot comprehend.

Amongtt the Men of Letters, thofe are moft efteem'd, whofe Bufinefs it is to invert the natural Order of Words, and render that obfcure and perplex'd, which before was plain and eary. Thefe are call'd Poets, and this Art of disjointing Words goes by the Name of Poetry. But Poetry does not confift in this Perverfity of Stile only; becaufe to deferve that Name, a Compofition muft likewife be extremely full of Lies. An ancient Poet, Homer by Name, is held in high Efteem, and almoft Adoration, becaufe he excell'd in both thefe Arts. Many have imitated him, but nobody ever yet came up to him, either in confounding the Order of Words, or perverting the Truth.

265 A Journey to the

The Literati of Europe are very fond of buying Books, but in this Point they do not fo much regard the Matter they contain, as they do the Form and Neatnefs of them. The Bookfellers, who are well aware of :this, and know that their learned Cuftomers had rather feaft their Eyes than their Minds, are perpetually reprinting their Books in a different Size and Letter, and with new Decorations; by which Means they make an infinite Advantage. For in this Country the liberal Arts are made a Trade of, and fome Authors are reckon'd as fharp and cunning as any Trader at all.

The Univerfities in Europe are Shops, where Degrees, Promotions, Dignities, and various Kinds of Titles, and other learned Wares, are fet to Sale at reafonable Rates: All which are not to be acquir'd in our Subterranean World without indefatigable Pains and Study for Years together. Thofe who have reach'd the Summit of all Erudition, or (in the European Phrafe) have got to the Top of a certain Mountain, call'd Parnaffus, inhabited by nine Virgins, are ftyl'd Doctors. The next to thefe are Marters of Arts, who come at their Titles at fomewhat a lefs Expence, and are therefore thought to be lefs learned. The Good-will which thefe Superterranean Schools bear to Mankind is evident, from their thus rendring the Way to Learning fmooth and eafy. The Northern Seminaries were a little more rigid in this Refpect, fince the higheft Honours are not there conferr'd without a previous Examination.

The Learned are diftinguilh'd from the Illiterate by their Drefs and Manners, but chiefly by their Religion; for the latter worfhip only one God, but the former pay their Devotions to feveral. The principal Deities of the Learned are Apollo, Minerva, the Nine Mufes, and others of an inferior Rank, which Writers, and efpecially Poets, are wont to invoke at fuch Times as they fall into Raptures, or a Kind of Raving.

The Learned, according to the Diverfity of their Studies, are diftinguifh'd into various Claffes; for Inftance, Philofophers, Poets, Grammarians, Naturalifts, Metaphyficians, $\xi^{\circ} c$.

A Philofopher is a literary Merchant, who fets to Sale Precepts concerning Self-Denial, Temperance, and Poverty, at a ftated Price, and fpends his Time in writing and declaim-

A Journey to the

ing againf Riches till he grows rich himfelf. The Father of thefe Philofophers was one Seneca, who, by this Method, amals'd together a princely Fortune.

A Poet is a Perfon who acquires Renown by being thought to be out of his Senfes. Hence it is ufual to fpeak of all great Poets, as poffers'd with a divine Fury or Diftraction; and all who exprefs their Thoughts with Simplicity and Perfpicuity, are judg'd unworthy of the Laurel.
The Grammarians are a Sort of Militia, whofe only Bufinefs is to difturb the publick Peace. They differ from the other Soldiery in this Refpect, that inftead of a Coat of Mail, they wear a Gown, and fight with their Pens inftead of Swords. They contend as obftinately for Letters and Syllables, as the outhers do for their Liberties and Properties. The Reafon why they are kept up, I believe, is this, that the European Princes are afraid left People in a Time of Peace fhould grow dull, and lofe their Spirits for want of fomewhat like a War. Sometimes, however, when thefe Differences begin to threaten Bloodfhed, the Senate interpofes its Authority. An Accident of this Kind happen'd not long ago at Paris, as I was told. For a Difpute concerning the Letters Q and K growing to a Height among the Doctors, the Senate wifely put an End to it, by allowing every one to ufe the Letter he lik'd beft.

A Naturalif, or Natural Philofopher, is a Perfon who diligently enquires into the Nature of Quadrupeds, Reptiles, and Infects of all Kinds, and who is acquainted with everv Thing, except himfelf.

A Metaphyfician is one who alone knows thofe Things which are conceal'd from others, and who can defcribe and define the Effence of Spirits and of Souls, of Entities and Non-Entities ; and who being very fharp-fighted in fpying out Things at a Diftance, overlooks fuch as are almoft under his Nofe.

Such is the State of Learning in Europe. I could fay more upon this Head, but it is fufficient to have touch'd upon the principal Points. The Reader will eafily judge from hence, whether the Europeans are right or wrong, in thinking no People have any Knowledge but themfelves.

It muft be confefs'd, however, that the Doctors and Malters in Europe, are much more dextrous in inftructing Youth, than our Subterraneans are. For they have Mafters of Arts, and of Languages, among them, who teach others not only what they have learnt themfelves, but even what they are utterly unacquainted with. If it is an arduous Tafk, to communicate clearly to others what we know ourfelves, furely it is much more fo to teach them what we are intirely ignorant of.

Amongtt the Men of Learning, there are fome who apply themfelves, with equal Diligence, both to Philofophy and Divinity. Thefe Men, as Divines, dare not deny, what as Philofophers they very much doubt of.

The Europeans apply themfelves to Letters with as much Induftry as we do; but they hecome learned in much lefs Time, by Means of a certain extraordinary magical Invention, by the Help whereof they can read over a hundred Volumes in a Day.

TheSuperterraneans are very religious, and conftant at Divine Service; but their Times of Worfhip are not regulated by the Motions of the Heart, but by the Ringing of Bells, by Clocks, or Sun-Dials; fo that this Devotion feems to be purely mechanical, and to depend upon Externals, upon Cuftom, or upon ftated Times, rather than to flow from the Dictates of the Heart.

Their Tafte for religious Duties apppears from their Cuftom of finging Hymns or Pfalms, while they are cleaving Wood, wafhing Difhes, or employ'd in any other manual Labour.

When I arriv'd in Italy, I look'd upon myfelf to be Lord of the whole Country, for every one I met profefs'd himfelf my Slave. Having a Mind to try how far this Servility, which they made fuch a Shew of, would extend, I order'd my Landlord's Wife to be brought to me one Night: But he immediately fell into a Paffion, and comnianded me to pack up my Baggage and be gone ; and as I did not make hafte enough, he fairly turn'd me out of Doors.

In the Northern Countries, People are very fond of Titles, though they have not the Poffeffions which belong to them. They are likewife extremely ambitious of the upper Hand. Moreover * **

Thus far I patiently attended, but my Indignation was now rais'd, and I would hear no more, declaring, that thefe were Fictions of a partial Writer, and one who was over-run with Spleen. But when my Heat a little abated, I began to form a more favourable Judgment of this Itinerary, as I faw that the Author, though he appear'd in many Places to be partial, and not to have had the beft Regard to Truth, was not, however, miftaken in his Judgment, but had often hit the Nail, as we fay, on the Head.

I now determin'd with myfelf, to take the Advice of Tomopoloko, and cherifh the Error of the Quamites concerning my Origin ; fince I thought it more for my Intereft to pafs for an Embafiador Extraordinary from the Sun, than for a Citizen of Europe.

Our Neighbours had now continued quiet for a long Time, and 1 had taken the Advantage of this wifh'd for Peace, to fettle the Republick to my Satisfaction. News at length arriv'd, that three very powerful Na tions had enter'd into an Alliance to invade the 2uamites. Thefe were the Arctonions, the

N 5 Kijpu-

274 A JOURNEY 10 the

Kifpucians, and the Alectorians. The Arcionians were a Nation of Bears, who were endued with Speech and Reafon, and were reckon'd very fierce and warlike. The Kijpucians were Cats of an extraordinary Size, and were in great Repute among the Subterraneans, for their Sagacity and Judgment: For this Reafon they kept fome very powerful Enemies in Awe, not fo much by their fuperior Strength, as by their Artifice and Stratagems. The Alectorians fought in the Air, as well as upon Land, and by that Means gave their Enemies infinite Vexation: Thefe were Game-Cocks, arm'd with Bows and Arrows dipt in Poifon, which they manag'd with wonderful Dexterity, and thereby did great Execution.

Thefe three Nations, alarm'd at the unufual Succefs of the Quamites, enter'd into a League or Alliance, by which it was agreed to check the growing Power of the Quamites with their united Force, before it fpread any further. However, before they declar'd War, they fent Embaffadors to Quama, to demand that the Liberties of the Tanachites might be reftor'd, and to threaten War, in cafe fuch Demands were not comply'd with.

The Embaffadors deliver'd their Commiffion, and receiv'd the following Anfwer, which was given them by my Advice : That the Tunachites having broken the Peace, and violated the Faith of Treaties, ought to impute the Misfortune they were fallen fallen into, to their own Foliy and Prefumption; that the Emperor was refolv'd, with all his Might, to defend the Territories he had acquir'd by Right of W ar ; and laftly, that he was not to be aw'd by the Threats of the Confederate Nations. The Heralds were difmifs'd with this Anfwer, and we turn'd our 'Thoughts towards making Preparations for the impending War. In a fhort Time I got together an Army of forty thoufand Men, among which eight thoufand Horfe, and two thoufand Mufketeers. The Emperor, though he was grown decrepid through Age, refolv'd to be prefent in this Expedition, and was inflam'd with fuch a Thirft of Glory, that neither I myfelf, nor the Emprefs and her Children, who join'd with me in ftriving to overcome his Obftinacy, could divert him from his Purpofe. What gave me the moft Difturbance at that Time, was my Jealoufy of the Tanachites; for I was afraid left they fhould grow weary of their Servitude, and. lay hold of that Occafion to flake off the Yoke, and join the Enemy. Nor was I. deceiv'd in my Conjecture; for a little while after War had been proclaim'd, News. was brought us, that twelve thoufand $T a$ nachites had taken Arms, and were gone over to the Enemy. Hence I faw, that we Ohould have four powerful Enemies to ftruggle with at one and the fame Time.

World Under-Ground.

All neceflary Preparations being made, the Army was commanded to begin their March.

276 A Journey to the March towards the Enemy in the Beginning of the Month Kilian. As we were upon the Road, Intelligence was brought us, that the Confederate Forces had enter'd the Country of the Tanachites, and laid Siege to the Cattle of Sibol, which was fituated on the Borders of the Ki/pucian Territories. The Place was attack'd with fo great a Force, and with fo much Violence, that the Governor was juft going to furrender it. But as foon as the Enemy were inform'd of our Approach, they broke up the Siege, and march'd againft us. The Battle was fought upon a Plain, not far from the Fortrefs which had been beficg'd, from whence it was call'd the Battle of Sibol. The Arctonians, which compos'd the Enemies left Wing, falling upon our Horfe, made great Slaughter of them ; and, as this Attack was fupported by the Rebel Tanachites, it was very near proving fatal to us. But the Mufketeers going in to their Affiffance, and having thrown the Enemy into Diforder by two Difcharges of their Artillery, the Face of the Battle was quite chang'd; fo that they who but juft now had borne down our Horre, and were almoft Conquerors, being now borne down themfelves, began to give Way, and at laft to turn their Backs. In the mean Time the Kijpucians brifkly attack'd our Foot, and fhot their Arrows with fo much Art, and with fuch Succefs, that fix hundred 2 tuamites were, in a very little Time, either thot dead, or defperately wounded.
wounded. But the Horfe, together with the Mufketeers, coming to their Affiftance, the Enemy were oblig'd to fave themfelves by Flight; which they did, however, in fo good Order, without once breaking their Ranks, that they might be rather faid to yield than fly. This was owing to the Conduct of Monfonius, General of the KiJpucians, who at that Time was thought to excel all the Subterranean Generals in the Art of War. The Alectorians yet remain'd, whom it was no eafy Matter to fubdue; for as oft as our Mufketeers fir'd upon them, the Enemy fprung up all at once into the Air, and thence difcharg'd a Shower of Arrows, which were fo well aim'd, that few of them fell to the Ground without doing Execution. The Reafon why there Arrows feldom mifs'd their Aim, was becaufe it is eafier to hit an Object when you are above, than when you are below it. Our Men often mifs'd their Mark, becaufe the Enemy were fo volatile, and perpetually fhifting Places. In the Midft of the Engagement, whilft the Emperor was in the very Heat of Action, his Neck was pierc'd through with a poifon'd Arrow. He fell from his Horfe immedia:ely, and was carry'd out of the Battle to his Tent, where he expir'd foon after. In this ticklifh Situation of Afiairs, I thought it moft advifable to injoin all fuch as had been Witnefles of this unhappy Accident, to keep it fecret, left the Ardour of the Soldiers fhould abate upon hearing the

Emperor

278 A Journey to the Emperor was dead. I bade them take Courage, and told them, that the King indeed was ftunn'd with the fudden Stroke, but that the Arrow had not enter'd deep; that the Wound had been fearch'd, and taken due Care of; that every Thing would go well, and that they might expect to fee their Emperor again very foon. By this Means moft of the Army were kept in Ignorance of what had happen'd, and the Battle was prolong'd till Night. At lergth the Alcciorians quite fpent with Labour, and the Wounds they had receiv'd, retir'd into their Camp, and a Truce of a few Days Continuance was agreed upon, in order to bury the dead Bodies. In the mean Time, as I found that there was need of fome other Stratagem to fubdue the Alectorians, I order'd our Mufket-Ball to be caft into fmall Shot. This Project was attended with fo good Succels, that at our next Encounter the Alectorians came tumbling down apace, and one Half of the Army perifh'd in a miferable Manner: Thofe that were left feeing this, threw down their Arms, and begg'd for Peace. The Arctonians and Kifpucians follow'd their Example, and committed themfelves, their Arms, and Fortreffes to our Mercy. Matters being thus brought to a happy Iffue, I call'd a Council, and addrefs'd them in the following Harangue.

"Gentlemen and Fellow-Soldiers, I do "s not doubt but moft of you are well ac-

World Under-Ground.

" quainted, how carneffly I diffuaded our " moft Serene Emperor from this Expedi" tion ; but his imnate Fortitude and Mag" nanimity would not permit him to re"' main idle at home, while his faithful Sub-
's jects were expoling their Lives abroad in "' his Defence. I can truly fay, that this
"6 is the only Requelt which his Imperial " Majefty ever refus'd to grant me. How
"s happy fhould I have thought myfelf had " he refus'd me every Thing befides, and " only been indulgent to me in this! For
" then we hould not have known that Ca - " lamity that now hangs over us, our Re" turn into the Imperial City would have " been truly triumphant, and our Joys for " our Succefs would have been pure and " unmix'd. I cannot, nor indeed ought I, "6 any longer conceal from you that fatal " Accident which has thus dafh'd all our " Happinefs. Attend then to the dreadful " News: Your Emperor, while he was "gallantly fighting for his Subjects, was "pierc'd by an Arrow in the Battle, and " now lies breathlefs in his Tent. What " Grief, what Anguifh muft not the Lofs
" of fuch a Prince occafion? I can eafily " make a Judgment of your Sorrows from "what I feel myfelf. But let us not give "Way to Defpondency; Death, to fuch a "Hero, is not the End of Life, but only
" the Period of Mortality. We have not "wholly loft our Emperor, fince he has " left two Princes behind, form'd after the "Example

280 A Journey to the

" Example of the beft of Parents, and who
"6 inherit their Father's Virtues, as well as " his Dominions. You cannot, therefore,
" be fo properly faid to change your King,
" as the bare Name of King. And fince
" the eldeft Prince, Timufo, is by Right of "Primogeniture to be promoted to his Fa - " ther's Throne, I fhall henceforth derive
"s my Authority from him. He it is to " whom we ought to fwear Allegiance, and
"t to whom we will now pay Homage."

C H A P. XIV.

The Author is elevated to the Imperial Dignity.

AT the Conclufion of this Harangue, the Soldiery lifted up their Voice and cry'd, We will bave no Emperor but Pikilfu. I was all Aftonifhment at this, and with a Flood of Tears befought them to confider better, to remember the Allegiance they ow'd to the Imperial Houfe, and the publick as well as private Benefits they had receiv'd from the departed Monarch, which it was not poffible to forget, without bringing an indelible Stain upon their Character. To this I added, that if ever they had Occafion to commaud my Services, I could be of equal Ufe to them in a private Capacity. But all this fignify'd nothing. The Officers and Soldiers join in the common Cry, and the whole Camp refounded with the beforemention'd Acclamation. Upon this, I retir'd to my Tent in Confufion, and order'd the Guards to give Entrance to none: Becaufe, probably, the Soldiers might return to Reafon, when this fudden Fit of Zeal fhould cool. But the Generals and common Soldiers burft into my Tent, and in fpight of all my Reluctance, adorn'd me with the Enfigns of Royalty, and conducting me out of the Tent with Trumpets and Drums, proclaim'd me Emperor of Quama, King of Tanachin, Arcionia, Alectoria, and Great Duke of the Kippucians. Seeing then how vain was all Refiftance, I no longer ftruggled with my Fortune, but follow'd the Torrent ; and I muft own, that I was not altogether unwilling to be rais'd to this Elevation; for an Empire, with three Kingdoms, and a Great Dutchy, was too delicious a Morfel to be ey'd with Indifference. I immediately fent to the Prince, to acquaint him with the prefent Situation of Affairs, and to advife him to infift ftrenuoufly upon his natural and hereditary Rights, and to declare this new Election void, as being contrary to the Laws of the Realm. But at the fame Time I had refolv'd with myfelf not to relinquifh in Hafte an Empire thus fpontaneoufly offer'd me; fo that this Advice of mine to his Highnefs the Prince was rather :o feel his Pulfe upon this Occafion. The Prince had an admirable Underftanding, knew the Doubles and Difguifes of the human Heart, and that this Modefty of mine was only put on to ferve a Turn, he wifely yielded to the Neceffity of the Times, and after the Example of the Army, he himfelf proclaim'd me Emperor in the Capital City, to which I was foon after led in Triumph, attended by the Generals and Officers of the Army, in the midft of the Shouts and Acclamations of the Populace. In a few Days after this, I was folemnly crown'd, and invefted with the Regal Authority. Being thus metamorphos'd from a miferable Shipwreck'd Sailor into a Monarch, that I might ftrengthen my Intereft with the Quamites, who I perceiv'd had fill a great Veneration for the Royal Race of Quama, I efpous'd the Daughter of the deceas ${ }^{2}$ d Emperor, whofe Name was Ralac.

Having perform'd thefe great Things, I projected new Schemes, to raife the Empire to a Height that fhould make it formidable to the whole fubterranean World. My firft Care was to affure myfelf of the Duty and Allegiance of the lately conquer'd Na tions. To this End I garifon'd all their Citadels and fortify'd Places in the ftrongelt Manner, treated the Conquer'd with the utmoft Humanity, and advanc'd fome of them to very great Offices in the Capital. In particular the Captive Generals, Tomopoloko and Monfonius, had the higheft Share in my Favour, a Circumftance that rais'd the Envy

Envy of the Quamites, tho' they fupprefs'd their Diffatisfaction for the prefent; but in Time the Spark, which had long lain concealed under the Afhes, burft into an open Flame, as fhall be related in its proper Place. To return to my domeftick Affairs : The liberal Sciences, and the Art of War, 1 labour'd to bring to the higheft Perfection: And as this Country abounded with very deep Woods, which could furnifh Plenty of Timber for the building a Fleet after the Manner of the Europeans, I purfued this Point with fuch unweary'd Ardour, that tho' in Reality I had a thourand other Affairs to perplex me, it feem'd as if my whole Thoughts were directed to this one View. The Ki/pucians were of great ${ }^{\text {S Ser- }}$ vice to me in this Cafe; they had a tolerable Knowledge of maritime Affairs, and their General Monfonius I appointed Lord High Admiral of the Fleet.
And now the Timber is felling, the Inftruments for working it preparing, and with fuch Vehemence I apply my felf to the Bufinefs, that in fixty Days from the firtt falling of the Wood, a Fleet of twenty Ships now rides at Anchor in the Harbour. All this correfponding exactly with my Wifhes, I look'd upon my felf as the Alexander of the fubterranean World, and that below I was the Author of as great Revolutions as he was above. The Luft of Power is infinite, and never finds the Point to ftop at. Some few Years fince, the Office of a Deacon, or that of a Writer, or Clerk, was the Height of my Ambition, nor did I afpire to any thing greater ; and now four or five Kingdoms feem too narrow for me: So that with Refpect to my Defires, which rife in Proportion to our Wealth and Power, I never found myfelf more indigent than now.

284 A Journey to the

Having made myfelf acquainted, from the Accounts and Informations of the Kifpucian Mariners, with the Nature of the Seas, and the Situation of the Kingdoms on the Coafts, and underftanding that it was very practicable with a fair Wind to make the Mezendoric Shore in cight Days Sail, from whence it would be but a fhort Trip to Martinia, and that over a wellknown Ocean; I fay, being acquainted with all this, I made Preparation for the Voyage. Indeed, Martinia was the principal Object of my Defigns. I was fpurr'd on by the immenfe Wealth of that Nation, and the Informations I fhould gain from a People of their Knowledge in maritime Affairs, fince the Lights I might receive from them would be very ufeful to me in the Courfe of all my great Undertakings. There was alfo another Incentive, namely, a Thirft of Revenge, which prompted me to fubdue this Nation. I took the Elder of the two Royal Princes along with me as an Aflociate in this Expedition, pretending that a fine Occafion offer'd itfelf to his Highnefs of exercifing his Bravery and mar-martial Virtues. But the true Meaning of this was, that I might keep him as a Hoftage or Pledge of the Fidelity of the 2ua~ mites. The younger Prince indeed remain'd at Home, but the Regency of the Empire I committed to the Emprefs, who was then big with Child. The whole Fleet confifted of twenty Ships, great and fmall; and were all built after the Martinian Model, by the Direction and Superintendency of Monfonius the Kijpucian General, to whom the fole Management of the Navy was intrufted, and who had made Draughts and Defigns of them with his own Hand. For the Martinians were among the Subterraneans what the Tyrians and Sidmnians were in antient Days, or what the Englifb and Dutch are in our Times, that is, Sovereigns of the Seas. Yet, when we arriv'd at Martinia, I perceiv'd that in the Built of our Ships we had widely err'd from their Model.
We fet fail about that Time of Year when the Planet Nazar was at its mean Diftance from us. Having fail'd three Days, we fpy'd a large Illand, the Conqueft of which would be no difficult Matter, by Reafon of the Feuds and Factions into which the Inhabitants were fplit ; but (what is remarkable) as they were deftitute of Arms, and were ignorant of the Ufe of them, they fought only with their Tongues, and gave all the hard Names, Curfes, and foul Language they could invent. This was all we had to fear. The only Punifhment that in this Country was inflicted upon Offenders, was that they were taken up and imprifon'd, and upon full Proof of the Crime were openly brought into the Forum, there to hear themfelves revil'd in the bittereft Manner. Certain People were appointed for this very Purpofe, call'd Sabuti, that is, Revilers, and are there look'd upon in the fame Light, as an Executioner amongft us. As to the Make of their Body, they differ'd only from us in one or two Circumftances, which was, that the Women had Beards and the Men none ; the Feet alfo of them all were turn'd backwards. After we had made a Defcent upon this Ifland, about three hundred Canalifcans, (fo the Iflanders were call'd) met us. They attack'd us in a hoftile Manner with their ufual Weapons, that is to fay, with a Vollev of Curfes and hard Names. With fuch exquifite Malice, and in fuch a diabolical Spirit of Bitternefs, their foul Language was conceiv'd and utter'd, (as we were inform'd by an Alectorian Interpreter of the Canalifcan Tongue) that they fhew'd themfelves perfect Mafters of their Weapons, and not inferior to the Grammarians of our World. However, knowing that Rage alone was infignificant without Power, I forbid any Violence to be offer'd to them, but only to fpread Terror among them. I order'd fome Guns to be fir'd, which had this Effec, that they fell upon their Knees, Knees, and implor'd Mercy. Prefently the feveral little Kings of the Ifland came down, and made a formal Surrender of themfelves and Subjects, putting their whole Dominions under Tribute to me, making me at the fame Time a Compliment, that it was no Difhonour to be fubdued by him, whom it was Impiety to refift, nor any Difgrace to fubmit to him, whom Fortune had rais'd above all the World. Thus this Ifland, (the Conqueft of which added fomething to my Power, tho' little to my Glory, by Reafon of the Effeminacy of the Inhabitants) becoming tributary to me, we hoifted Sail, and after a fair Voyage of fome few Days, arriv'd at the Mezendoric Coaft. I then call'd a Council of War, to enquire what was beft to be done, whether it were advifeable immediately to act in a hoftile Manner, or to fend an Embaffy to the Emperor, to know if he would make a peaceable Surrender, or whether we muft come to an open Rupture. The Majority were for the latter. Wherefore five Perfons were commiffion'd for this Embafly, one of each Nation, a Quamite, an Arctonian, an Alectorian, a Tanacbite, and a Kifpucian. Being introduced into the Capital, they were ask'd by the chief Magiftrate, in the Name of the Emperor, the Meaning of this unexpected Vifit to the Mezendoric Dominions? The Deputies reply'd, that it was not by Accident, but by Defign they came there, and forthwith they produced their their Credentials, and a Letter from me to the Emperor, the Tenour of which was as follows:

286 A Journey to the

"Nicolas Klinius, Embaffador of the "Sun, Emperor of Quama, King of Ta"nachin, ArEtonia, and Alectoria, Great " Duke of the Kijpucians, and Lord of "Canalifca, to Miklopolatu, Emperor of " Mezendoria, Greeting. Be it knowr 's unto thee, that by the immutable Coun"s cil of Heaven, it is ordain'd, that all the " Empires and Kingdoms of the World " fubmit to the Quamitic Sovereignty. And " fince the Decrees of Heaven are irrevo"s cable, it is neceffary your Empire fhould " undergo the common Deftiny of all. "We exhort you therefore to a voluntary "Surrender, and cordially admonifh you "s not to fubject your Realms to the Chance " of War, by a rafh Opppofition to our "s victorious Arms. A timely Obedience "s may fave the Effufion of innocent Blood, " 6 and mend your own Condition. Given "s aboard our Fleet, the 3 d Day of the " Month Rimat."

In a few Days the Embaffadors return'd with a fierce and haughty Anfwer. Hereupon all Profpect of Peace difappearing, we made a Defcent. Having rang'd our Troops in order of Battle, we fent out Spies to explore the Condition of the Enemy. They foon return'd with News, that the Enemy's Army was in Readinefs, that it confifted of Lions, Bears, Tigers, Elephants, and Birds of Prey, to the Number of fixty Thoufand. Hereupon we pofted ourfelves on an advantageous Piece of Ground, and waited their Coming. All things being now in Readinefs', and the Signal of Battle being given, fuddenly there came four Embaffadors, all Foxes, from the Enemy, to renew the Negotiations, and treat of a Peace., But having fpent fome Days in Conferences with our Generals, they departed without coming to any Conclufion. It appear'd afterwards that thefe were Spies, rather than Embaffadors, fent for no other End but to explore the State and Condition of our Army. They pretended indeed that they would foon return with more ample Powers: But as we quickly perceiv'd the whole Body of the Enemy marching brifkly towards us, we hoifted our Colours, and marched to meet them. An obftinate Fight enfued. For tho' our Murketeers made a furious Slaughter among them, yet the Elephants every where kept their Rank, the Hardnefs of their Hide being Proof againft our Ball. But as foon as our heavy Artillery began to thunder upon them, and the Elephants perceiv'd the horrible Effects of it, they were feiz'd with a Panic, and left the Field. In this Battle thirty-three thoufand Mezendorians were flain, and twenty thoufand taken Prifoners. Thofe who efcap'd, fled to the Metropolis, a City very well fortify'd, and fill'd the Inhabitants with Terror and Conftcrnation. We pufh'd our Vistory, and in three Days March, came to the Capital, which we befieg'd by Sea and Land. At our Approach, we were faluted by a new Embafly, which brought much fofter Terms of Peace. In this the Emperor offer'd me his Daughter in Marriage, who was efteem'd the moft beautiful Lionefs throughout the whole Dominions, together with Half his Empire in Dower with her. Thefe Conditions were by no Means agreeáble to me, efpecially with Refpect to the Nuptials of his Daughter ; for it feem'd to me neither fafe nor honourable to divorce my Emprefs to marry a Lionefs. Hereupon the Embaffadors were difmifs'd without any Anfwer. Prefently our great Guns began to play againft the City-Walls, which tho' compos'd of Stone, were foon torn and Shatter'd in many Places. And as this City was full of Animals of all Species, it was ftrange to hear the Varicty of Noifes upon this Occafion, fuch as Roaring, Howling, Bellowing, Braying, Bleating and Hiffing. The Serpents retir'd into the Clefts and Fiffures of the Earth: The Birds hover'd in the Air, and feeing the City fo fiercely affaulted, fled off to the Rocks and open Country. The Trees trembled and drop'd their Leaves all over the City. We heard that twenty Maids of Honour, (thefe were Rofes and Lilies) upon the firf Difcharge of our Cannon Ahrunk up, and wither'd away through Fear. Such a prodigious Concourfe of Animals of all Kinds, as well

290 A Journey to the

thofe
thofe of the City, as thofe from the Neighbourhood, miferably ftraiten'd each other; and that very Affiftance, which was fo neceffary, was the Caufe of Difeafes and Infection. The Elephants ftood the Siege better than the reft; but upon the Difcharge of the great Guns, they abandon'd the Walls. Hereupon the Emperor, defpairing to hold out much longer, fummon'd a Council to deliberate upon the prefent Pofture of Affairs. They were all unanimous for a Peace upon any Terms; and therefore without Delay his Imperial Highnefs made a formal Surrender of himfelf, with all, his Territories. Thus in one Day my Power was increas'd by the Addition of an Empire, together with nine or ten leffer Realms or Principalities; for immediately all the petty Sovereignties follow'd the Example of the Emperor, and ftrove who thould be foremoft in their Submiffions.

After fuch marvellous Succefs, having firft plac'd a Garifon of fix hundred Mufketeers in the Capital, I order'd the captive Emperor to be conducted aboard our Fleet. I treated him with the moft perfect Humanity, and upon our Return fome time after to Quama, I gave him an intire Province, the Revenues of which enabled the Royal Prifoner to live with a good Degree of Splendor.

We now fet Sail from this Place, and coafted along the Mezendoric Shores. In this Voyage we demanded Hoftages of all Account in my Defcription of my Voyage from Martinia. Leaving therefore the Mezendoric Territories, we fteer'd directly for Martinia, which, after a profperous, tho' long Voyage, we happily arriv'd at. Never was the Sight of any Country fo highly grateful to me as this ; and when I reflected, that in Times paft I had been condemn'd to the Oar in this very Place, to which I now return'd as a puiflant Conqueror, I was hardly able to conceal the Tranfport of Joy I felt. I had at firft refolv'd to declare myfelf, in order to fpread the greater Terror among the Martinians: But I chang'd that Refolution, and determin'd to cherifh the old Error concerning my Birth, and ftill to pafs for an Embaffador of the Sun.

I flatter ${ }^{\circ}$ d myfelf, that in a fhort time, and with a very little Trouble, I fhould be able to make a compleat Conqueft of the Martinians, whofe Effeminacy I was well acquainted with. For this Pcople have a frong Propenfity to Pleafure, and are hurry'd on to all vicious Excelles, not only through a natural Bent, but from that Affluence and Abundance, which both Sea and Land confpire to indulge them in. However, I found found by Experience, that I had an arduous Enterprize upon my Hands: For by means of that vaft Commerce carry'd on by thefe People, they had amafs'd fuch endlefs Riches, as enabled them to have always at' their Devotion the choiceft of the moft warlike Troops among the neighbouring Nations, who ftood ready at their Nod to fight their Battles for them. Add to this, that the Martinians were eminent for their Skill in maritime Affairs beyond all the Subterraneans, and our Veffels were in Comparifon of theirs extremely rude, and very flow of Motion. For it is caly to judge what fort of Ships ours muft be, which were run up in Hafte under the JDirection and Supervifion of a Bachelor of Philofophy, as alfo what a Cenfure they would undergo, were they to be fubmitted to the Criticifm of the Dutch, Engli/h, or Danes. But this Defect my Artillery aton'd for ; a Method of Fighting hitherto unknown to the Martinians.

Before I attempted any Thing in a hoftile Manner, I fent an Embaffy to the Senate with the fame Tenders of Peace, which I had lately offer'd the Emperor of $M_{c}$ zendoria. But while we waited for an Anfwer, all on a Sudden we beheld a Fleet of Ships coming full Sail upon us, in order of Battle. At Sight hereof, we rang'd our Veffels in as much order on our Side, as the Kurry would permit, and immediately gave out the Signal for Engagement. The Battle was fought with equal Bravery and Ardor on both Sides. The Martinians inftead of Guns, made ufe of a Machine, which flung Stones of an enormous Size and Weight, and which grievoufly gall'd our Sailors. They had allo Fire-hhips loaded with Pitch, Brimftone, Sulphur, and other comburtible Materials. Thefe fet Fire to our beft Ship, and utterly confum'd it. Victory was a long Time in Sufpence, and my Forces even began to deliberate whether they had beft fight, or fly. But at laft, the Explofion of the great Guns chang'd the Face of Things, and fo funk the Courage of the Martinians, that they retir'd precipitately into their Harbour. Yet we took not one of the Enemy's Ships, becaufe, as they were light Sailors, they could at any Time efcape from us. After this Fight, we landed our Forces, and with all Speed made directly towards the Metropolis of Martinia. In our March we met our own Embaffadors returning from the Senate, by whom they had been receiv'd in a proud and lofty Manner, and difmifs'd with much fuch ${ }_{2}$ Meflage as Neptune gave to the Winds.
29.4 A Journey to the

Maturate fugam, Regique bac dicite vefro; Non illi imperium Pelagi; favumq; tridentem, Nobis forte datum: tenet ille immania faxa.
For the Martinians claiming the Sovereignty of the Seas, receivd my Offers with all imaginable Difdain.

World Under-Ground.

And now they levy'd a vaft Body of Forces, for befides the mercenary Troops, the whole military Power of Martinia took the Field upon this Occafion. We had not march'd far before we efpy'd a numerous Army, compos'd of different Nations, advancing directly againft us. This Confidence and Prefumption of the Enemy, not withftanding their late Defeat at Sea, occafioned a good deal of Uneafinefs on our Side. But all this was but a Meteor which fiuddenly appears, and as fuddenly vanifhes: For at the very firft Difcharge of our Artillery, they all turn'd their Backs, and fled. We purfued the flying Foe, and made a. prodigious Slaughter of them. What the Number of the Slain were, appear'd from that of the Perriwigs, which we collected after the Action, and which upon a moderate Computation amounted to the Number of five Thoufand. The Make of thefe Perriwigs was pretty much alter'd fince my Time, and I obferv'd above twenty different Fafhions of them; nor is that at all Atrange; for fo ingenious a Nation would give a thoufand Improvements to any Invention whatever.

After this fuccefsful Battle, or rather Carnage, we immediately fet about the Siege of the Capital. But, when we had prepared every Thing for the Enterprize, and difpos'd our Cannon in proper Order, the whole Body of Senators came in a fuppliant Manner to our Camp, and made a voluntary Surrender of the City, together with the whole Republick. Hereupon, Peace being declar'd, we enter'd in Triumph into this moft splendid City. Upon our Entrance into the Gates, there was not that Tumult and Hurry, as is generally obfervable in conquer'd Towns, but a forrowful Silence, and an univerfal Sadnefs every where prevail'd. But when we declar'd that we would not do the leaft Injury to the Citizens, their Sadnefs was chang'd into Joy. The firft Thing I did, was to make a Vifit to the publick Treafury. I was beyond Meafure aftonifh'd at the immenfe Stores of Riches depofited there; great Part of which I diftributed among my Soldiers, referving the reft for my own Finances. I left a Garifon at Martinia, and took feveral of the Senators aboard the Flect, by way of Hoftages. Among thefe, was my old Friend the Syndic, together with his Wife, who bad fally accufed me of the Crime for which I was condemned to the Gallies. Yet I entertain'd no Thoughts of Vengeance, as thinking it beneath an Emperor of Quama to refent an Injury done to a Chairman.

296 A Jouriney to the

After this compleat Conqueft of the Martinians, I refolv'd to reduce the feveral neighbouring Powers. But while I was upon the Point of executing this Defign, the Embaffadors of four different Realms arriv'd, and made their Submiffions. I had already fo many States and Kingdoms under my Dominion, that I did not fo much as give myfelf the Trouble to enquire the Names of thefe four furrender'd 'Territories, but was contented to comprehend them under the general Name of the Martinian Provinces.

C H A P. XV.

The Catastrophe.

HAVING perform'd fuch an amazing Series of Exploits, and our Fleet being confiderably augmented, by the Addition of the Martinian Ships, we now hoifted Sail, and return'd to Quama, where, upon our Arrival, we triumph'd with more than Roman Magnificence. And, in good Truth, the noble Deeds we had atchiev'd, deferv'd the higheft Pomp of Feftivals and publick Rejoicings. For what can be conceiv'd more heroic, than to transform a Nation the moftrabject, and the moft expos'd to the Infults of their Neighbours, into the Lords and Sovereigns of the whole Subterranean Globe? What can be conceiv'd more glorious, or more for my Honour; as a Man, whofe Fate it happen'd to be to live among fo many heterogeneous Creas tures, what, I fay, could redound more to my Glory, than to have afferted that Dominion which Nature gave Mankind over O 5 the the Animal Creation? A Defcription of the Splendor of this Triumph, the Crowds, and the Applaufes of Men of all Ranks and Ages, would of itfelf make a regular Volume, and therefore I fhall not attempt it in this fhort Account. I fhall only obferve, that from this Time a new Æra appears in Hiftory, and there may now be reckon'd five Monarchies, namely, the A/yrian, the Perfann, the Grecian, the Roman, and the 2uamitic; the laft of which feems to furpafs the reft in Power and Grandeur. And accordingly I accepted the Title of Koblu, or Great, which was offer'd me, as well by the Quamites, as by the other vanquifh'd Nations. There is, I confefs, fomething exceffively vain and arrogant in the Name Great: But yet, when you compare me with the Cyrus's, the Alexanders, the Pompeys, and the Cafars, the Title then feems perfectly humble. and modef. Alexander indeed enflay'd the Eaft, but with what Forces? with hardy veteran Troops inur'd to War ; for fuch were the Macedonians in the Time of his Father Pbilip. But I, in a fhorter Spaceof Time, fubdued far more and fiercer Nations than the Perfans, and that by the Help only of a rude and barbarous People, whom I myfelf had form'd and inftructed. The Titles I now us'd were thefe; Nicolas the Great, Emperor of Quama and Mezendoria, King of Tanachin, Allectoria and Arctomia, Great Duke of Kijpucia, Lord of Martinia and Canalijca, &c. & ci.

Ingens jam fabat Regnum, poteramque videri Exilio felix: Sed Scilicet ultima Semper Expectanda dies bomini, dicique beatus Anie obitum nemo fupremaque funera debet.

Being thus lifted up to a Point of Power and Succefs, beyond even the Wifhes of a mortal Man, the fame Thing happen'd to me, as to almoft all thofe who rife to Greatnefs from a fordid Original. For unmindful of my former State, I grew intolerably vain and haughty, and inftead of all thofe winning Ways, which artful Princes ufe to procure the popular Efteem, I becarne a hot and cruel Perfecutor of all Orders of Men, defpifing as very Slaves thofe Subjects, whom before I had courted to my Intereft with all imaginable Affability, infomuch, that none had Accefs to my Perfon, without a Ceremony, almoft like that of Adoration, and when they were admitted, were receiv'd with a moft difdainful Air: All which alienated the Minds of the People from me, and chang'd their Love into Coldnefs and Terror. This Difpofition of my Subjects I foon experienced, and particularly upon the following Occafion. The Emprefs, my Spoufe, whom I had left big with Child, was in my Abfence brought to Bed of a young Prince. Intending to acknowledge this Prince for my Succeffor, I affembled the feveral States of my Empire, as well thofe of the conquer'd Kingdoms, as thofe of Quama, to the folemn Inauguration of the Infant. As none dar'd difobey my Orders, the Ceremony was perform'd with all poffible Pomp and Grandeur. But it was eafy to perceive in the Vifages of my Subjects, that all the Joy upon this Occafion was forc'd, unnatural, and mix'd with hidden Difcontent. What help'd to confirm my Jealoufy, was, that at this Time certain Libels or Pafquinades, written by anonymous Authors, were handed about, in which the Injury done to Prince Timufo by this Inauguration, was fet. forth with much Satyr and Acrimony. This created fuch Diforders in my Spirits, that I: could take no Reft till I had got rid of that beft of Princes. However, I thought it. by no means advifeable to difpatch this illuftrious Rival in an arbitrary Manner, and. therefore I fuborn'd certain Witnefles to accufe him of High Treafon. As Sovereigns never want for Minifters of Darknefs to ferve their criminal Purpofes, I quickly found out proper Perfons to fwear that the Prince was projecting a Revolution, and had a Defign againft my Life. Upon this he was thrown into Prifon, and condemn'd by bis Judges, the Majority of whom I had corrupted. However, he was executed privately, for fear of raifing Difturbances.

As to the fecond Prince, becaufe he was very young, I defer'd facrificing him to my Repofe yet a while; fo that the Weaknefs of his Age was his Protection. Thus ftain'd with the Parricide of his Brother, I began now to rule with fo much Cruelty and Rigour, and carry'd my Rage to fuch a Height, that all Perfons, whofe Fidelity I furpected, whether Quamites, or others, I deliver'd over to imimediate Death. Not a Day pafs'd, but was remarkable for fome extraordinary Execution, which haftened the Rebellion, which the Nobles had been for a confiderable Time projecting; as will be related in its proper Place.

I own I deferv'd all thofe Misfortunes, which I afterwards experienc'd. It had doubtlefs been more glorious, and more worthy of a Chriftian Monarch, to have guided a grofs and barbarous People to the Knowledge of the true God, rather than to have proceeded from Conqueft to Conqueft, and to have fhed fuch Torrents of innocent Blood. And, indeed, it had been eafy for me to have converted the whole Empire; for there was a Time when all my Determinations were rever'd like Oracles. But unmindful of God, and of myfelf, I dream'd of nothing but the vain Splendor of a Court, and the Increare of my Power. Moreover, being now given up to a deprav'd and reprobate Mind, I chofe to aggravate and inflame thefe Difcontents, rather than remove them, as if the Offences of my Injuftice were to be rectify'd by my Cruelty. To all the Remonftrances of my Friends Iftll wrg'd, Neceffity; the Tyrant's bellijb Plea.

302  A. Journey to the

So that Misfortune on Misfortune came thick upon me, and I fell into fuch Difgrace and Wretchednefs, that from my Example, all Mortals may learn what a Vi ciffitude there is in human Affairs, and how fhort is the Duration of arbitrary Power and Violence.

My Subjects Averfion increas'd with the Severity of my Government, and when they perceiv'd that the Vices, to which I abandon'd myfelf, but ill agreed with that divine Original I boafted, and were utterly irreconcilable with my Character, as Embaffador of the Sun, they began to examine every thing with more Attention, particularly the Circumftance of my Arrival into thefe Parts, and the Condition I was in when I landed upon their Coaft. They now faw, that all the great Things I had done, were owing more to the Savagenefs of the 2uamites, than to any extraordinary Abilities of my own, efpecially as they found, after that Mift of Ignorance was difpell'd, that I had actually committed many Errors in the Courfe of my Government. Above all my Conduct was highly cenfur'd by the Kifpucians, a judicious and penetrating People. They had obferv'd in my publick Edict a Multitude of Things fo crude and indigefted, as betray'd the groffeft Ignorance in Politicks. Nor was the Cenfure unjuft: For as my academical Tutors and Inftructors never dream'd. of Crowns and Scepters for me, they gave me an Education more adapted to a private Station, than that of a Sovereign ; and my Studies, which extended no farther than. to fome little Syftem of Divinity, and a. few metaphyfical '「erms, were by no Means equal to my prefent Elevation, where I had. the Charge of two Empires, and almoft twen-ty Kingdoms upon my Hands. The Martinians had alfo remark'd, that the Ships of War I had built, were fo rude and clumfy, that in an Engagement they were of no. manner of ufe againft a regular and well appointed Fleet, and that all my naval Glory was to be afcrib'd folely to the Invention of Cannon. All thefe cutting Remarks they induftrioully difpers'd, and at the fame Time call'd to Remembrance the Manner of my firft Appearance in this Country, namely, how I had efcap'd from a Shipwreck, and being ready to perifl. with Hunger, was taken up by the Inhabitants all in tatter'd Garments, an. Equipage furely very unfuitable to an Embaffador of the Sun. Add to this, that thefe fame Martinians, being excellent natural Philofophers, had now given the Quamites. a Tincture of Aftronomy, enough to know that the Sun was an inanimate Body, plac'd in the Centre of the Heavens by the Almighty, to give Light and Heat to all Creatures, and that as it was a Globe of Fire, it could of Confequence be no proper Habitation for a mortal Man.

World Under-Ground. 303

With thefe and other fuch unlucky Difcourfes, was I from Day to Day diftracted.

304 A Journey to the

But they were mere Murmurs; fince nobody through fear of my Power dar'd talk thus with any Degree of Opennefs. And in Reality, I was a long Time ignorant that the Malevolence of my Subjects had rofe to fuch a Pitch, as to queftion my Condition, till at length I was convinc'd of it by a Buok compos'd in the Canalifcan Tongue, and publifh'd with this Title, The happy Shipwreck. For I obferv'd before, that the Canalifians were perfect Artifts at Satyr and Reproaches, which were all the Weapons they wag'd War with. The Book in Queftion comprehended all thofe Accufà tions, of which I have juft now given a Detail, and was wrote in a Stile the moft fevere and farcaftical, that can well be imagin'd, according to the Genius of the $C_{\text {Ir }}$ nalifans, who excel in this Manner of Writing.

But fuch was the Weaknefs of my Mind at this Juncture, fuch my vain Prefumption and Confidence of my own Power, that no Advices or Remonftrances whatever could make me change my Conduct, or bring me to my Senfes. The moft wholefome Counfels inftead of checking, contributedionly to inflame my Cruelty. Wherefore thofe whom 1 had moft Reafon to fufpect, I put to the Torture to difcover the Author of this Libel. But all endur'd their Torture with an aftonifhing Firmnefs, infomuch, that this Cruelty produced no other Effect, than to irritate the Spirits of my People ftill more againft me. Thus my Fate would have it, and I run headlong to my Deftruction.
In this State of Affairs I determin'd to facrifice the furviving Prince Hicoba. I open'd my Defign to the High Chancellor Kalac, in whom I piac'd great Confidence. He promifed me all Obedience and Affiftance, and frait withdrew on Pretence of contriving the Means of putting this Scheme in Execution. But deteffing the Villany in his Heart, he difcover'd the Plot to the Prince. Both of them retir'd into the Citadel, which was well fortify'd and there the Chancellor harangu'd the Guards, and in the moft pathetick Manner laid open their prefent Condition. His Difcourfe, together with the 'Tears of the young Prince which added confiderable Weight to it, produc'd the defir'd Effect. The Soldiers run to their Arms, and vow'd they would die to fave their Prince. Upon this the dexterous Chancellor did not give their Ardour Time to cool, but perfuaded them immediately to fwear Allegiance to their Prince, and then out of hand fent private Mefiengers to thofe whom he knew to be exargerated againft me, exhorting them to take Arms againft a Tyrant, who attempted the Extirction of the whole Royal Progeny. Upon this all the Difaffected rure and join'd with the Garifon. While I was expecting the Return of the Chancellor, a Meffenger brought me the News of this grand Infursection. My Friend Tomopelokd ad.
306. AJOURNEY to the advis'd me by all Means to retreat to Tanashin. There, fays he, we can quickly raife an Army, and bring thefe Mutineers to Reafon. There Words produc'd in me various Agitations of Mind, and Hope and Fear alternately govern'd me each Moment. At length in Compliance with his Admonition I fied from Quama, and that with little or no Difficulty, as the Bulk of the Quamites were yet unacquainted with the Reafons of this Sedition. Soon after this, I return'd with an Army of forty thoufand Soldiers, the greateft Part of which were Tanachites, expecting a confiderable Augmentation from fuch Quamites as continued in their Duty. But I deceiv'd myfelf egregioully : For inftead of thofe Auxiliaries I flatter'd myfelf with, I met a Herald who brought me Letters from the Prince, to acquaint me, that War was declar'd againft me as an Ufurper and Invader, and that my Wife and Son were Prifoners of State. Soon after the Departure of the Herald, I beheld the Quamitic Army advancing with my young Rival at their Head. As they had a fine Artillery, I would not runthe Rifque of an Engagement, till I was reinforc'd with frefh Troops: Therefore I made a Stop, and entrench'd myfelf in the beft Manner I could. But when I perceiv'd that my own Soldiers deferted to the Enemy, who befides expected hourly new Supplies, I took Advice of my General Officers, and refoly'd to engage directly; nor did Tomopoloko oppofe this Refolution. We fought upon the fame Plain, where fome Years ago in a decifive Battle the $T_{a}$ nachites were entirely routed. The Enemy's. Cannon now threw our Ranks into great Diforder, and it griev'd me to the Soul to be baffled by my own Invention, and be conquer'd by thofe very Arms I myfelf had devis'd. For a while however my Soldiers. fuftained the Attack of the rebellious Army, till a Ball took off Tomopoloko. Then every one loft his Courage, and we all turn'd. our Backs and fled to the Woods and Mountains. I, for my Part, climb'd to the Topof a Rock, from whence I defcended into. the Valley on the other Side. There I paus'd a while to curfe my Fate, or rather my Folly, and to pour out my Soul in Tears. and Sighs. But, alas! it was all tou late. So great was the Diforder of my Spirits, that I forgot to throw off my Diadem, which. was the very thing that in all likelihood muft have difcover'd me. After I had fat trembling for half an Hour in that Valley, I heard the Voices of fome Perfons climbing the Rock, and roaring out Vengeance againft me if they found me. I then look'd all round me for a Place to conceal myfelf in. There was hard by a deep Wood overgrown with Trees and Bufhes. I prefently enter'd into it, and having pick'd out fomething like a Path, I walk'd on till I came to a Cave. Here I ftopp'd fome Moments to take Breath. By and by I crept into the .
$\mathrm{Cave}_{3}$.

308 A Journey to the Cave, like a Serpent, upon my Belly, and as I perceiv'd it to be very deep and thelving, yet of eafy Defcent, I refolv'd to penetrate to the Bottom of it. But I had fcarce walk'd a Quarter of a Mile, when all on a Sudden I tumbled down, and as if Thunder drove me, was hurry'd headlong through the thickeft Darknefs, till at laft a faint glimmering Light dawn'd in upon me. With the Increafe of that Light the Force of my Motion was proportionably diminifh'd, fo that by little and little, and in the gentleft Manner like a Perfon rifing out of the Water, I found myfelf among fome Mountains, which to my unutterable Amazement, I oblerv'd to be the very fame from whence fome Years ago I was hurry'd down into the fubterranean World. The Reafon of that Abatement of my Motion, I found after fome Reflection to be owing to the Quality of our Atmofphere, which is much denfer, and confequently refifts more than the fubterranean Atinofphere. Unlefs it were fo, the fame Thing would have happen'd to me in my Afcent, as in my Defcent, and in all likelihood I mut then have been carry'd aloft through the Air as far as the Region of the Moon. Yet I fubmit this Hypothefis to the maturer Examination of Philofophers.

C H A P. XVI.

The Author's Return into bis own Country.

ILay for a confiderable Time among the Mountains, almoft deftitute of Senfe. For my late violent Motion, together with that Atrange Metamorphofis from a Founder ef a fifth Monarchy, into a famifh'd Bachelor of Arts, had occafion'd very great Diforders in my Brain. And, in Truth, my Adventure was fo fingular and fo poetical, that it might well fhock the Frame of the foundeft Head. In this Condition I began to afk myfelf, whether what I faw was a Reality, or whether it was not fome vifionary Deception. But my Diftraction abating, and returning by Degrees to my Senfes, my Aftonifhment gave Place to Grief and Indignation. And, indeed, turn over the Annals of remote Antiquity, as well as thofe of modern Date, and you will not be able to find a parallel Adventure with mine, unlefs perhaps in the Cafe of Nebuchadnezzar, who from the greateft Monarch in the World, was transform'd into a wild Creature, and liv'd like one of the Beafts of the Field. Much the fame Freaks of Fortune I experienc'd. For in a few Hours two mighty Empires were wrefted from me, together with almoft twenty Kingdoms, the Shadows

$3: 0$  A Journey to the

Shadows and faint Images of which now only remain'd. Lately I was a Monarch; and now the Utmoft of my Hopes was to procure the Mafterhip of fome little School for my Subfiftence. Lately I was call'd the Embaffador of the Sun; and now I fear'd Neceffity would drive me to become the Servant of fome Bihop or Dean. But a few Days ago Glory, Hope, Victory and Succefs attended my Steps; and now Care and Mifery, Tears and Lamentations are all my Companions. In fhort, I refembled thofe Summer Herbs, which fuddenly fpring up, and as fuddenly die away; and to fay all in one Word, Sorrow, Rage, Anxiety, Difappointment, and Defpair, rais'd fuch a Conflict in my Breaft, that fometimes I refolv'd to end my Being with my Sword, fometimes I determin'd to plunge again into the Cavern to try if I could not fucceed better in a fecond Expedition. But a Regard for my immortal Soul, and the Principles of the Chriftian Religion, reffrained me from thefe mad Attempts.

I now endeavour'd to defcend the Mountain by that narrow Path which leads to Sandzuic. But my Imagination was fo difturb'd, that I ftumbled almoft every Step I took: For the whole Powers of my Mind were taken up in contemplating upon the fifth Monarchy. This Idea fo conftantly haunted me, that it almoft unhing'd my Underftanding. And indeed the Lofs of fo much Dignity and Power, could never be recompenc'd by any Advantages which my own Country could beftow. For fuppofe they fhould make me Governor of Bergen, or what is more, Lord-Lieutenant of Norwey, yet, alas! what Compenfation, what Comfort would this be to the Monarch and Founder of fo many Empires and Kingdoms? However, I refolv'd not to refufe a Thing of that Kind, in cafe it fhould be offer'd me.

After'I had got half way down the Hill, I faw at a little Diftance fome Children, to whom I beckon'd and made Signs to come to my Affiftance, pronouncing aloud at the fame Time thefe Words, Feru Pikal Salim, which in the Quamitic Language fignifies, Shew me the Way. But the Boys, at the Sight of a Man cloath'd in a foreign Habit, and with a Diadem upon his Head embroider'd with Rays like thofe of the Sun, ran down the Mountain as faft as they could, and foon gaining the Start of me, (for I was forc'd to drag my weary and wounded Feet but flowly after me) they got to Sandwic an Hour before me, where they alarm'd the whole Village, vowing and protefting that they had feen the Wandring Fow among the Mountains, his Head all glittering with Rays, and by his Groans expreffing great Uneafinefs of Mind. The Inhabitants enquiring how they knew it was the Wandring 'ferv, they readily anfwer'd, that I myfelf had told my Name and Country. This Miftake I guefs'd muft proceed from thofe Words

$312 A$ Journey to the Words of mine mifinterpreted, Feru Pikal Salim, which indeed have fome Affinity in Sound to that Conceit of the Children. All the Village was now in an Uproar, and nobody doubted the Truth of the Fact, efpecially as there had been but very lately a Story cook'd up about this Wanderer, who was faid to have appear'd not long fince at Hamburgh.

About Evening I arriv'd at Sandwic, where I found a Mob of the Inhabitants gather'd together, from a natural Curiofity implanted in all Men to fee ftrange Sights. They ftood at the Foot of the Mountain to meet me, but as foon as ever they heard me Speak, they all took to their Heels as if they were feiz'd with a Panic, except one old Man, who having more Courage than the reft, would not move out of his Place. To this Man I addrefs'd myfelf, and begg'd to know if he would have the Goodnefs to entertain a Stranger. He ark'd me who I was? and whence I came? To which I reply'd with a deep Sigh, that the Day was too far fpent to begin my Story, but that if he would receive me into his Houfe, I fhould relate to him fuch a Series of Adventures, as were not to be parallel'd in all Hiftory, and which muft confequently fagger human Belief. The old Man, who was a Lover of Novelty, took me by the Hand, and led me to his Houfe; and as we went, he rally'd the ridiculous Fears of the $\operatorname{Pr}$ pilace, who are frighten'd at a ftrange Face as much as at a Comet. As foon as I was within the Houfe, I begg'd the Favour of fome cold Water to affuage my Thirft. InItead of which a Cup of Ale was brought me by my Hoft himfelf, becaufe his Wife and Maids were all afraid to venture themfelves near me. Having drank off my Liquor, and flack'd my Thirft, I fpoke to my good Hoft in the following Terms: " You fee before you a Man, who has "s experienc'd the moft cruel Reverfes of " Fate, and who has been the Bubble and " Sport of Fortune to a Degree beyond all 's mortal Men. It is indeed an undoubsed " Truth, that in a Moment of Time the " greateft Affairs may be difconcerted and " thrown into Confufion ; yet neverthelefs " what has happened to me furpaffes all "Credibility." To which my Hoft reply'd, That this muft be the Condition of thore who wander for Sucb a Lenetb of Time; for, continued he, what Vicifletudes, what Miffortunes may not baptien to a Man in a Courfe of Sixteen bundred Years Peregrination? I could not comprehend the Meaning of this, and therefore I afk'd him what he meant by thofe Sixteen hundred Years? If, return'd he, any Credit is to be given to Hiftory, it is now Sixteen bundred Years fince Jerufalem was deftroy'd: I doubt not, moft venerable Sir, but that about the Time of that memorable Action, you was cven thens fomething advanc'd in Years; for if what is related concerning you be true. wo may refer the Date of your Nativity to the Reign of Tiberius. At thefe Words I was filent for a confiderable Time, and thought the old Man doated : but at laft I told him, that his Language requir'd an OEdipus to unriddle it. With that he brought me a Print of the Temple of Yerufalem, and afk'd me, whether I thought it differ'd very much from the Original? In fpite of all my Grief, I could not help burfting into a Laugh, and afk'd him the Meaning of this odd puzzling Difcourfe. He reply'd, Whether I am in an Error, or not, I cannot fay: But the Inbabitants of this Place aver, that ym are that famons Jew, who ever fince the Days of Chrift bave been condemn'd to wander over the World. But yet, methinks, the neaver I furvey you, the more I dijcover in your Face the Features of an old Friend of mine, who Jome twelve Years ago perijh'd on the Top of this Mountain. At there Words, the Mift before my Eyes was diffipated, and I knew my old Friend Abeline, whofe Houfe in Bergen I us'd to frequent. I flew into his Arms immediately, and tenderly embrac'd him. And do I live to hold thee thus, my Abeline, faid I ? I fcarce believe my Eyes and Senfes. Yes, I am Klimius, return'd in a manner from the Grave. I am that very Klimius, who about twelve Years fince defcended into that Cavern. My Friend, confounded at this unexpected Turn, food like one thunder-ftruck; at length length he cry'd out, Yes! it is he! I fee my Klimius! I hear his Voice!

314 Journey to the

World Under-Ground. 315

Sic oculos, fic ille manus, fic ora ferebat.
But tho' no Twin can be more like his Brother, than you are like my Klimius, yet I neither can nor dare believe my Senfes; for Miracles are ceas'd, and the Dead rife not now : I muft have therefore ftronger and more convincing Proofs, e'er I can give Credit to what you tell me. Hercupon, at once to conquer his Incredulity, I gave him a fuccinct Detail of all that had pafs'd between us formerly. This remov'd every Doubt; and ftraitway he embrac'd me with Tears of Joy, and cry'd out, It is, it is the very Man, whofe Ghoft 1 thought I had feen! But explain to me, purfued he, in what Part of the World you have loft yourfelf all this Time, and in what Country you procur'd that wonderful Drefs you have on. 'Then I proceeded to recount to him every Particular which had happen'd to me, and he heard me with profound Attention, till I came to that Part of my Hiftory concerning the Planet Nazar, and Trees endu'd with Speech and Reafon : At this, he loft all Patience: " Not all the Abfurdities, " fays he, which Dreams convey to us, ${ }^{6}$ not all the Follies which Madnefs pro" duces, or all the Nonfenfe which Drunk"s ennefs utters, can equal thefe Vifions of "6 yours; I fhould rather chufe to believe ${ }^{66}$ with the Vulgar, that you mult have $\mathrm{P}_{2}$ "fallen

316 A Journey to the

" fallen into the Hands of Witches or Hob" goblins; for how idle foever fuch Tales " are, yet they have an Appearance of "Truth, if put in Competition with this " fubterranean Journey of yours." I begg'd and intreated of him to have but a Moment's Patience more, till I had finifh'd my Recital; upon which, as I obferv'd he kept Silence, I proceeded to relate all that had happened to me below, the fundry Accidents and Reverfes of Fortune I had experienc'd, and how I had been the Founder of the fifth and greateft Monarchy that ever was. All thefe- Things increas'd the Sufpicion he had entertain'd, that I was bewitch'd, or had had fome Commerce with Magicians or cvil Spirits; and that being abufed with their diabolical Delufions, I had embrac'd a Cloud inftead of funo. In order to try how far the Force of thefe Charms and Incantations had fpread, or to what a Length my Extravagance would run, my Friend began to interrogate me concerning the State of the Hupp', and that of the Damn'd in the other Wurld; concerning the Elyjian Fields, and divers other Matters of that Kind. I foon perceiv'd the fly Defign of thefe Queftions, and told my Friend, that I, for my Part, could hardly blame his Incredulity, fince my Narration appear'd too fabulous to command a ready Affent: However, it was not my Fault ; for that in Reality my Adventures were fo marvellous, as to baffle all human Belief. I folemnly proteft to you,

World Under-Ground. 317

continued I, that I have not added or fupply'd one Jot or Tittle from my own Invention, but that I have recounted every thing fimply and ingenuoufly in the Order they happened to me. My Friend perfifting in his Incredulity, defir'd that I would compofe, my Mind, and take a few Days Reft and Refrefhment, in. which Time he told me he hop'd thefe Commotions in my Brain would by degrees fubfide and die away.

After 1 had repos'd myfelf for full eight Days, my Friend now thinking I had taken fufficient Reft, was refolv'd to try if I had recover'd my Senfes, and therefore artfully refum'd the Converfation concerning my fubterranean Journey. He was now in Hopes, that the fifth Monarchy, together with the twenty conquer'd Kingdoms, was all vanifh'd intoSmoke, and fo utterly buried in Oblivion, that not an Idea remain'd of fo much as a fingle Town or Village. But when he heard me repeat the very fame Things in the very. fame Order I had beforc done; when at the Conclufion of my Hiftory I upbraided him with his obftirate Unbelief, and moreover alledg'd certain indubitable Facts, fuch as that about twelve Years ago it was notorious I had defcended into that Cavern, and that I was now return'd into my own Country in a ftrange and foreign Habit ; he then began to waver, and had not a Word to: reply. I took the Advantage of this his Situation of Mind, and prefs'd the Matter ftill more home. I demonftrated to him, that his Hypothefis concerning Witchcraft and Sorcery, was far, infinitely far more abfur'd than this Expedition of mine ; for that thofe were juftly to be thrown into the Clafs of old Wives Fables; but that on the other hand, he could not but know that feveral Philofophers of Reputation were of Opinion, that the Earth was concave, and that probably it contain'd within it a leffer habitable World ; and that I, for my Part, being convinc'd of it by Experience, could not poffibly give up my Senfes with refpect to this Article.

318 A Journey to the

Convinc'd at length by thefe Arguments, Your Conftancy, faid he, and your Punctuality in affirming thefe Things, the Pretence of which could not be the leaft Advantage to you, has at laft entirely vanquifh'd my Incredulity; I muft and do believe you. My Friend thus perfuaded of the Facts in Queftion, now begg'd me to renew my Story to him, if poffible, in a more full and copious Manner; accordingly I obey'd him. He was quite charm'd with my Account of the Planet Nazar, and the Potuan Government, the Laws and Inftitutions of which, he faid, were fuch as deferv'd to be a Model to all the Kingdoms in the World. He alfo obferv'd in Juftice to me, that a Defrription of fo wife and wellregulated a Government, could not poffibly proceed from a diforder'd Head, or a confufed Imagination; for that fuch Principles were rather of divine, than human Original.

When I found that his Conviction was perfectly fincere, and well eftablifh'd, I then thought it high Time to talk to him about my own Affairs; accordingly I defir'd to know of him, what he thought I had beft do in my prefent Condition, or what I might reafonably expect in my own Country, after the mighty Exploits I had atchiev'd in the fubterranean World. To which he anfwer'd thus: " Let me per"fuade you, fays he, never to difcover thefe " Things to any Mortal. You know the " Zeal of our Priefts. You know they "6 perfecuted the Author of that famous " Difcovery of the Earth's Motion round "t the Sun, and all who adher'd to that " Philofophy. And what then do you think "s will become of you for afferting the Exift" ence of a fubterranean Sun and Planets ? " You will be declar'd a Heretick, and as "s fuch unworthy to live in a Chriftian " Community. How will Mafter Rupert "6 thunder againft you? He, who but a " Year ago fentenced a Man to do publick *Penance, for afferting the Doctrine of "6 the Antipodes. Certainly, fo holy a Per66 fon will condemn to the Flames, the Au" 6 thor of fo new a Syftem, as that of a "World under Ground. I give it you " therefore as my beft Advice, that you ${ }^{66}$ fuffer thefe Things to lie buried in eter-

320 Journey to the
" nal Oblivion, and that you live privately " in my Houfe for a Time."
He then made me throw afide my fubterranean Habit, and equipp'd me according to the Fafhion of my own Country. Moreover, he drove away all thofe Crowds of People from the Door, who came out of Curiofity to fee the Wandering $\neq$ few, affuring them, that he difappear'd all at once. However, the Affair was nois'd all over the Country, and, in a fhort Time, all the Pulpits rung with Predictions and Prophecies of the Evils and Misfortunes that muft follow upon this Apparition. It was faid at Sandwic, that the Wandering Few was come, publifhing every where the approaching Vengeance of Heaven, and cxhorting the People to Repentance. And this Story (as Stories always gain in telling) was prefently enrich'd with various Additions and Interpolations. Accordingly fome faid, that the Wandering Few had foretold the End of the World, and that the next St. Fobn's Day would be the Day of the general Conflagratian, unlefs they would prevent it by a very fincere Repentance ; with abundance of other Things in the fame Style. Nay, thefe Predictions had occafion'd fuch Troubles in a certain Parifh, that the Farmers all gave off Plowing and Sowing, becaufe as the World was foon to be at an End, there would certainly be no Harveft. Hereupon, Mafter Nicholas, the Minifter of the Parifh, fearing he fhould fhould fall fhort in his Tythes and other Articles of his Income, told his Congregation, that to his certain Knowledge, the Day of Judgment was put off to the next Year. The Stratagem took, and they all returned to their wonted Labours. As the Origin of all this Folly and Superflition was known only to my Friend and me, it afforded us plentiful Matter of Mirth and Laughter from Time to Time.

At length, as I did not care to continue longer in a Houfe that was not my own, and as I was under a Neceffity of coming abroad one Time or other, in order to procure myfelf a competent Livelihood, I thought it was now high time to begin : Accordingly, we both went to Bergen; and my Friend made me pafs for a Student of Drontheim, and a Relation of his, who came. to fpend fome Time in that Capital. Soon after he recommended me fo earneftly to the Bifhop of Bergen, fometimes by Letters, and fometimes in Converfation, that that venerable Prelate promifed me the firt vacant Mafterfhip of any School or College he had in his Gift. This was an Office to my Palate, inafmuch as it feem'd to be fomething a-kin to the Elevation I was lately fallen from. For the Government of a School is the Shadow or Image of Imperial Power : The Ferula is the Scepter, and the Chair a Throne. But as no Vacancy happen'd in a long Time, and as it was neceffary fomething thould be done for my prefent Subfif-

322 $A$ Journey to the

tence, I was refolv'd to embrace the firft Offer that fhould be made me. Luckily the Curate of St.Crofs now died, and the Bilhop appointed me to fucceed him. This Promotion feem'd ridiculous enough for the Monarch of fo many Empires and Kingdoms. But as nothing makes Men more ridiculous than Poverty, and as it is too high a Strain of Nicenefs, to refufe muddy Water, when a Man is parch'd with Thirf, I accepted the gracious Offer, and am now fpending the Refidue of my Days in this Office, with the Contentednefs of a Philofopher.

A little after this Promotion, a Match was propos'd to me with the Daughter of a Merchant of Bergen, whofe Name was Magdalen. The Lady pleas'd me highly : But as it was very likely that the Emprefs of Quama was ftill alive, I was afraid left by this Marriage with Magdalen, I fhould be guilty of Polygamy. But my Friend Abeline, to whom I unbofom'd myfelf on this Occafion, ridicul'd my Fears, and by fo many Arguments demonftrated the Folly of my Scruples, that I no longer hefitated to conclude the Match. I liv'd fix Years with this Wife in the utmoft Love and Friendhip ; altho' in all that Time, I never once related my fubterranean Hiftory to her. But as I could never entirely lofe the Remembrance of that Height of Glory from which I was fallen, fome fudden Starts and Geftures would now and then efcape me, which did not feem to agree with my prefent Condition. By this fecond Venter I had three Sons, Cbriffiern, Fohn, and Fasper; fo that in the whole I have four, if fo be that the Prince of Quama is ftill alive.

Thus far the Manufcript of N I с н оlas Klimius reaches. What follows is the Appendix of Mafter Abeline.

NICHOLAS KLIMIUS lived to the Year 1695. He was belov'd and eiteem'd for the Sobriety of his Life, and the Purity of his Manners. The Rector however was now and then difpleas'd at his exceffive Gravity, which he thought proceeded from Pride. But I, who knew the Man, and knew his Hiftory, rather wonder'd at his exemplary Modefty and $\mathrm{Pa}-$ tience, who from the Government of fo many Kingdoms, could humbly accomodate himfelf to fuch an Employment. However, with other Men, to whom his amazing Metamorphofis was unknown, he could not altogether efcape the Charge of Pride. It was his Cuftom, at certain Times of the Year, while his Strength permitted him, to afcend the old Mountain, and take an earneft View of the famous Cavern. His Friends obferv'd, that he always return'd. from thence with his Eyes fwoln, and his 324 A Journey, E'c.

Face all bath'd in Tears; that he would afterwards fhut himfelf up whole Days in his Study, and feem'd to fhun the Converfation of Mankind. His Wife alfo affured me, that he would often talk in his Sleep, about Land Armies and Forces at Sea. This Abfence of Mind went fo far once, as to give Orders for the Governor of Bergen to come immediately before him. His Spoufe imagin'd thefe Diforders of his Brain proceeded from an exceffive Application to his Studies. His Library conlifted chiefly of political Books, and as fuch a Choice but ill agreed with the Office of a Curate, he could not avoid fome Cenfures upon that Head. He himfelf wrote his own Adventures, and his Manufcript, which is the only one in Being, is at prefent in my Cuftody. Tho' I always intended it for the Prefs, yet I have hitherto been hinder'd from publifhing it by very important Reafons.

$F I N I S$.

[^0]:    E 2
    of

