EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS—PANTHAN

by Joe McCarthy
(Fargo Forum Staff Writer)

A writer capable of completing a full length novel in a weekend and who piloted a plane for the first time at 58, then in the twilight of his career became the oldest World War II correspondent in the Pacific, died on Sunday morning, March 19, 1950.

Edgar Rice Burroughs passed away at 74 just as he always wanted to—in the presence of his family and at his beloved California showplace, Tarzana, named after the mythical jungle man he created in 1912.

Strangely enough, Burroughs was more proud of his role as a United Press correspondent in the jungles of Bougainville, and later the Marshalls and Marianas, than he was of his Tarzan or Martian stories which sold nearly 40 million copies.

Early in 1944 shortly before he began his “down under” assignment, Burroughs told this writer in an interview for a Honolulu newspaper that he was 35 before his first fiction effort was accepted and published.

Previously, Burroughs had worked as a cowboy, salesman, gold miner, clerk and railroad guard. Burroughs had a career fully as fabulous as that of the Tarzan his imagination gave the world.

Seated comfortably on the “lanai” of his home in the shadow of Diamond Head and reflecting on his early writing attempts, Burroughs said that his first story was the “Princess of Mars,” based on the adventures of John Carter, a fictitious Virginian who became warlord of that Planet.

Burroughs said the story earned him $400. He selected Mars as his scene because he felt he would be as much of an authority as the next man on the conditions there.

"I was afraid of tripping up on detail if I attempted to write about familiar places," he said.

Burroughs was past 60 when he packed a portable typewriter and joined American troops clearing the Japanese out of the Pacific.

Under fire on numerous occasions and an observer on a score of bombing flights, the aging writer was finally compelled to return to Honolulu because of a heart condition.

In recent years Burroughs divided his time between the islands and California and did little work except to take care of his real estate holdings and movie interests.

Burroughs never wrote a line of screen plays (excepting two pictures produced by Burroughs-Tarzan Enterprises) but received an estimated $5,000,000 in movie pay checks for the Tarzan pictures.

One of his last public appearances was in 1945 when he helped dedicate an army library on Bellows air field near Honolulu.

Ironically enough, not a single Burroughs volume was available for the GI readers there.

The novel Burroughs always figured would outsell his other works, but somehow failed to catch fire, was "THE MUCKER," the tale of a white hope heavyweight boxer and his adventures in an imaginative land of fierce warriors and strange beasts.

Editors note: After 5 years in the Michigan Military Academy Burroughs found the army was in his blood. Failing to obtain a commission at West Point he sought one, unsuccessfully, in the Chinese army. He finally managed one in the Nicaraguan army, but his family interfered. He then joined the 7th Cavalry against Geronimo. Volunteering for the Rough Riders in 1898 he received a polite letter of regret from Teddy Roosevelt. In 1916-19 he served as Major in the Illinois Militia. He watched the Japs bomb Pearl Harbor. Arriving in Australia to cover the war in 1942 he continued to do so, in spite of two heart attacks, until 1945 when a severe attack forced him to return home, in my opinion, a war casualty.
The death of Edgar Rice Burroughs caused more comment on the newscasts of radio than any other person since the death of FDR. However, it is much more than one third of the time was given to ERB. This is a high tribute to the author. In all newscasts, or nearly all, it was mentioned that many fans would be made because fifteen books of ERB’s remain unpublished. This is not further explained. Due to the universal use of the number fifteen, I assume that it was an official figure, perhaps from the Burroughs Corporation. The interest is even in Burroughs and the newscasts supported two interesting projects.

Project A. The complete publication of ERB’s works. Several things occur here. It is possible that some of his works are incomplete. I believe that even fragments of stories should be published, just as for A. H. Kerritt. The latter author had several fragments published, in two separate parts of the first chapters of two separate novels, and they were appreciated by Kerritt’s fans. * Of course all completed novels should be published as rapidly as possible instead of dragging them out for years. If ERB had 15 unpublished novels that amounts to about 25% of his total published production. If so, then ERB probably foresaw his death and wished to continue to give himself to his followers—a noble ideal! Such foresight is seldom encountered in life. Also the rare, and early work should be published, e.g., BEYOND THIRTY, THE GIRL FROM PARRIS’, THE EFFICIENCY EXPERT, etc. The complete publication of all of ERB’s output should be a major project of his fans.

Project B. The fans of A. Conan Doyle’s Sherlock Holmes have had for years a club, if I recall correctly, called The Baker Street Irregulars. Why not a similar club for Burroughs fans with the Burroughs Bulletin as the official publication? A moderate sum should be charged for dues each year, say one or two dollars, to take care of correspondence and publication of the Bulletin. Such a club should be exclusive enough to have in it only people who have read and followed ERB’s works, not just fans who have heard of or read one or two books. The latter are the perennial joiners and would contribute very little to the club.

Now here are the proposed projects that I would like for the BB readers to seriously consider. What do you think about it? We have in the editor of the BB the ideal man as a center for these projects. I believe that no other person in the country would be as suitable. It is up to the fans to decide.

*Ed’s note: J. Frank Autry informs me that when he met ERB he was shown the outline of a proposed story entitled “TWO GUN DOAK PLIES SOUTH”. This should be published along with other material by ERB.

Re: Mr. Gardner’s remarks for Project B. It has long been a desire of mine to form a club for the more serious collectors and fans of Edgar Rice Burroughs. The name I have in mind for such an organization is THE BURROUGHS BIBLIOPHILES. If we could form such a club, it would be prepared to have special letterheads, membership cards, pins and stamps, etc., for members. It would then be desirable to have a Burroughs Convention, on the order of the yearly science-fantasy cons, where Burroughs fans could meet and discuss various other projects for the advancement of the organization and preservation of Burroughs’ written works and by-products. I’d like hearing from 25 serious Burroughs collectors in order to get form such an organization. It is my belief that we would have the blessings of ERB, Inc., as Mr. Rothmund has always been willing to co-operate with genuine fans and collectors of ERB’s works.

If you are reading this, you now have in your hand a work that will undoubtedly be a collectors item in the not too distant future. THE BURROUGHS BULLETIN mailing list now numbers over one thousand fans in the United States, Canada, Mexico, South America, Europe, Australia...and one who writes from Africa. In the last issue I requested a letter or postcard from any that want to receive this issue. Just that simple request cut the mailing list for this issue in half. I am, therefore, leaving only enough issues published to furnish those interested persons who requested copies with same. You are reading an out-of-print issue! And, I might add, your editor is out of funds.

Now that this issue has been published, at long last, you can look forward to more frequent appearances of ye ol’ BB. I am not going to try to thank all the Burroughs fans who contributed making this issue possible...it would take a special issue just to credit them all.

This, I think, will be news to fans: On pages 5, 11 and 21, you will find the fine art-work of Russ Manning, a former fan-artist who is now under contract to Dell Publishing Co. His work appears in each issue of TARZAN. He is the artist of BROTHERS OF THE SPEAR in that magazine, as well as doing a Tarzan episode now and then. Here’s hoping that with these pages you will recapture at least a spark of the magic that was Edgar Rice Burroughs'
There was a moment of strange chill, a sense of standing naked and alone in the depths of space, then a strange, mad writhing that ended as abruptly as it began. He still felt the numbing snapping of something inside him, as of the parting of a great golden cord, and for a moment sat groggily on the spongy moss-like yellow sword.

For a moment an appalling sense of loss overcame him, and he closed his eyes in bitterness and defeat, then he opened them. For a moment he was stunned, and his mind refused to believe what he saw. He sat in a slight depression in the great expanse of yellow lawn-like foliage that covered the ground as far as he could see. The sky above was strangely pale blue, almost colorless, and no clouds were visible. In the middle distance the mound-like, crumbling ruins of a great city squatted beside what had once been a mighty sea. Strange, unworldly—yet strangely familiar. He blinked his eyes.

He braced his weight on legs that had pained him so severely, only to find the spring of youth in them, and found himself soaring incredibly into the sky. For a moment dizziness assaulted him, then a great happiness. He alighted a full forty feet from where he had tried to climb to his feet—and stood on two strong legs that held his weight without protest. He breathed deeply; the air was thin, and despite the orb of the sun, strangely small in that colorless sky, he felt cold. He shivered, then laughed, and sprang into the air. He glided as easily, sprawled; and for a moment lay still. He felt a freeness he had known; no longer heavy, no longer heavy his body swung so fully before And ever-present the strangely haunting familiarity of this very landscape.

A whisper of a sound made him turn—to stand rooted to the spot with incredulous mazement at sight of what bore down upon him at express-train speed. A rider, a giant seing, four-armed, green of body-coloring, ith great tusks protruding from a prognathous lower jaw, crouched a fifteen-foot once in his two right arms, and his demesne was wholly businesslike—and wholly urdurous.

Even as the terrible, many-legged beast bore down upon him, he sprang to one side and found himself shooting to one side at a terrific pace. But he had become accustomed to the strange lightness, and landed on his set. To his surprise, the giant green man pulled in his strange mount, and lowered greater spear. One arm was lifted in the universal sign of peace.

"Greetings, Earthman!" boomed a sonorous voice, that, though it spoke in a tongue he had never heard before, he understood at once.

"Loor, Tars Tarkas!" he called out, and wondered how he knew the form of address, and the strange giant's name. "Know the Jeddak of all the Tharks?"

Tars Tarkas opened his eyes wider. "You know me?" he called out.

"Yes, but how I know is as great a puzzle to me, as it is to you. A moment ago I was on Earth—and I must have fallen asleep—for I awoke here!"

Tars Tarkas edged the great beast closer. The mighty host grumbled and growled angrily.

"Then welcome to Barsoom—although I know not whence you came, nor why."

"Nor I!" he answered. Then suddenly, compellingly, he felt the urge to move, to go on. It came, compellingly. He saw Tars Tarkas stiffen.

"You're fading, Earthman! You're but a shadow." The great voice was tumbling away, into a vasty distance. The same unearthly chill, the same terrifying sense of flight through a numbing void—then suddenly a great city loomed clearly before him. Towers thrust up into the same frosty, colorless sky. Multicolored flyers darted at incredible speeds, and he seemed to pass among them, down, down to the gorgeous gardens below. On a brilliant red sword he alighted, to the amazement of two people seated on an amassive bench of polished erite. The man, a giant of splendid build and striking, lionine demeanor, sprang to his feet, his long sword coming clear on the instant. Bronzed though he was, he was yet an earthman. The woman at his side was of incredible beauty, her skin of dull, throbbing red.

For a moment the earthman advanced upon him, then a broad grin shot across his handsome features.

"Kaar, kinsman!" he called out, happily. "I once told you I would see you on Barsoom, in the capital city of Helium." A mighty hand seized his, heartily.

"Kaar, John Carter," he answered, and felt the tug of affection for this grinning giant of a man. "Now I've seen the incomparable Dejah Thoris, I know why you could not bring yourself to come again. How is Carthoris and Llana and Thuvis?" The names came unbidden to his lips, from whence he did not know. He wondered, even as he spoke them, how he knew.

"Well—all of them. You are welcome, kinsman—" he broke off, staring. The sen-
And now through the medium of the radio and the press, the world has learned that Tarzan’s creator is dead. It has come as a shock to millions of us readers, young and old, because we had almost come to hope that he was immortal like his own fantastic adventures.

Edgar Rice Burroughs will always be considered as an outstanding example of what may be accomplished with the opportunity of the American way of life. He took mere human material and with it earned a fortune of over $10,000,000. Good years, royalties from his books and their byproducts have amounted to more than double the President’s salary.

Burroughs never claimed that his stories had any great literary value. He was modest to a fault. An editorial in FORTUNE MAGAZINE quoted Burroughs as saying, “that some of his stories are not so hot but reminds me pertinently that they sell — an argument that admits of no rebuttal.” But Burroughs was a great spinner of yarns. He had stories to tell and he told them with artist. There are pages in his books which have an authentic touch of story-telling genius.

I know that I speak for millions of fans when I say that we will sincerely miss him. However, his spirit, his ideas, and his creations will live on to entertain and inspire this generation and the next and the next and the next.

In a sense he was a creator... because his phenomenal imagination created the most widely known character ever to “swing through” the pages of fiction. No literary creation has ever attained such universal renown as Tarzan of the Apes. Tarzan is a household word on every continent and in practically every nation on earth. More than that, Tarzan is a new American word — and in Webster’s New International Dictionary Tarzan is defined as “the hero of a series of stories by Edgar Rice Burroughs. He is a white man, of prodigious strength and chivalrous instincts, reared by African apes.” Two U. S. post offices have been named for Tarzan — Tarzana, California and Tarzana, Texas.

Burroughs liked Tarzan and always thought he was patterned after Mowgli of THE JUNGLE BOOK. According to Burroughs, however, Tarzan in a literary descendent of Romulus and Remus, the mythological founders of Rome who were reared by a she-wolf. There have been 24 Tarzan books in all, and three Tarzan tales are yet to be placed between hard covers. (“Tarzan and the Champion,” “Tarzan and the Jungle Murders,” and “The Quest of Tarzan”)

It is impossible to estimate the tremendous influence that Burroughs has had on the entire field of science fiction and fantasy. With the possible exception of Jules Verne, and H. G. Wells, he has done more to popularize the imaginative story than any other writer.

Even more popular than Tarzan with the fantasy aficionado is John Carter of Mars. The first three Martian books, “A Princess of Mars,” “The Gods of Mars,” and “The Warlord of Mars” are considered classics in their field. There is an “other world” magic in these tales that create an atmosphere of reality in the most impossible situations. I believe that the magnificent illustrations for this series by J. Allen St. John have done much to make these the prototype of all fantasies. These have been the inspiration of countless interplanetary yarns, though hosts of imitators have failed to capture the spirit of the original.

The last of the Martian series were obtained for publication by Ray Palmer when he was editor of AMAZING STORIES and FANTASTIC ADVENTURES. One of these—SKULLION MEN OF JUPITER—was the beginning of a new John Carter series which was never completed.

Demonstrating an equal flight of fancy are the stories featuring David Innes of Pellucidar” that strange primeval land at the earth’s core. Carson of Venus is another and newer science fiction hero. In addition, to these, I believe Burroughs wrote at least three books that stand out as classics of fantasy. I refer to “The Land that Time Forgot,” “The Moon Maid,” and “The Eternal Lover.”
sation of cold struck at the visitor once again, and the scene faded, spun away into the cold black of outer space.

The sense of falling, of spinning, at a tremendous rate through a great void, and then his eyes opened, and he saw shifting, billowing masses of cloud into which he sank, endlessly. Great trees, of incredible height, spread about him. And when at last he stood on resilient soil once more, his weight seemed more normal.

A great spider-like thing hung in a gigantic web above him. He heard the noisome roar of a mammoth man-eater; and saw a strange tiger-like animal, with enormous chelae protruding from its shoulders, stalking him. Then suddenly, a blonde giant of a man sprang before him, and with a slash of his sword, drove off the threatening beast.

"Hello there!" the man said in amazement. "I truly never thought to see you in person. When I left Guadalupe island, I was indeed amazed that I could remain en rapport with you across the millions of miles of space."

"But you did, Carson Napier," the visitor replied. He smiled, his gentle, kindly smile. "I've told your story, as you wished. How is Duare—and have you ever learned the square root of minus-one?"

"She is here—" A wondrously beautiful girl advanced shyly, held out her hand. The visitor's hand touched hers, then abruptly he felt the sickening lurch of transit ones more, and the scene spun madly away into nothingness.

He felt heat next, a muggy warmth that oozed all about him, and the glare of a pitiless sun. He felt growing things, a madness of growth, unchecked, all about him. The scene he saw next took his breath away. It was a nightmare out of the past, when the world was young, and gigantic animals frolicked, and hairy mammoths roamed the undulating planes that seemed to climb to a sky in the distance, instead of ending in a horizon. Then on the mighty sea that billowed and rolled before him, he saw a strange craft, beating in to shore. Without sails, it's great wooden hull glinting, it sped over the water with a mighty roar, to pile upon the sand with an echoing crash, spilling two men out into the shallow water.

The younger, a man in the prime of life, grinned. "That's the end of the first jet-powered boat in Pellucidar, Perry," he said. The older man shook his shaggy white-haired head. "It was a good idea—just didn't work out."

Then the two became aware of the visitor, turned to him.

"Hello there!" came the cry. "Perry, look who's here!"

They shook his hand. The older man with a grip fully as powerful as the younger.

"Not bad for a man a hundred and eight years old, huh?" he grinned.

"How are you, David Innes—and Abner Perry—and how is Dian the Beautiful?"

"Everyone is fine," the younger man said. "By George, we'll have a celebration! Pellucidar will ring to it."

"No," strange compulsion held him. "I must go. There is yet another place I must visit—"

Terrible emptiness, falling, falling...

A ringing cry echoed in his ears as he sat up and opened his eyes. A giant white man, nearly naked, stood over him. He smiled, gravely, bent to offer a hand.

"My friend—it is good to see you."

"Tarzan—Tarzan of the Apes. The visitor felt a great warmth inside him.

"Come, my friend—the upper terraces are open. I see you cannot stay—but this is the freedom, the life you always sought. Come!"

With a lithe spring the ape-man swung up to the nearest jungle giant. For a moment the other hesitated, then he sprang upward, found his hands gripping a limb. A great cry burst from his lips, echoed over the trackless jungles. A lion roared an answer, and he looked down upon a giant black-maned golden lion.

"Jad-bal-jal!" he cried out, and the mighty beast roared his greeting.

For a long, long moment he found the pleasures, the thrill, of being free, of living as he had always wanted to live—then, sadly, tragically, he called out.

"Farewell, Tarzan of the Apes!"

The giant ape-man was beside him, his strong hand gripping his shoulder. "Not farewell, my friend," he said. "We will meet again. We who have tasted of the freedom of life—parting can be no sorrow for us—for we know the certainty that we will meet again! Until then—"

The victory cry of the bull ape thundered from his mighty chest, and his head was tossed back, and one powerful hand struck his chest resoundingly....

The darkness, the chill, the sense of falling, was greater than ever before. It seemed interminable. Then abruptly he felt solid ground and opened his eyes. A great vacancy was about him. Rolling wisps of cloud and empty vacuum. This was no place he had ever been before, there was no sense of familiarity here. Dimly, he felt the presence of mighty personages, in the shrouding mists of time.
A great, booming voice, cold, mechanical, rang out:

"You stand before us for judgment—and for placing. If there are those who will speak for you—let them advance!"

And suddenly, from the mists came a long line of men, splendid, wondrous men, and beautiful women. He knew them, knew them all. Stern, forbidding of mien, not a smile was cast upon him, and he felt the alien cold creep close. In striking array they stood before him.

Tarzan of the Apes, John Carter, Warlord of Mars, Carson of Venus, David Innes, Abner Perry, Tanar of Pellucidar, the mighty Monster Man, the slim, dark figure of the Benedict of Hell's Bend, the small, leopard-like Outlaw of Torn, in golden armor, The Red Hawk, the bearded Had King, The Terrible Tenderfoot, and Shoz-siji the ape-sha in full war-paint—

No word was spoken, but they stood before him, and suddenly a great fear burst upon him. Who was he in such mighty company? He felt nervous, ill at ease, and lonely.

The great voice boomed out: "Hear me, stranger! Have you conquered the depths of space like John Carter and Carson Napier?"

And, tremulously, he answered, "No."

"Have you made yourself Lord of the Jungle and of the beasts as Tarzan of the Apes has done?"

"No," must be his answer, and his fear grew.

"Have you known the wondrous adventures, the great loves, that have been the lot of these others?"

"No." And he knew he was lost.

"Then, must we judge ye—" He knew he had lost, the great voice, impersonal, be-tokened his doom.

"Wait!" It came from a chorus of voices. A thrill shot through him. A mighty host seemed suddenly to appear as the mists rolled back. Fighting men, of many worlds, in every garb, in the full panoply of war and glory.

John Carter, Warlord of Mars stepped forward. "As the first-born of all these," he included the wondrous host about him, "I shall speak. This man has none of the honors and the glories that he has given us. But he has more. He has the greatness of immortality, for he created us all."

Then, suddenly warm and glowing, the voice thundered forth: "Then let it be known ye have been judged, and not found wanting. As few men may, you have created myriad worlds for yourself, and all of which are yours. Forever, as long as men read books, and boys live in the wondrous reality that is books, for as long as mankind shall endure—you will live. That is the judgement. And before this assembled host, I name thee, Master of Other Worlds."

And ten thousand times a thousand swords lifted high, and millions of voices rang out. And he was one with them, and the shadow-state was gone, and he was there, real. They pressed close about him. Tarzan of the Apes stood beside him, gripping his hand. His smile was grave, kindly.

"Welcome home, Edgar Rice Burroughs," he said, simply. "Welcome home!"

REALISTIC DREAMS

By Basil Wells

Even though all his fans knew that Burroughs was a very sick man since the end of the war, it was rather a shock to hear of his death. It meant that no more would Lord Greystoke, Carson Napier, John Carter, and David Innes discover new lands and hidden cities to explore.

Burroughs wrote for the thousands of us in whom the boyhood urge to explore, to look on new and mysterious scenes, and to refuse to be content with the well-worn channel into which life launched us, yet endures. Critics call him inordinately bloody. They term his command of words and plotting mediocre, or poor. A recent article said he had written the same story again and again—particularly the Tarzan saga. Perhaps they are correct—in their own particular approach to his works. . . . But, to us, the readers, the vitality and gentle irony of Burroughs' own personality shines through the mere words. We sensed kinship.

He made his characters live for us. We remember the names of cities and lost, long-forgotten lands of adventure. We know the geography of Mars and Pellucidar as well or better than that of much of Terra. That the moon of Earth is hollow, and that in the South Pacific lies Caspak—of this we are more than halfway convinced. Burroughs made even his most fantastic creations take on three-dimensional reality. We lived with them—knew them.

And all this with (as the critics have it), an inferior command of language, poor plotting, and the same story told again and again! Would that I could approach ERB's story telling!

Do you remember the names, places and backgrounds of the highly touted book club selections of a year ago? Or the three chief characters of that detective pocket book you just tossed aside last evening?

Another thing about Burroughs. His people are healthy, not overdressed, and primitives in a refreshingly modern manner. But, unlike the current flood of printed bound books, sex is not dabbed and smeared, at carefully calculated intervals, over the true story's surface. The hero isn't always making passes at his pal's wife, and the rascal who tries, gets it in the neck. Old-fashioned perhaps, but we don't hesitate to let the small-fry read Burroughs. Personally I'm sick of the boudoir atmosphere and the unhealthy stressing of sex over stomach. Food comes first.

Perhaps this is why science fiction and fantasy are coming into their own. And in this respect Burroughs led the way. Verne, Wells, Haggard, Lovecraft, Heinlein, and all the others, are widely known and read. But Burroughs reached millions more than any of these.

I had hoped to read Burroughs' explanation of the mysterious little planet hanging so close above Pellucidar. That balloon should have landed at John Carter and Tarzan could have combined forces—say on Jupiter. And what's cooking down in the Land That Time Forgot? The germs of a few score other stories, stemming from Burroughs' fertile imaginations, keep fermenting in my head. But I'm not ERB. I don't know what he planned. Maybe his sons do....Here's hoping.

Kid Stuff!

By John Harwood

With the passing of Edgar Rice Burroughs, the nation has lost the author, with whose characters many an American has grown up. As the years passed, many of these readers gave up the Burroughs books and now refer to the works as kid stuff. Why is this? Just because they liked the stories when they were young is no reason why the books shouldn't appeal to adults as well. It's true that many children read the books, but that doesn't make them juveniles. Besides the adventures of Tarzan, John Carter and the other characters, ERB has written into his novels many things that appeal more to the adult reader than to the kids.

As a youngster you probably enjoyed the way John Carter could fight a dozen swordsmen single-handed and defeat them. If you read the Mars books again today you would find that in addition to the adventures of the Swordsman of Two Worlds that ERB is a very successful prophet of things to come. Not to be outdone by H. G. Wells and Jules Verne, Burroughs has predicted radar, the automatic pilot, the radio compass, the telescope, transmission of pictures by radio or wire, and the homing device for bombs and torpedoes.

Burroughs fans who have continued reading the books after becoming adults find that they enjoy the author's comments on the contrast between primitive and civilized societies. Most of this is lost on children. If ERB's stories are juvenile, why does he waste time on the satires which are above the heads of the kids? He is one of the few writers whose books can interest both groups. The younger readers go in for the straight adventure while the adults read both the adventures and the more serious matter beneath the surface of the stories. "Carson of Venus," for example, can be read for the thrills or you can look back of the action and read it as a caricaturized picture of the Nazi party of pre-war Germany.

Some of the things that the author says about men and women show that he wasn't thinking of his younger readers when he wrote them. A few examples:

"You can always tell honest men. They go around telling the world how honest they are."

"He snatched the mask from the screaming man as easily as one man takes another's wife in Hollywood...."

"He had known women of the outer crust who were like her. Marriage to them, meant a struggle for supremacy. It was a 50-50 proposition of their own devising—they took fifty and demanded the other fifty."

"Only man of all the animals has the faculty of devising torture for amusement."

Another thing that will appeal to the adult reader are the figures of speech that the author uses. Where a youngster may rush over a descriptive passage to get to the action, an adult may go back and read a certain passage to get the full flavor of it. Some of his most poetic expressions are almost lost between the more exciting passages of his works. A few examples:

"The morning mist floated lazily in the still air, the soul of the dead night clinging reluctantly to earth."

"A low sun pointed long shadows toward the east; the tired day was preparing to lay aside its burdens."

"Curiosity is often a fatal poison."

"A company of dead men paddling up a river of death, three hundred ebon Charons escorting his dead soul to Hell."

"The cruel, terrible thousand-eyed thing that is a crowd."

"The great, gray dreadnought of the jungle...." (Tantor)

"His house of hair..." (Arab tent)

Now it all adds up to this. Forget that you have read the Burroughs books as a child and reread them over again. See if you're not surprised to find that they are not kid-stuff after all.
LETTERS IN TRIBUTE TO EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS

The death of Edgar Rice Burroughs will loose a flood of memories, for boys of every vintage since 1912 have swung from tree limbs and beat their chests with bloodcurdling cries in emulation of his most durable creation, Tarzan of the Apes. Even the little girls who were permitted to play the role of Jane, the Jungle Lord's well-born mate, will be saddened.

Today's youngsters are turning to space ships and atomic disintegrators, little knowing that Burroughs' fertile imagination pioneered interplanetary adventure for their parents—his first sale was a story of Marsmen.

If a man's life is judged by the amount of pleasure and entertainment he has given others, Burroughs stands high on the list. Few writers have reached a larger audience, yet he was free of arty pretense. He neither went to college, nor to Africa. He said he was an escapist—that he wrote to escape being broke. But he kept on writing after he had made several fortunes, and we suspect he wrote for the same reason millions of people read him—because it was fun.

—The Los Angeles Times

Although I was expecting it, the death of ERB came as a great shock. It's hard to fully realize that he is gone. It's terribly hard to see and idol pass, and ERB was an idol to many of us.

I never met Edgar Rice Burroughs; and in a way, it's better like that. I know him from his books alone, and I think there is much of the man in them. He had faith in mankind and in its struggle to become something more; Tarzan and John Carter and the others are supermen. They are men, not as men really are, but as Burroughs liked to think of them, noble, strong, unconquerable. Nothing could ever conquer them; nothing ever conquered Burroughs the man, I think, not even death which he hated so much. In almost every novel he wrote he fought with the inevitable end to all men; he mocked it, denied it, hated it. And, in a way, I think he has won his fight. Every man who was ever a boy, and who gloried in the doings of Tarzan and his cohorts from ERB's pen, owes a vast debt to Edgar Rice Burroughs. He had worldly success, everything this world could grant him; but it was not enough. Like John Carter, his eyes were always on another, better, more romantic world, where immortality is the commonplace and the wondrous but natural. I know he found that world waiting for him when he snapped the feeble cord of life and stood stronger, more alive than ever, among the stars.

The world will go along without ERB, but in a way it will be an emptier place. In the heart of every boy who reads of Tarzan and the others, he has left his indelible mark. It's the kind of memorial few men leave behind them, and Burroughs more than deserved it.

—Samuel A. Peeples

I met Mr. Burroughs several times and found him to be a delightful and charming person. I was very sorry to learn of his death and feel that the world of make-believe has lost one of its most renowned contributors. Having been a life long Tarzan fan myself, I have read all the Tarzan books and am doing my best to carry on the tradition of Tarzan as I think Mr. Burroughs would want it. We are filming the next picture in Africa, and I am glad for I always felt this series needed more authenticity.

—Lex Barker
My first meeting with Mr. Burroughs occurred in 1921 or 1922 at the old First National Studios, at Santa Monica Ave. and Gower St. in L.A. He arrived with his young son, Jack, who was about seven years of age at that time—a dear little fellow he was.

Afterwards, Mrs. Tabler and I became on cordial terms with the Burroughs family, and enjoyed this relationship over a period of years.

Mr. Burroughs was a fine gentleman and I am sad to learn of his passing.

—P. Dempsey Tabler

In the long summer days of 1930, 1931, and 1932 when I was ten, eleven and twelve years old, I believe that my finest pastime was reciting, from memory, the Tarzan books of Edgar Rice Burroughs. I used to gather friends from the surrounding houses under my Grandmother's great oak tree, and there, in the leafy quiet, intone the chapter and verse of the mighty ape-man, and recount the most thrilling deeds of John Cleac as Kerchak, and Hasta, and Tantor. I have never forgotten those fine days and how happy they made me. I shall never forget them. There is no doubt that Mr. Burroughs knew his way to a boy's heart more certainly than anyone else who ever picked up a writer's pen. They will be selling Tarzan in the book stalls in the year 2550, and my great-great-great-grandson will be buying and reciting same.

—Ray Bradbury

I met E.R.B. during the Superior Court case of the director, Scott Sidney, suing the National Film Corp. for his bonus for directing Tarzan of the Apes. I was on the witness stand when we were adjourned for lunch. Just as I came off of the stand, I was stopped by a man who said, "Hello Elmo," and offered me his right hand. I took it and looked him over. He had a big grin on his face, dressed in an oxford gray business suit, a derby hat and carried a cane. After a few seconds I said, "You have me guessing." Still grinning he said, "Edgar Rice Burroughs!" We had lunch together and he informed me he was going to write a few more Tarzan stories, and wanted to know if I knew of a place he could buy. I told him I would have a responsible real estate dealer, C. E. Taberman, phone him.

Later I found out Taberman failed to get in touch with him. The next time I saw Edgar, he told me he had bought the General Otis Ranch on Ventura Blvd. for $125,000. That is where the town of Tarzana is now located. I believe that was in the spring of 1919. Edgar booked and talked like a retired businessman. No one, looking at him, would take him for the author of Tarzan and other fantastic stories. From talking with him I am of the belief that his characters were real people to him and his readers, and he enjoyed writing about them.

—Elmo Lincoln

I read the sad news of E.R.B.'s passing. I can't say that I was especially surprised for I had understood that he was a very sick man, but still it was somewhat of a jolt to realize he was gone.

—I held him in great esteem for his writings and the pleasure they gave me through the years. Like most of us I knew little about the man beyond some brief biographical and personal bits read here and there, and although I never had the pleasure of a personal meeting with Burroughs, I somehow felt I knew something of his inner nature and character from his works.

My greatest exposure to Burroughs occurred in my early teens when one is supposedly in the inarticulate stage. I read as much of E.R.B as I could get, in as short a time as I could and was enthralled by the wonderful adventures he gave me and the strange new worlds he took me to. I think he had some influence in shaping my character (for whatever it may be worth) and thinking as well as what I like to call my code of behavior and living.

Of late years there has been an intensive campaign to teach "toleration" to the peoples of this country, but long ago I observed the friendship of John Carter for Tera Tarkas and realized the futility and stupidness of dislike for another just for reason of any physical differences that might exist.

The contempt of Tarka for those who hunt and kill for sport has removed any desire I might have had to tangle into the woods in the fall with gun and dog and hang around anything that moves. As yet I have not been hungry enough. Of course there are probably lots of Burroughs fans who are ardent huntmen and for all I know maybe Burroughs was one also. (Ed's note: None hunter Burroughs once became a game warden to prevent hunting on his vast Tarzana ranch.) These are lessons in living in Burroughs and a lot of us might be a little better for the emulation of some of the qualities of E.R.B.'s heroes.

Burroughs is gone but his wonderful characters live on. They live on but they are now static, they can grow no more. Only for a new reader can they grow, as he moves from book to book.

What now? The finest memorial to Burroughs is the work he built himself: his books. What is his fan club? I am not sure. What I have in mind is some sort of an organization on the pattern of "The Baker Street Irregulars," although not an out and out copy. It would have to develop on its own. I think there should be many fans who would be interested in something like this.

—Allan Howard

I never did get to know Ed. Burroughs very well, but he always seemed a very pleasant, mild sort of person that completely belied his wonderful resourcefulness, inventiveness, adventurousness and outdoor activity which was so evident in his many, many, imaginative stories and works. He holds, I'm sure, a unique position in literature as well as in the hearts of countless millions of readers and fans throughout the world; and I'm sure there is great grief to which I add my own, that such a contributor to the well being of mankind should be lost to us all.

—Bruce Berenson

75
It's one of the grand double-crosses of fate that valuable men like Burroughs have to die, while good for nothings like Stalin live on and on. But I suppose that the world will always have some scoundre or other; we got rid of Mussolini, Hitler and Tojo, and in their place we've got Stalin who is even worse than the other three; I suppose that by the time we'll rid the world of Stalin that some even bigger jerk will crawl forth from his cocoon to take his place as world enemy number one.

Be all this as it may, of this much I'm certain: that folks will still be reading Edgar Rice Burroughs long after the Mussolini, Hitlers, Tojos, Stalins are dead and forgotten—just as folks are still reading Homer's Iliad even though ages have passed since the demise of the old-time conquerors. It proves that the pen is mightier than the sword.

—Aurelius Bogdan

To me, Edgar Rice Burroughs! Tarzan served the same purpose as water wings do to a beginning swimmer. Tarzan kept me on top of the water until I had my feet on the ground as Jungle Jim. I am sincerely grateful to Burroughs and deeply regret his passing.

—Johnny Weissmuller

At the age of eight, I discovered Tarzan — and from that moment my life's vocation was decided: I, too, would be a writer. It was another twenty-five years before I did anything practical about that decision, but the day did come. My first book (naturally!) was far more Burroughs than Browne — so much so that Mr. Burroughs (with whom I'd been corresponding for years) wrote me that "it was one of the best books he (Mr. Burroughs) had ever written! Since then I've written several novels in the detective field, plus something like two million words of magazine fiction, as well as eleven years as magazine editor. None of this, I feel, would have happened had I not encountered the work of Mr. Burroughs at an impressionable age. Years later I met Mr. Burroughs in Chicago — and out of that meeting a friendship developed which endured until his death.

—Howard Browne

It was my good fortune and pleasure to meet Mr. Burroughs but once and I enjoyed our conversation very much. He told me he had first had a hard time getting a publisher to look at his script. However, after the first book was published, which was very popular, they were at his door continuously.

—Joseph C. Pohler

I met Edgar Rice Burroughs when he was visiting the set, where we were making TARZAN THE FEARLESS, in 1933. Although I have played many parts as an actor on television and motion picture screens, I, like the many others who have played Tarzan, find that it is such a famous role that the public never ceases to identify you with it, regardless of what other successes you may win.

—Buster Crabbe

To anyone with a mind attuned to dates and figures, my recollections of Edgar Rice Burroughs will, I fear, prove unfruitful reading. In the first place, I did not meet the man until after he had sold Tarzan of the Apes" to All Story for a comparatively small sum.

Having illustrated for A.C. McClurg and Co. for some years — mostly Westerns and Adventure tales, and many which called for the drawing of animals as well as the human form both clad and semi nude— I was called into consultation with Mr. Bray, editor of McClurg at that time. Luckily for me, Mr. Bray had the thought that I might be competent to handle a Burroughs book. As for myself, I jumped at the chance and that combination of author and illustrator proved a happy one. Many, many hundreds of Burroughs published from there on.

Early in this period, Mr. Burroughs expressed himself as pleased and wished to meet me. Thereafter, he made a number of visits to my studio. On one of these occasions he told me that he considered my work a visualization of the scenes and characters that he had created. This was good to hear and as he never found fault or criticized my efforts naturally lead to a cherished friendship.

He also told me that previous to his writing career, when he was attempting to make a living as a business man, he sought success in many divergent ways, one of which was writing business advice for a correspondence school. That he was not greatly given to the reading of fiction but to the weaving of stories of his own imagination instead of, as most of us do, relying on a book for diversion. He had a flair for the bizarre, the more unusual the better, and to achieve this would send his mind winging to the Planets. The Moon, Venus and, above all, Mars were the setting for a drama of strange beings with customs and thoughts literally out of this world. His magnificent genius did not stop here. There followed the invention of a completely different animal life—monsters and demi-monsters, some of which but not all, horrific. Pure products of a fertile brain and all the more interesting because utterly unlike anything theretofore conceived. But, and herein for me lies the reason for their ready acceptance, always plausible. A lesser writer would have made them ridiculous. With Burroughs they fitted into the tale and I am sure never evoked the slightest feeling of derision.

Edgar Rice Burroughs stands alone in the field that he created for himself. Others will essay to carry on in his line but, of necessity they will probably always show a tinge of imitation. How could it be otherwise?

With great admiration for his achievements and regretting that I have had perforce to speak so much of myself in the foregoing.

—J. Allen St. John
A Visit to Tarzana

I was driving out Ventura Blvd., on my way to Tarzana, Calif. A town named after a legend, for truly TARZAN has become a modern legend. My purpose for paying the town a visit, was to meet the son of the founder of the community, John Coleman Burroughs. I was quite thrilled at the prospect of meeting the son of Tarzan’s creator, and at the same time, disappointed that I would be unable to meet the great author himself. For Edgar Rice Burroughs was ill and unable to receive visitors, and my express purpose for making the trip to California had been to meet him. However, since I might call myself a “Burroughs clan fan”, I was looking forward with pleasure to meeting John Coleman.

I made a left turn and drove to the top of a hill where the Burroughs home overlooks the township of Tarzana. At the bottom of this hill is the offices and stockrooms of Edgar Rice Burroughs, Inc. I parked my car and was met at the gateway of a very attractive home by Mr. Burroughs’ wife, Jane Ralston Burroughs. John Coleman, himself, came from the house with extended hand and a warm smile that promptly put me at ease. He is a tall, well-built man who looks a great deal like his father, and, perhaps, one day will prove that he has his father’s gift for story-telling. He has already co-authored three stories with his brother Haldwin; one with his wife; and recently completed a fantasy novel of his own yet to be published.

We took seats beside the swimming pool where the two young Burroughs boys were splashing about in the water. And nearby, beneath the shade of a tree, the youngest Burroughs child was napping in a cradle. I had brought along some choice items from my collection which included the Oct. 1912 All Story magazine and Feb. 1916 All Around magazine, containing the original publications of TARZAN OF THE APES and BEYOND THIRTY. Also some rare photographs of various screen Tarzans and ERB. After showing these around Mr. Burroughs invited me into the house where he showed me his library which included many fantasy novels and some A. Merritt books.

John Coleman handed me a large manuscript of one of his father’s stories. It was entitled "TARZAN AND JANE". At first I thought this to be an unpublished Burroughs novel, but a closer inspection revealed that "TARZAN AND JANE" was the original title of the story that appeared in Blue Book as "TARZAN AND THE IMMORTAL MAN" and later in book form as "TARZAN’S QUEST".

Of interest to Burroughs fans, were some of the first editions of his father’s books that John Coleman showed me. Each contained a humorous cartoon, drawn by Edgar Rice Burroughs, with an inscription and signature by the author. "Dad use to sign and illustrate all his books to personal friends this way," John Coleman said. "He is a capable draftsman." (Lucky indeed is the fan who owns a Burroughs book so inscribed by the author. One such fan is Sam Pepske of San Francisco.) All one has to do is look in the Burroughs books to see the fine maps that appear there of Pellucidar, Amtor, Palueldon, (reproduced below) etc., these are all the work of ERB.

MAP OF PAL-UUL-DON

The above map was copied and to some extent redrawn from a rough sketch found among the notes made by Lord Greystoke of his experiences in Palueldon.

I was then shown into a room where a beautiful St. John original hung upon the wall. It was an illustration from "THUVIA, MAID OF MARS", showing Thar Ban, the green man, with Thuvia in his arms, astride a galloping thorough. In the background can be seen the towering ruins of a dead city while two Barsoomian moons add light to the subjects. "This is my favorite illustration from Dad’s books," said Mr. Burroughs. "I believe that St. John captured the spirit of my father’s stories better than any other artist."

This was a fine compliment indeed from one artist of another’s work. For John Coleman has capably illustrated no less than a dozen of his father’s books. But one is not to measure his ability as an artist by these illustrations alone, for he has painted some remarkable scenes of Mexican and western life in oils and water colors which have been exhibited in Los Angeles, San Francisco and Chicago art galleries.

We returned to our chairs beside the pool to find that John Coleman’s sister, Joan Burroughs Pierce, had arrived. A charming woman with bobbed brunette hair. After being introduced to her I again passed around the treasured bits of my collection in which Joan, an ardent fan of her father's works, was very interested. The conversation naturally came around to James H. Pierce, former screen Tarzan and husband of Joan, and I learned that Pierce and John Coleman's wife had posed for the painting John Coleman made to illustrate THE OAKDALE AFFAIR. Also, that Joan and Pierce had played the voices of Jane and Tarzan in a series of radio programs based on TARZAN AND THE GOLDEN LION. After a short time Joan departed, but not before she offered to arrange a meeting between Mr. Pierce and myself for that evening, which I gladly accepted.

I asked John Coleman what had become of his cousin, Studley Burroughs, who had illustrated a few of ERB's books and I was told that he is now a very successful commercial artist.

The phone rang and Mr. Burroughs left to answer it. When he returned he informed me that it would be permissible for me to go with him to meet his father. This was indeed a pleasant surprise.

We made the trip in Mr. Burroughs' car; a short drive from Tarzana to 5565 Zelzah Avenue, Encino. Here we pulled into the driveway of a beautiful home with abounding yard and garden, in which, a caretaker was at work. I followed John Coleman into the house and there was the master story teller himself. He was sitting in a wheelchair and as I grasped his proffered hand I must have looked all the world like the open-mouthed-young-fan and, I confess, I felt a great deal like one. "We enjoy reading the Bulletin," the author said, "you and your correspondents are doing a fine job."

Thanking Mr. Burroughs for his kind words concerning the Bulletin I noticed that Joan Burroughs Pierce and Mr. Burroughs' oldest son, Hulbert, were also present. As John Coleman made the introduction Hulbert said: "You know, you were our first fan. We were quite thrilled that someone thought enough of our stories to write us about them." He was referring to the series of stories he and his brother co-authored for Thrilling Wonder and Startling Stories which I had written to them about in 1939-40.

I showed Mr. Burroughs the items from my collection. He smiled and asked how large my collection was. I told him that it was complete except for a few of the very rare magazine stories. He told me to make out a list of the ones that I lacked and if his company had extra copies he would see that I got them. I thanked him and asked if he would mind signing my copies of All-Story and All Around. He asked John Coleman for his writing board, which he fitted across the arms of his chair. After signing the first magazine he said: "I hope you will be able to read this. I am ashamed of my writing since I have been ill, I use to have a hand I was proud of." I inquired as to the nature of his illness and he sighed, "Oh, I don't know, each doctor tells me something different." Then he added, his eyes twinkle humorously, "Personally, I think it's antiquity." I could see that it was a tedious task for him to sign the magazines and as he finished the last one and handed it to me he said, "Mr. Coriell, these are my last autographs, I shall never sign another!"

Mr. Burroughs told me how he had used the pseudonym, Normal Bean (Normal Head), when he wrote NEJAH THORIS, PRINCESS OF MARS, because he did not want his name connected with such absurd imaginings. However, the editor of All Story magazine spoiled his little pun by changing Normal to Norman, and thereafter he signed his own name to his writings.

I asked why BEYOND THIRTY had never been published in book form. And Joan Pierce joined in, agreeing that it was worthy of book publication. But before the author could answer the telephone rang and he spent the next few moments conversing with the party on the other end of the line.

When the author hung up the phone Joan asked him why he did not take a trip to the studio where the latest Tarzan film was in production. He replied that the studios tired him but that Sol Lesser had been calling, wanting him to come out and that he might do so the following morning. He asked if I would come to join him at the studio the next morning to watch the film. I explained that I had just paid the studio visit the previous week but that I'd be most happy to accompany him on a return visit.

With these arrangements I took leave of the Burroughs household before departing. I asked about Mr. Burroughs' war reports. "I have them under lock and key," he stated and "it is doubtful they ever be republished." I hope this will prove to be true. I have a copy of the July 12, 1945 Advertiser containing one of these. But since the wars ended the Advertiser files of back issues have been completely destroyed by fire. So unless these reports somehow or other find their way into book form Burroughs fans will be missing a unique chapter in Mr. Burroughs' career.

On the way back to John Coleman's home we stopped at the offices of ERB, Inc. It was after office hours, but John Coleman let us in with his own key. The first office is a receiving room for visitors and several original paintings illustrating the Burroughs novels hang upon the wall. I followed John Coleman into the adjoining office which contained the desks of Mr. Rothmund and Hulbert Burroughs. The walls of this room are lined with book shelves, containing copies of ERB's books in almost every known language, and many rare magazines containing Burroughs' stories. Among these I saw a beautiful illustrated edition of THE TARZAN TWINS that had been published in England.

We then entered ERB's own office. In the center of the room was a handsome modern desk where he received his visitors. Along one wall was a large library that Mr. Burroughs used for research. In a corner was a very large old desk. This was Mr. Burroughs' work desk. It was here that the adventures of Tarzan, John Carter, David Innis, Carson of Venus, and a host of other characters, were turned out on the keys of a typewriter. Lying on the desk was two manuscripts. One a satire of the modern detective story entitled MORE FUN, MORE PEOPLE KILLED! It was complete with a floor plan, drawn by ERB, showing where each victim was killed in the story, (which includes practically every character in the story, including the detective). The other was an uncompleted Tarzan on which the author was working when he became ill. A letter, I received from Mr. Burroughs while he was working on this novel, informed me that "The locale of the new Tarzan novel will be Darkest Africa." However, it was quite a large manuscript and I would judge it to be almost finished. Also on the desk was a TARZAN TARGET GAME of Mr. Burroughs' own design, and a very interesting statuette that had been carved and sent to ERB by a fan in Europe. It depicts the boy, Tarzan, looking at a picture book and pointing to an ape while tapping himself on his chest.

We then went into the stock rooms where the wrapping and mailing of the Burroughs novels is done. "The place is stacked with hundreds of boxes containing the latest ERB novels and reprints.

Returning to John Coleman's home he showed me his studio. A two story affair with his workshop upstairs. On the easel was a fine western scene in water colors. He then displayed several original paintings and drawings he had made for his fathers' books. Also, some of the JOHN CARTER OF MARS cartoon strips that he did before the war. From the wall he took a beautifully carved sword. "This is John Carter's sword," he said. "I made it to use as a model in the illustrations for the Mars stories. One would think that John Carter, himself, had paid a visit to John Coleman's studio and had left his sword behind.

I asked about the T shaped trade mark that appears on the ERB novels. "We were all out on a fishing trip one day," John Coleman explained, "and as dad and I did not care too much for fishing, we were lying in the shade of a tree talking. Dad was doodling in the sand with a stick and he happened to make this T shaped thing. He said that he thought he would use it for a trade mark and he has ever since. Perhaps," he added, "dad had something in mind concerning it, but he has never said so."

The hour was growing late and I had yet to stop by the Pierce home, where I was due to meet James H. Pierce, former Tarzan of the screen (I will describe this meeting in the next issue of the EB). So I said goodnight to John Coleman. "You know," I said at parting, "It doesn't take much of a detective to realize that it was you and your sister who made it possible for me to meet your father." "Well, John Coleman replied, "We know how much you wanted to meet him, and today was the first time the doctor allowed him to have visitors, including ourselves. That is why Hubert and all of us were here."

Driving back to Los Angeles I realized that I had spent a day such as most Burroughs fans dream about. I had been privileged to meet not only the fabulous Edgar Rice Burroughs, but his entire family and James H. Pierce, as well. I shall always consider it an honor having met this fine group of people.

The following morning when I arrived at the studio I found Mr. Burroughs watching the filming of scenes for the Tarzan picture in production. Jane Burroughs, Joan Pierce and Mike, her son, had accompanied Mr. Burroughs to the studio. "He was very excited about the visit," his daughter said. "He was up at 7:30 getting ready."

Needless to say, the studio was all a-stir with ERB present. Newspaper and publicity writers hovered about him asking questions. "I enjoy the movies," Mr. Burroughs said. "They've done very well by Tarzan. But I wish they would make some of my books!"

Producers discarded Burroughs' own stories of Tarzan after the first few movies, and, as all fans know, ERB's Tarzan and the movie Tarzan are two entirely different characters. This piqued the fans as well as ERB, who received $175,000 per picture plus a percentage of the profits. "I'm mostly interested in the box office," the author said. "But the screen writers got a lot of ideas I wish I'd thought of," he chuckled, watching the starlets in chiffon harem clothing.

This was Burroughs' first trip to a studio in several years. "I don't like the movie business," he said, "too tedious."

Sol Lesser announced that the photographer had arrived to take pictures. "Well, bring me my girls," ERB laughed. And several of the "Slave Girls" were rounded up to pose with him.

Flash bulbs popped as ERB, posed in turn with the "Slave Girls!" Jane Burroughs, his daughter and grandson, Sol Lesser, and Lex Barker. "When these are printed," Lex said to Burroughs, "I'd like for you to autograph one for me." Burroughs waved his hand, "No autographs," he said. "I signed my last one yesterday." Lex looked perplexed, I don't think he quite understood the
I think all of us feel that way. One part of us accepts the inevitability of death while another says that is for other people, with us things will be different. If you ever read the Studs Lonigan trilogy by James T. Farrell, you will remember that early in the story the young Studs looks at himself in the glass and is quite pleased with what he sees. He compares himself with his father and vows that he'll never get paunchy and out of shape. He tells himself that years later his graying friends will clap him on the back and ask him how he does it.

If you read the book you will know he didn't do it. However, what I mean is Farrell couldn't have written this about Studs if he, Farrell, hadn't once, or still, felt that way about himself.

Even I, yes, even I look in a mirror and say "By God, Howard, here you are thirty-seven and you don't look it. You could pass for thirty or younger easy." Oh yes, some people have been kind enough to look amazed when I told them how old I am. And then I go to a dentist and he says, "Ah my lad, we will have to take that one out." And then I realize that I too am but mortal and that I am slowly disintegrating. It is all very sad.

I am enclosing a clipping (reprinted below) from a recent "Life" which reports the sad fate of an individualist. Yes it is true that the individualist is always suspect. In my own small way I consider myself one also because I am addicted to the reading of fantasy stories, and in some circles it could be pretty disastrous to admit this, as you no doubt know.

In my seven-year-old days we were all Tom Mix's and Buck Jones's and God help the kid who would have shown up and proclaimed himself Elmo Lincoln. We were also oops, robbers and such but never age-men. Be as individual as you like but please do it in the approved and proper channels. Is this a paradox?

DISEASE FOR INDIVIDUALISTS

A 7-year-old boy dressed in a loin cloth and armed with a hunting knife was recently picked up near his home. When he proclaimed that he was a tree man from the African jungle he was taken to a children's hospital. A doctor examined him and pronounced that he was suffering from an overdose of romanticism.

This amuses us, but it is the doctor we choose to laugh at, not the boy. For if the kid had been booted and spurred and armed with a six-shooter, if he had proclaimed that he was Hopalong Cassidy, Roy Rogers or the Lone Ranger, the same doctor wouldn't have considered him suffering from anything at all. "Romanticism," it might be observed, is merely the illusion that has gone out of fashion. It is a disease which attacks only the imaginative individual. If we were Tarzan in an age of Hopalong Cassidy's and Lone Rangers we'd wear our medical report as a badge of honor.

Tom Gardner speaks in BB #10 of the longevity theme in Burroughs' books; the long life of the Barsoomians, the serum of the Antarians and the psychological prolonging of youthfulness in the Pellucidar series. I think Burroughs dwelt on this theme so much because he himself greatly loved life, had an intense dislike of dying and would have throughly enjoyed living forever. I don't doubt that he once had the slightest suspicion that he was not as other men, that he would age yes, but at a somewhat slower rate than others! And so it was, this seemed to be true, at least up until the time he tackled what was really a young man's job, I mean junketing about the Pacific as a war correspondent. You recall John Carter once remarked that the vases he treated ERB kindly, which fact John Carter attributed to ERB's relationship to the Warlord!
The Golden Age and the Brass

by Philip Jose Farmer

When I was ten, I built my personal pantheon of heroes. There were many stalwart and crafty and bold men and demi-gods among them: Hercules and Autolycus (the Greek Shadow) and Mamba and Thor were in the front ranks. A little ahead of them stood broad-shouldered Odysseus. Him I often imagined to be; a dug-out along the creek-bank became Polyphemus' cave, and I escaped the blind Cyclops' hands by throwing a sleepy-skinned (an old burlap sack) over my back and crawling out on all fours, baring my teeth in imitation.

Bright as these Greeks and Norse and Algonquins were, however, they were outshone by others, men and demi-gods who sprang, like Athena from Zeus' brow, full-grown from the mind of an American.

This man was a modern. He was Edgar Rice Burroughs, a man as fertile in the making of modern myths as his middle name indicates. From his brow and nimble fingers -- some say too nimble -- sprang tall heroes and divine heroines. They were, though created by a man of our times, not the characters you would expect in latterday myths. There was nothing of the whining, brooding, and introspective protagonist who haunts and shadows so many present day novels and whom so many novelists would have you believe bore the Zeitgeist of the twentieth century. Not these mighty-thewed and utterly courageous giants! These men had no qualms about what they were doing; their only concern about their destination was in removing those who stood in their way. Their moral code, if rather simple and stiff-necked -- even, if I dare say it, unrealistic -- was still one that they did not doubt, one that did not throw them into throes of agonies over whether or not they were doing the right thing. These mighty-muscled gorilla-grapplers and sizzling swordsmen were pitted against forces that they knew were evil. There were no greys or other shades in their universes; you were either black or white. The moral issues involved were few but were simple: the oppression of the good by the vicious and brutal, the forcing of good and clean and faithful women by lustful and foul men. All was very simple, and all was, after the encountering of many novel and very interesting and heart-pounding dangers, simply solved. Alexander cuts the Gordian knot; John Carter rips out the villainous jekk; Tarzan breaks the Arab slavery's neck. This, it must be admitted from a viewpoint that has now been aged and matured in the wood of time, was not an altogether admirable outlook on the universe. But for its time and for its readers it was good enough. The hero did not toss off drinks right and left and leap into buxom blondes' beds -- or anybody's, for that matter. Nor did he take a vicious and bestial delight in shooting women in the belly. Indeed, he adhered to the code that you must not harm a woman with fist or weapon. And even though the hero was as likely as not to take justice and vengeance in his own hands instead of leaving it to the legally constituted authorities, he was not tormented with the same brush as the villains' that it was hard to see the difference between them -- especially in a dim light.

As I was saying before I got off on a slight tangent, I had my personal pantheon when I was ten. Some were heroes and demi-gods of the Golden Age; others were not. The latter existed in a sort of auriferous half-light from which, while it did not have the antiquity and prestige of the legendary men, had a glow all its own and one, indeed, that shined rather more brightly than the more legitimate Valhallas and Olympuses.

Be that as it may, I spent far more time playing John Carter than I did anything else. I "was" John Carter, late of the C.S.A., and the woods and creek banks not too far from my house was the dying planet Mars, armed with a light saber. For two weeks I made my way through hordes of big green "dumb Warhoons" and rescued the lovely red-skinned Dejah Thoris (whom I thought of as being literally, scarlet-skinned) from various lustful Jedaks.

When I had exhausted Mars for the time being, I shifted into Tarzan's "valence," swung through the trees and dropped in on lions and med gorg as and Ay-rabs and broke their necks or slit their gullets. So proficient did I become in this, I was soon called "Tarzan" by all my classmates. And, incidentally, I built muscles during my arboral activities that helped me later in my athletic career.

My really favorite character, David of Pellucidar, was, for some unknown reason, neglected in my play. I preferred to sit around and dream about what Diana and she were doing. Usually, they were being chased by some dinosaur -- which dinosaur, by the way, I imagined them as being, in some way, fond of. Dinosaurs, I think, dwell in an affectionate part of every science-fiction and fantasy lover's heart; they are such blundering and lovable -- albeit slightly fearsome -- beasts. Just so, I think, did the knights of old love their dragons, and they must have been very sorry when the last dragon died.

What has the above got to do with today or even with the admitted subject for this project? Briefly, it is this: I read the Oz books and the Raggedy Ann stories, Grimm's Fairy Tales, the Mark Twain books, I read P. H. Verne, a series about some world-traveling, animal-collecting juveniles whose author I can't recall, and, climax, Edgar Rice Burroughs. All gobbled golden, but Burroughs' books gave me the deepest and most lasting thrills. I read each one of his series at least twenty times. To get them I had to visit the local libraries, reserve them, and then, after waiting a few weeks, seize them, fond of them then, I read them, and then, in the next two weeks, I was allowed to keep them out.

I saved money from my allowance, and, one by one, built up an almost complete Edgar Rice Burroughs library. My father wasn't Am much interested in the idea of a fanzine devoted to my old friend Edgar Rice Burroughs, as he seemed always so vital a personality that he must be regarded as gone merely because his heart stopped beating.

I knew him before the war when he lived at the Hiilumalu Hotel between Ft. DeRussy and Waikiki in Honolulu. He came out to my bachelor cottage across Oahu on Sunset Beach a few times when a storm rolled in spectacularly high waves along the beach. He enjoyed sitting on the shore line with me, where the bones of many ancient Hawaiians lie buried, watching the tall whitecaps roll in over the reef to break into mountains of spray and salt foam. We talked of many things out there. His philosophy of life, a sort of idealistic agnosticism, is similar to mine, a belief we shared with other and perhaps wiser men such as Luther Burbank, Thomas Edison, Albert Einstein and earlier thinkers such as Thomas Paine and my kinsmen, Benjamin Franklin. Ed's amused contempt of current religious forms and ceremionials is neatly portrayed in his Martion stories, where he best proves his mastery of satire as well as his unmatched narrative ability.

When the war hit us on Oahu--14 men killed in my Squadron at Hickem Field--my duties as senior bombardier kept me too busy to maintain civilian contacts, so for two years I did not see Ed. My outfit, the VII Bomber Command, had been "island hopping" it's way across the Pacific, and I was on my third tour of bombing missions, serving as Bombing Officer, when I next caught up with Ed. I was on the staff of the C.O., Brig. Gen. Ted Landon, (I am told he now holds three star rank in US Army Hq.), and we had pulverized most enemy targets in range of our base on Tarawa so were preparing to move to Kwajalein. After constantly bombing heavily defended targets, often so far as 1000 miles from base, sever al of our B-24s had limped home so badly damaged they had to jettison guns, turrets, armor plate, and even the extremely reliable Horden bomb sight. I often let it be known that I would throw out the co-pilot before parting with my special bomb sight, so managed to keep the same one four years.

To restore these planes to flight status, wrecks were cannibalized, and new equipment flown in from the Air Tenet at Hickem Field. Bomb sights were my responsibility, so the morning of our movement by air from Tarawa to Kwajalein found me just returning from Oahu with a plane load of Horden bomb sights. To my pleasant surprise, I found Ed at our Hq. as the guest of the General, serving as war correspondent for the Los Angeles Times.

The navigation chart showed that our flight route to Kwajalein passed right over the Jap held atoll of Jaluit. Naturally, we loaded bombs in the bomb bays not only for cargo in our Hq. B-24, aptly named "The Pacific Tramp", but especially loading limited us to six 500 lb. G.P. demolition bombs, so the General and I decided to let Ed to a bit of pin-point precision bombing. There were two 75mm A.A. guns still in action on Jaluit, and our intelligence reports showed that an old three-story wooden structure, built by the Germans as their administrative head quarters when they held the Carolines Mandate before World War One, was in use as a food storage and finished house, and might be considered a legitimate military target. Ed spent an hour of the flight forward in the "greenhouse" with me and my bomb sight, examining everything with fascinated interest and shouting questions so I could hear him above the roar of our four engines. He presented an unforgettable figure kneeling there on the floor beside me, dressed in sunsuit shirt and trousers, a baseball cap set backward on his sprey grey hair, his eyes sparkling with greater enthusiasm for living than most men half his age.

As Jaluit came in over the horizon, Ed went back to the right waist gunner position, with throat mike and headset plugged into the interphone system. Our first run over the target was to draw enemy fire so we could spot the active gun positions, and not waste bombs on others previously winked out. The muzzle flashes were soon winking up at us, and Ed's voice could be heard calmly calling off the air bursts: "Quarter mile behind. 'Way low and left. Right and high. Wow! Just lost my cap and half my hair--put my head too far out the window."

Our first three bombs silenced one gun, so we made our final run over the geisha house dropping the last three bombs at 100' intervals. The middle bomb crumpled one wall and the whole building was soon ablaze as we closed the bomb doors and flew on north to Kwajalein. That afternoon was spent getting settled and digging our own foxholes. Ed cheerfully helped fill and place sandbags and soon had as neat a bomb shelter as his host, the General.

At the same time the bomber strip was being built on Kwajalein, a similar one was built on Eniwetok to the west. As our bombers were often stage thru there to bomb Truk and targets beyond, the General decided to inspect it next morning. Ed wanted to see more precision bombing, so we loaded up eight more 500 lb. G.P. (general purpose) demolition bombs for a dawn job on an active enemy radio station on Rongelap atoll, a bit to the north of a direct route to Eniwetok. We scored a direct hit on the concrete structure housing the radio station, and it went off the air for the duration. Ed seemed a bit disappointed that there was no enemy ack-ack, but as it was 51st mission, I assured him I preferred them all that way.

Proceeding on to Eniwetok, we orbited the island and the General prepared to set down the first four empty plane ever to lend on that runway. Pete proved unkinked through, for all wheels came down as usual, but the hydraulic lock on the nose wheel failed to catch. Lending light as a feather on the main wheels, the tail came up to touch the nose wheel down, and it folded up. We slid to a stop, the nose of the plane plowing a nice furrow in the coral. No one Major Grant rose abruptly, and began pacing back and forth across the small room in the narrow corridor between the desks. The other two officers watched, their eyes occasionally straying back to the chronometer clicking away on General Kelly's desk. "That energy you're expending won't bring 'em in faster, you know," mentioned Richards. When Grant failed to answer, he added, "And anyway, why worry about all this? I keep telling you it's not going to be as different as you expect." He punctuated his sentence by stubbing out his cigarette. The smoke was instantly whisked away by the whispering fans and replaced by the slightly laboratory- scented manufactured air that supported life on Moon Base 1.

"Don't tell me you're going into that Burroughs act again," Grant had turned and paused, his hands thrum deep into his pockets. "Just because the astronomy boys have changed a lot of their opinions since we got here, it still doesn't mean that Mars is going to turn out to be Marsom, straight out of a Jules Verne novel. So they have a better atmosphere - and the temperature range hasn't the extremes they previously thought; that's still no sign that they have an involved civilization, with the plush carpets rolled out, and John Carter personally on hand to welcome their Earth neighbors, is it, Kelly?"

Richards merely raised an eyebrow, and the General answered, "You can't really convince him, you know. I've been listening to this ever since they transferred him direct to White Sands out of West Point. Long as the Psych boys decided it wouldn't interfere with his getting a job done, why should we complain? Anyway - so far things have turned out definitively in his favor. They've proven the instance of a lot more water than was previously thought possible, and there are several 'mystery spots' on the plates from the 200-inch that might just possibly be translated as cities, if you wanted to favor that point of view."

Grant resumed his pacing, the slow, measured steps of a caged animal. "Yeah, but who outside of this pulp-bug would want to? Say he is right - why isn't his precious Carter developed a few radio sets and gotten in touch with us? Put a civilized man down in an uncomplicated culture, and you're going to have a few basic improvements, at least. Got any theories on that one?"

"Sure," said Richards, "Take you - you're a fairly well-educated man; in fact, I'd say there aren't many men in the Air Corps - and none out of it - who can equal your knowledge of rocketry, including a healthy helping of fuel manufacture, and metallurgy, of course. I'd venture to say that if we dropped you off in a spot unreachable by explorers, that has nevertheless progressed a good way through the Age of Metals, we'd still never hear a word from you. And if you couldn't manufacture a radio, and the power source to operate it, why should a professional soldier, such as Carter is said to have been? Be reasonable, man!"

Grant shrugged, "You're right - give me a waterfall and all the parts for a turbine, and I probably still wouldn't be able to electrocute myself. But answer me this one - how about a biological impossibility like the reproduction system supposed to operate there? Given a woman as obviously endowed with mammary glands as Carter's Princess is supposed to have been, lay eggs? That in itself would throw the whole thing out in my estimation."

"Remember a little critter called a Duck-Billed Platypus? It's just as much mammal as any one of us - but it hatches its young, and any more they don't even consider it strange. Besides, you're forgetting that you - along with the rest of us, human males - carry vestigial nipples. Haven't heard you complaining about being a biological impossibility."

Grant's reply was halted by the appearance of a sergeant in the door.

After a perfunctory exchange of salutes - discipline being slightly relaxed this far from home - Grant was directed to Kelly's desk and handed him a sealed envelope, and withdrew. The star on Kelly's shoulder gleamed as he leaned back, slit the paper, and drew forth the message. He glanced over it, grinned, and passed it to the other two who were hovering anxiously before him.

"Hold onto your hats; it won't be long now," he admonished as they poured over it.

The paper was a routine traffic slip from Operations - standard procedure when any space-craft desired landing clearance. They read down the form quickly, then paused as the implications of one entry sank in.

Occupants: Crew - 3, Passengers - 1.

"They're bringing someone - something - back!" breathed Grant. "There were only three men on board when we left here - his voice trailed off into silence."

"But why couldn't they say more?" Richards clutched the scrap of paper as if it would disappear at any moment.

"And let our little Russian friends over there in the Third Quadrant know what all this is about? So far we've managed to keep "Operation High-Jump" pretty much a secret - but even on a scrambled circuit they're not going to risk being decoded by saying "We've got a Martian on board". Now if you two don't calm down, I'll pull rank on you and order you to stay here. If the critter happened to be telepathic, it'd have hysterics within five minutes trying to follow the way you two think."

As they left the office, Richards' eyes were gleaming almost as much as the twin eagles on his shoulders; Grant wore the perpetually dazed look of the man who, down the ages, has skeptically protested in the face of scientific progress, that "this just can't happen!"

The next hour flew, as the set routine of a military establishment attempted to stretch itself to take in a situation that was distinctly not regulation. The possibility of the ship returning with a live alien had been considered, and some preparatory actions taken. Grant was left in command, and the crew ordered to stand ready for the landing. The ship was to be prepared for any contingencies, and the officers were instructed to report to Grant in the event of any unusual development. The landing was expected to take place at the designated location on Mars, where the crew would prepare for the arrival of the alien beings.
WHAT MAKES TARZAN ACT THAT WAY?

By EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS

Some one is always taking the joy out of life. For years I proceed blissfully writing stories to keep the wolf from my door and to cause other people to forget for an hour or two the wolves at their doors, and then up pops an editor and asks me for an article on the Tarzan theme.

Frankly, there ain't no such animal; or if there is I didn't know it.

Breathlessly, I flew to Mr. Webster, determined to create a Tarzan theme with his assistance; but I was disappointed in somehow not finding Tarzan in the dictionary. But I did find "theme," Webster calls it: "A subject or topic on which a person writes or speaks; a proposition for discussion or argument; a text."

That definition simplified my task for under this definition the Tarzan theme consists of one word—Tarzan.

"A proposition for discussion or argument," says Mr. Webster. The Tarzan stories are replete with involving discussion or argument, so that definition is out, and there only remains the last, "a text." As this connotes sermonizing we shall have to hit it on the head, which leaves me nothing at all to write about on the Tarzan theme.

Tarzan does not preach; he has no lesson to impart, no propaganda to disseminate. Yet, perhaps unconsciously, while seeking merely to entertain I have injected something of my own admiration for certain fine human qualities into these stories of the ape-man.

It is difficult and even impossible for me to take these Tarzan stories seriously, and I hope that no one else will ever take them seriously. If they serve any important purpose it is to take their readers out of the realm of serious things and give them that mental relaxation which I believe to be as necessary as the physical relaxation of sleep—which makes a swell opening for some dyspeptic critic.

I recall that when I wrote the first Tarzan story I was mainly interested in playing with the idea of a contest between heredity and environment. For this purpose I selected an infant child of a race strongly marked by hereditary characteristics of the finer and nobler sort, and at an age at which he could not have been influenced by association with creatures of his own kind I threw him into an environment as diametrically opposite to that to which he had been born as I might well conceive.

As I got into the story I realized that the logical result of this experiment must have been a creature that would have failed to inspire the sympathy of the ordinary reader, and that for fictional purposes I must give heredity some breaks that my judgment assured me the facts would not have warranted. And so Tarzan grew into a creature endowed only with the best characteristics of the human family from which he was descended and the best of those which mark the wild beasts that were his only associates from infancy until he had reached man's estate.

It has pleased me throughout the long series of Tarzanian exploits to draw comparisons between the manners of men and the manners of beasts and seldom to the advantage of men. Perhaps I hoped to shame men into being more like beasts in those respects in which the beasts excel men, and these are not few.

I wanted my readers to realize that man alone of all the creatures that inhabit the earth or the waters below or the air above takes life wantonly; he is the only creature that derives pleasure from inflicting pain on other creatures, even his own kind. Jealousy, greed, hate, spitefulness are more fully developed in man than in the lower orders. These are axiomatic truths that require no demonstration.

Even the lion is merciful when he makes his kill. He does not rush not intentionally so, and the psychology of terror aids the swift mercy of his destruction. Men who have been charged and mauled by lions, and lived to tell of the experience, felt neither fear nor pain during the experience.

In the quite reasonable event that this statement may arouse some skepticism, permit me to quote from that wonderful work on animals, NATURE'S MOTHER, by William J. Long, a book that should be read by every adult and be required reading in every high school course in the land.

"There are other and more definite experiences from which to form a judgment, and of these the adventure of Livingston is the first to be considered, since he was probably the first to record the stultifying effects of a charming animal. The great missionary and explorer was once severely mauled by a lion, his flesh being torn in eleven places by the brute's claws, and his shoulder crushed by the more terrible fangs. Here is a condensation of the story, as recorded in MISSIONARY TRAVELS AND RESEARCH IN SOUTH AFRICA:

"Growling horribly close to my ear, the lion shook me as a terrier does a rat. The shock produced a stupor similar to that which seems to be felt by a mouse after the first shake of the cat. It caused a sort of dreaminess, in which there was no sense of pain nor feeling of terror."

Compare this, then, with the methods of the present day gangster who cruelly tortures his victim before he kills him. The lion sought only to kill, not to inflict pain. Recall all the methods of the Inquisition, and then search the records of man's experiences with lions, tigers, or any of the more formidable creatures of the wild for a parallel in studied cruelty.

Let me quote one more interesting instance given in Mr. Long's book:

We open at random to the experience of an English officer who, in 1895, was fearfully clawed and bitten by a lion, and who writes of the experience:

"Regarding my sensations during the time of the attack, I was in no way different from what I was during the attack, although there was a strong feeling of being bitten; that is, I was perfectly conscious, independently of the performance, that the lion was gnawing at me, but there was no pain. To show that the feeling, or rather want of it, was in no wise due to excessive terror I may mention that, whilst my thighs were being gnawed, I took two cartridges out of the breast pocket of my shirt and threw them to the Kaffir, who was hovering a few yards away, telling him to load my rifle."

Perhaps I am not wise in giving further publicity to these statements, since they must definitely take much of the thrill out of Tarzan stories by placing lion mauling in a category with interesting and pleasurable experiences.

Having demonstrated that the most savage animals in their most terrifying moods reveal qualities far less terrible than those possessed by men, let us see how association with these beasts combined with the hereditary instincts of a noble blood line to produce in Tarzan a character finer than either of the sources from which it derived.

Necessity required him to kill for food and in defence of his life, the example of his savage associates never suggested that pleasure might be found in killing, and the chivalry that was in his blood stream prevented him imagining such pleasure in youth without such example. His viewpoint toward death was seemingly callous, but it was without cruelty.

His attitude toward women and other creatures weaker than he was partially the result of innate chivalry, partially the natural outcome of a feeling of superiority engendered both by knowledge of his mental or physical superiority to every creature that had come within his ken and by heredity, and partially by an indifference born of absolute clean-mindedness and perfection of health.

This appeal to an audience is so tremendous that it never ceases to be a source of astonishment to me. This appeal, I believe, is based upon an almost universal admiration of these two qualities and the natural inclination of every normal person to enjoy picturing himself as either heroic or beautiful or both. Linked to these is the constant urge to escape that is becoming stronger in all of us prisoners of civilization as civilization becomes more complex.

We wish to escape not alone the narrow confines of city streets for the freedom of the wilderness, but the restrictions of man made laws, and the inhibitions that society has placed upon us. We like to picture ourselves as roaming free, the lords of ourselves and of our world; in other words, we would each like to be Tarzan. At least I would; I admit it.

Unconsciously or consciously, we seek to emulate the creatures we admire. Doubtless there are many people trying to be like the late Theodore Roosevelt, or like Robert Millikan, or Jack Dempsey, or Doug Fairbanks because they greatly admire one of these characters. Fiction characters are just as real to most of us as are these celebrities of today or of the past; d'Artagnan is as much flesh and blood as Napoleon. Perhaps the influence of d'Artagnan has had a finer influence upon the forming of character than has that of the great Corican.

To indicate the force for good which a fiction character may exercise I can do no better than cite the testimony of Eddie Hagan, former Amateur Heavyweight Champion of the World, whose very interesting series of articles appeared in the SATURDAY EVENING POST. As a boy Hagan read the Frank Merriwell books, and his admiration for this fiction character shaped his future life. Among other achievements Merriwell became an athlete and a Yale man, and these became two of Hagan's ambitions. Although a poor boy, Hagan worked his way through an education, first in college in Denver, then through Yale, and finally Oxford; and he became one of the greatest athletes of our times.

Years ago, when I came to a realization of the hold that Tarzan had taken upon the imaginations of many people, I was glad that I had made of him the sort of character that I had; and since then I have been careful not to permit him to let his foot slip, no matter what the temptation. I must admit that at times this has been difficult when I have placed him in situations where I would not have been quite sure of my own footing, and it has also not been easy to keep him from being a Prude.

On the whole, however, I must have been more or less successful for all ages and both sexes continue to admire him; and he goes his bloody way scattering virtue and sudden death indiscriminately and in all directions.

He may not be a force for good; and if he entertains, that is all I care about; but I am sure that he is not a force for evil, which is something these days.
Rex Maxon was born in Lincoln, Nebraska, the home of the late artist, Clare Brigg's. When Rex was still a boy, his brother, Paul, and Briggs studied cartooning together. The Maxon's moved to St. Louis and Rex was raised there and in suburban Webster Groves.

The Mississippi waterfront seemed to hold the youthful Maxon in a spell and he spent most of his time there sketching the old river steamers. However, the Maxon's thought one artist in the family was enough and suggested that Rex become an electrical engineer. Rex refused to be discouraged and while still a lad of 17, in high school, he obtained a job with the Government during summer vacation painting the river steam-boats.

"My first newspaper job, in my late teens," says Mr. Maxon, "was on the St. Louis Republic, which has since folded. After a short period in Chicago, where I studied art at the Art Students League, I did advertising art for the Lord and Thomas Agency. Then I came to New York and did newspaper features, theatrical and semi-comic, for the Evening Mail and later the New York Globe."

"From that work," Mr. Maxon continues, "I went to free-lancing, dividing my time between advertising and illustrating. It was during this time while I was illustrating fiction for the Metropolitan News Syndicate, that I was chosen to do the Tarzan daily strip—which as you know, I did for about eighteen years."

Rex Maxon illustrated all but five of the 27 story-strips that were published in newspapers about the famous Tarzan. He continued the strip with fresh material when the story-strips finally caught up with the works of Edgar Rice Burroughs, until he resigned in 1947. Mr. Maxon also introduced the first Sunday Tarzan page in color on March 15, 1931. However the job of drawing both the daily and Sunday features took up so much of his time that he relinquished the Sunday color page to other artists.

A great many of Mr. Maxon's Tarzan drawings have found their way into book form. Almost all of his early works were reprinted in the Whitman Big Little Books, and also in handsome editions with hard covers. I have two such volumes, published in Canada, in French text, entitled TARZAN ET LES JOUYX D'OOPAR and TARZAN ET LA VILLE D'IVOIRE.

It is interesting to note the change in Mr. Maxon's version of Tarzan over the years that he worked on the feature. His original drawings of the ape-man showed a handsome figure with short hair and a shoulder-draped leopard skin, not unremindful of James H. Pierce's film Tarzan. As the strip progressed through the years and the public idea of the ape-man changed, so did Mr. Maxon. At the beginning of TARZAN THE UNTAMED Maxon's old Tarzan is still there, but as the sequences progress and the story has Tarzan revert to savagery, the drawings are in attune with the change. It seems to me, that Mr. Maxon did this very cleverly. You could witness the change in the pictured Tarzan with each episode. Day by day, his hair was shown just a little longer, the straight, handsome figure more savage looking. Bulky muscles seemed to flow out into leaner, more supple ones. The draped leopard skin disappeared and was replaced with a breechcloth about the loins. The change was made gradually until at last Mr. Maxon had modernized his Tarzan into the graceful, lean-limbed figure that he continued to draw for so many more years.

Mr. Maxon resigned from the Tarzan strip to free lance in the field of fine arts and illustration, which he is doing at present. "One of my clients," he states, "is the Dell Publishing Co., who put out the more respectable comic books. In one of these, The Lone Ranger, I do the companion feature, 'Young Hawk,' about two Indian boys and their adventures."

Rex Maxon relaxes on the bridge leading to his sister's cabin in the South St. Urain Canyon in Colorado.

As the accompanying photograph shows, Rex Maxon is fond of the outdoors, and usually spends a part of the summer in Colorado painting and enjoying the rugged scenic beauty of that part of the country.

Mr. Maxon lives with his wife, the former Hazel Carter, a newspaper feature writer, and their daughter, Jeanne, about 45 miles from New York in Rockland County on the Hudson river.
The death in a week's time of Edgar Rice Burroughs and Frank Buck was a considerable shock to an age group which was raised to manhood before the advent of television and the admired atom. We were of a group which had to seek simpler heroes than Raygun Terwilliger, the interplanetary man, and Hop- along Cassidy was then unborn.

We settled for a magnificently romantic specimen called Tarzan of the Apes, created in a moment of inspiration by Mr. Burroughs, who had never been to Africa. Tarzan's vogue was such that anybody who even ventured into the Jungle, in the flesh, also automatically became a demigod. The likes of Frank Buck and the late Martin Johnson were romantick to the set, far beyond the appeal of the Rover Boys and that arrant prick, Tom Swift, with his lousy little electric rifle.

There is no doubt in my mind that Tarzan of the Apes was the greatest single fictional achievement of our time. I forget how many volumes are devoted to his exploits, but there must have been some 20-odd movies made about them. I read the original book ages ago, the other day, and still find it fascinating.

Tarzan was a simple soul, and therein rests his charm. He carried a knife and a rope and a spear, and he could break a lion's neck with no weapons at all. He did not become cluttered up with conversation and sophistication until very late in the piece—and he always felt more at home in a G-string than in the silly habiliments of civilized man.

Tarzan never really understood civilization. He only killed when he was hungry or angry, never for fun. When he made a kill he flexed his muscles, threw back his head and roared. He swung effortlessly from tree to tree—this cost me a broken arm at a very early age—and when he fell in love he just picked up the dame and shoved off with her through the tall timber.

So long as Tarzan was competing with Numa, the lion, or Hista, the snake, or Bolgani, the gorilla, he made out fine. It was only after he learned to read and write and talk, and decided he wasn't an ape that he got into trouble. In that respect Tarzan is rather typical of the human race in its current dilemma.

In the knowledge that it was highly unlikely that a Tarzan could exist, we settled for Frank Buck. He was a burly, powerful man, with a bull-neck and a rough-cut race, made dapper by a small mustache. He was always just leaving or just back from a safari.

There was a lot of showman in Frank, and you always felt he had personally wrestled anything he brought back alive, even though most the time he bought his wild beasts from native hunters. Frank gave off an aura of invincibility, just like Tarzan.

That's why none of us was surprised when Buck acquired cancer, and seemingly beat it on a 1,000-to-1 shot. The disease seemed licked, and Frank thought so, too. He gained back a lot of weight, and took off for Malaysia. He returned with a rich book of beasts, a deep tan, and all of his old bounce. It was a shock to read that he had died of cancer, after all.

At 66 life didn't owe Buck very much, because he lived it all the way up. It is just that his death inspires a quiet grief over the passage of a whole way of living. Buck would not cut a tremendous figure today, where people commute from continent to continent and the jungle is as close as the delicatessen. So much bigger game than tigers is stalked daily in the papers.

I imagine modern youth finds Tarzan a very dull fellow, too, when ranged alongside the comic book heroes and our own everyday dramas of spies and H-bombs and guided missiles, schnorkel submarines and radar. But Tarzan was a man you could identify with from where I sat, and Frank Buck was a much bigger guy than Buck Rogers. I regret the youngster of today and tomorrow is doomed to be cheated of such simplicity as hero worship.

THE PERFECT GUEST (concluded from page 34) seemed hurt, so I hurriedly crawled up into the nose to see if my favorite bomb sight had been damaged. The rest of the crew crawled out thru the open rear bomb bay.

Ed was next to last out, followed by the General. Ed then showed a bit of the instinctive kindness and diplomacy that made him the cherished friend of all who really knew him. Ignoring the bomber with nose in the dust completely, as though the landing had been perfectly normal, and gaz ing-friendly and roundly, he quickly gathering crowd, he began exclaiming excitedly about the coconut trees decapitated in the battle to wrest the stroll from the Japs, the wrecked landing craft along the lagoon shore, etc. The General was understandably red faced with embarrassment at our mishap, but after watching Ed calling attention to most everything else but the bomber in a few moments, he suddenly grinned, and placing an arm over Ed's shoulder, I thought I heard him say: "Thanks a million, Ed. You're the perfect guest.

In the days that followed, I renewed my friendship with Ed, and we made a half serious compact after I got back from an especially rough mission. He promised that if I should die in combat he would write a column for the Los Angeles Times in which he would solemnly declare that I had been a better man than Tarzan, if I would do the same upon his earthly departure.

A few years ago I kept my part of that compact, but I have never felt that Ed is truly gone ------. I feel sure that wherever he is he is marching and laughing among his chosen company, the bravest men who ever lived to fight and dream the matchless dreams that are given only to those who have learned to live proudly, without fear.
films have been shown in almost every country of the world, thereby adding millions of Tarzan fans, even behind the iron curtain, where they are creating a major problem in Russia. One of the earlier movies was made in China with Chinese actors portraying the Burroughs characters.

The third, and probably most important factor in this world-wide recognition, is the foreign publication of the books. It has been said that the Tarzan books have been translated into 50 to 56 different languages. After a study of the standard reference work, "The Loom of Language", by E. Bodner, Newton 1949, it would beifulful that there are 56 languages involved. When you try to list this many languages you are down to such unlikely choices as Maltese, spoken on the Island of Malta; Tibetan, from Tibet; Maori, from New Zealand; and Cushite spoken in parts of Ethiopia. It is dubious that the books have been translated into these remote and little used tongues. Ethiopian, perhaps, but not Cushite.

On the other hand, we may feel that we gain something from books published in the same language but in different countries. This would include the U.S. and British editions, the Spanish of South America and Spain, the French from France and Canada, etc. On this basis we can add quite a few countries if not languages.

It has been said that the wide-spread and diversified distribution of the comic, movies, plays, games, and other media has made him a renowned figure. You can write anywhere in the world and ask for a Tarzan book and they will know what you are talking about. Only once has anyone questioned my request, and that was in Arabia where they wondered if I was interested in Tarzan or The Koran.

Based on my belief that the wide distribution of the books have made Tarzan the best known character in fiction, let's look at some of the foreign editions available.

Probably first in importance are the British editions. Almost all the stories have been published in hard covers by Methuen & Co. Ltd., undergoing many printings and cheaper editions. "Tarzan of the Apes" has run at least 30 printings. Odhams Press Ltd., and The Bodley Head have also published Burroughs books.

At the present time there are 31 Burroughs titles available in "pocket books", cheaper backs, from W. H. Allen. It seems to me that these are of special interest to the American collector, as they are printed in English, their smallness makes them easy to carry and store, and each have good cover illustrations in color. Some titles, such as "Lost Empire" and "Lord of the Jungle" have had as many as three different covers. Also, many titles are available in this series that are out-of-print in the U.S.

In France, probably the most interesting item to the average collector are the comic books published by Hachette at Paris by Georges Lang. These are in 20 volumes now, bound in boards with full color illustrations. There is also a cheaper edition by Mondiales which is a collection of comic magazines bound in boards. Hachette has published some of the regular books in a paper back edition. A few were printed in hard covers before the war, but, I believe, only in paper backs since.

Tarzan null Lebeiferi, or "Tarzan of the Apes", in German has been popular since the war. The latest editions, published by Pegasus in Berlin, include seven titles in hard covers with illustrated jacket. The best known war edition was by Berlget bei Died & Co. in Stuttgart, who published at least eight hard cover titles.

About 1935 R. Temporad published seven interior illustrations in Italy were paper backs, about the size of the old Blue Book magazine, with a nice cover illustration in color and eight black and white interiors.

One of the most recent editions is in Hebrew from Tel Aviv, translated by C.B. Hanna, in hard covers with jacket illustrations. The Hebrew alphabet is so different from ours that it takes about 15 books to cover the material that normally is published in about three volumes printed in English. It makes these rather unique. Also, like the Chinese, they read from the back front and right to left on a page.

Probably one of the nicest sets are the Martian stories from Spain. "Una Princesa de Marte", edited by M. Aguilar, Madrid 1947, is a beautiful red leather volume, size 6 x 4 3/4, with 420 pages of thin paper and frontispiece. Also available is "Gods" and "Warlord", in one volume, and "Thuvia" and "Chessmen", in one volume, to match the above. This article primarily concerns Tarzan editions, but I mention these three books because of their interest to the Burroughs enthusiast.

Gustavo Gill published about 12 Tarzan books in Barcelona, Spain around 1929. These had illustrations imprinted on the hard covers but no interiors. The best known Spanish editions are the Ediciones C. Gill, in hard covers, and the Editorial Tor paper backs, both from Buenos Aires, South America. These Argentine editions ran into a great many titles, some of which were not written by Burroughs. These latter used the Tarzan name and were the same type of story but nothing like any of Burroughs books. Librerias "Cultura", Santiago de Chile, have published 22 Tarzan titles in paper back editions. These are the first eleven Tarzans broken up to make two books of each title. Editora Nacional, Sao Paulo, Brazil, printed about 20 paper backed titles around 1947 with cover illustrations taken from the U.S. editions. Several of these, like "Tarzan and the Golden Lion", run into two volumes. In addition to the above, Editorial Abril, Buenos Aires, has several "Big Little Books" during 1945-46.

"Tarzan Apines Konge" heads the new edition (1949-51) of twelve volumes from Oslo, Norway. This is a very nice set with gold stamping, hard covers, a color cover illustration and 4 or 5 interior drawings.

As mentioned before, the Iron Curtain has limited collecting somewhat, but occasionally I have found various Russian and Italian used book stores. They were hard cover books with about 15 very good illustrations.

"Tarzan Apines Kuningas" is the first of about 15 titles from Finland that have appeared since 1948. They are in hard covers with illustrated jackets and there are severer: 1 Martian and other ERB stories to make this an attractive set.

The Danish editions, of which there are about 20 volumes of recent publication and available at the present time.

Several volumes are available from Greece, some of which contain two of our books, with hard, illustrated, covers and many small interior drawings. Usually, where our alphabet or similar is used, Tarzan is spelled Tarzan, but here we find it Tazian because of the difference in our characters.

Before the war the Chinese paper back editions were not unusual in this country.

I believe there were ten titles with cover illustrations and about 120 pages. They of course read from back to front, and the Chinese characters make them most interesting.

The Dutch editions from Amsterdam, Netherlands, are nice hard cover books but unillustrated.

Sweden issued hard cover editions from Stockholm around 1925, usually two books in one volume. About the same year we find paper back editions of "A Princess of Mars" and "The Girl From Hollywood", which is a little surprising at that time.

It is rather difficult to find true Tarzan books in Japan, but there are some available. What you find in greatest quantity are Tarzan books written by Japanese authors with little resemblance to ERB stories. They are interesting as they are comic type books, in boards, and therefore, at least partly understood.

While there are a few items available from Canada, Mexico, and other countries, I believe the above illustrates my point that Tarzan is a World famous character. These foreign editions make a very interesting part of any Burroughs collection, and yet you seldom hear about them from collectors.

By writing anywhere in the world and mentioning Tarzan they know immediately what you are talking about. I know, for I have traded coffee for Tarzan books from Norway and postage stamps for them from Japan.

CENSORED

From Budapest comes word that the Hungarian Government has banned 10,000 books written by foreign authors, and has confiscated copies of them found in libraries and book stores. Compensation for all books seized is at the rate of 50g a pound, giving the dealers money with which to buy Government-approved Communist literature.

The list of authors whose works are outlawed includes Louis Bromfield, A. J. Cronin, Edna Ferber, Fannie Hurst, John P. Marquand and P. G. Wodehouse. Books specifically banned are James Hilton's "Lost Horizon," Richard Wright's "Native Son," and Edgar Rice Burroughs' "Tarzan stories. The heavy hand of Hungarian censorship even falls on Dale Carnegie's "How to Win Friends and Influence People," presumably because the Communist hierarchy does not want its subjects to form a friendship for any American.

"Tarzan of the Apes" has been allowed to return to Soviet cinemas after an absence of many years. The revival had a

(continued on page 113)
For the first time in the screen history of Tarzan, a photographic unit, including Lex Barker, went to Africa, the locale of the Tarzan series, and filmed scenes which are incorporated into the finished film.

Tarzan's Peril concerns gun-runners in Africa, trading their merchandise for precious jewels, and it takes the inimitable Tarzan to bring a halt to this illegal traffic. The new Jane is lovely Virginia Houston, and such eye-filling beauty did not make the reviewer disappointed that she was to remain un kissed, as the Janes of previous films have been.

Radjeck, the leader of the gun-runners, is ably portrayed by George McCready with all his customary screen villany, and his two minions are Trask and Andrews, played by Douglas Fowley and Glenn Anders. The picture opens with a ceremonial dance in the Ashuba village as Melmendi (portrayed by Dorothy Dandridge) is being crowned queen. To the village comes Balam, chief of the war-loving Yorongo, accompanied by warriors, with an offer of marriage to the queen, which she promptly rejects.

Peters, the African commissioner, and an assistant by name of Connors, witness the rejection of Balam, and they are pleased, for Balam is not to be trusted. It is to this village that the gun-runners are bound. Peters and Connors come upon a disabled jeep in which they discover a couple of rifles. Tarzan and Cheeta appear, and the three men talk of the jungle drums and the message they were sending concerning the escape of Radjeck. It seems Tarzan and Jane had been responsible for Radjeck being imprisoned because of his part in slave-running, and naturally it is to be expected the escaped prisoner would seek to harm the jungle lord and his mate. Cheeta is intrigued by Peters' watch which plays an important part in the picture. The chimpanzee steals a notebook from Peters.

After leaving the two white men, Tarzan returns to the tree-house where he joins Jane. It is then they learn Cheeta had stolen a notebook containing vital information.

Meanwhile, Peters and Connors meet the gun-runners, and they are shot. Before reaching Balam's domain, Radjeck is instrumental in nearly killing Andrews, and Trask regards him with suspicion, feeling the leader would purposely do as much to him were he given the chance.

In the meantime, Tarzan, Jane, and Cheeta are on their way to Randini in a canoe. They stop at an inviting cove to fish and swim. The ubiquitous Cheeta discovers Andrews, who has been deserted, in a critical condition. Upon him they find Peters' watch.

Tarzan suspects something serious has happened to the commissioner.

Radjeck contacts Balam, and while they are in conference, Tarzan binds the camp guard and is in the act of throwing the rifles into the river above Rohomo Falls when Radjeck and Balam's warriors attack him. In the furious battle Tarzan escapes and dives into the river. As he fights the strong current a large floating tree sweeps him over the falls and he is moored in shallow water helplessly pinned beneath the tree.

Trask is displeased with his division of the jewels, and in the night Radjeck shoots him. The natives have deserted, so the leader of the gun-runners is alone.

Cheeta rescues Tarzan from his plight by summoning an elephant to lift the tree from the jungle lord. The two then backtrack the trail and coming to the Ashuba village learn that it is now in the possession of Balam and his warriors. Tarzan rescues the imprisoned queen, then releases her warriors of their bonds. After waiting for Balam and his followers to become almost helpless from their drinking, Tarzan leads the inferior Ashuba warriors to battle with their numerical superior enemy. Much action ensues, and it is natural that Tarzan and Balam must fight to the death with Tarzan emerging the victor. Melmendi, the queen, begs Tarzan remain with them, but the jungle lord must be on his way—he now seeks Radjeck, and he has a sneaking suspicion where he is to be found.

Meanwhile, Jane has returned to the tree-house, and there she Radjeck comes and compels her to promise to lead him out of the country. It is then Tarzan makes a timely appearance. One must see the motion picture to appreciate the agility with which Tarzan moves to send Radjeck to his death and assure the future peace of the jungle dwellers.

Once again Lex Barker gives an excellent portrayal as the jungle lord. suffering from thirst when Tarzan finds water in the bush land of the Wazuri. An attack by cannibals follows, but the Wazuri come to the rescue. The Wazuri mistrust Rokov and Edwards. Tarzan explains to them that he and his parents lived with them when he was a boy. One of the elders recognizes Tarzan as the son of the Grey-stokes, and he greets the jungle lord. The elder Wazuri gives Tarzan a Bible that had belonged to his father and mother. Tarzan leaves his companions to be presented to the Chief of the Wazuri. Meanwhile, the evil Rokov is making plans. With Edwards, he sneaks into the temple and finds the diamonds. A guard discovers them, but Rokov kills him. Later, when the temple guard is found, Jane and Joey are placed under guard.

A message goes through to the tribe's Elders about the stolen diamonds and Tarzan vows to recover them.

Meanwhile, Jane, having discovered Rokov is a foreign agent, instructs Joey to escape, and when finding Tarzan, tells him about Rokov. The boy escapes into the jungle and has many narrow escapes with beasts and a mighty python.

Rokov and Edwards are escaping with the diamonds and the radio transmitter. When Edwards falters, Rokov hurl's him over a ledge into a lion pit. Presently Tarzan comes upon the scene and rokov hails him, telling him how Edwards had fallen into the lion pit. When the ape-man seeks to rescue Edwards, Rokov fires at him with his pistol. The agile Tarzan manages to escape the hail of bullets, but becomes lodged upon a narrow shelf where falling stones pin him helplessly. It is Joey who come to Tarzan's rescue and enlightens the jungle lord of the true Rokov. The boy frees Tarzan. In rage the ape-man seeks the evil Rokov and comes upon him radiocing his confederates in a plane. The death struggle is brief, for the enraged Tarzan hurls Rokov into the lion pit.

Returning to the village, Tarzan is timely in sparing Jane who has been ordained to death. The diamonds are restored to the temple, and once again all is well.

The enemy plane crashes against a mountain peak, and thus the plans of a foreign country are foiled. Once again Lex Barker, as Tarzan, is inimitable as he swings through the trees and takes part in opposing the schemes of villains and brings about their ultimate end.
The 1953 Tarzan picture is, in the estimation of this reviewer, as good as any of the previous ones.

The picture opens with Tarzan riding upon an elephant—the part of the jungle lord being played by Lex Barker.

The scene then shifts to Vargo and LaVar, played by Raymond Burr and Michael Granger—they are elephant hunters, working for Lyra and Fidel, played by Monique Van Vooren and Tom Conway. Vargo and LaVar plot to make a raid upon a herd of elephants and share the profits with no one else. Their present raid was a small one and with inferior natives as carriers they return to Dagar where Lyra and Fidel entertain Vargo. Vargo tells Lyra that if they must continue hunting elephants they must have stronger carriers, and he mentions the Lytoko tribe.

Tarzan returns to the tree house to find Jane, played by Joyce MacKenzie, sleeping. He awakens her, and tells her to prepare breakfast. The ostrich eggs are consumed, so Cheeta is dispatched to find some. The chimpanzees encounter a little difficulty as the ostrich see's her and gives chase, but Cheeta does manage to obtain one. Meanwhile, Jane has decided to return to bed and sleep some more, but Tarzan sweeps her into his arms and carries her outside and drops her into a pool. He dives after her and they enjoy a swim. Later, returning to the tree house, Cheeta arrives with the single egg.

Meanwhile, the ivory hunters raid the Lytoko village and force the warriors to return with them to Dagar. The Lytoko women come to the jungle lord's house and in tears tells what has happened. Tarzan and Cheeta are off to the rescue. While a dancing girl is entertaining the guards, Tarzan overpowers two of them, leaving Cheeta with a rifle to watch them. He drops many rifles into a well, then releases the Lytoko warriors. They are discovered in their flight, but escape. At a celebration in the Lytoko village, M'Tara, the chief, presents Tarzan with an amulet which he tells him is for good luck. The ape-man in turn presents it to Jane.

The ivory hunters recapture the Lytoko warriors, and when Tarzan seeks to rescue them, he is compelled to fight Selim, a giant, and overcomes him, then escapes again. Lyra and Fidel decide only by taking Jane captive can they force Tarzan to do as they wish. With a couple of men Fidel goes to the tree house, and in the attempted capture, a lamp is overturned and fire breaks out. Jane loses the amulet, but manages to escape by a burning vine which breaks, and she falls to the ground. She reaches a water hole, and falling in, is menaced by an alligator and a boa constrictor. But she evades them, and crawling out of the water hole, collapses. A friendly elephant comes along and gently picks her up and bears her to the Lytoko village. In a delirium she relives her recent terrors, but the chanting of a witch-doctor and the beating of a tom-tom arouses her to the present.

Tarzan returns to the burnt tree-house with Cheeta. The chimpanzees finds the amulet Jane has lost, and the jungle lord believes his mate to be dead. In mute despair he is captured by the ivory hunters, and Vargo does not spare the whip. Tarzan is bound along with the Lytoko natives, and because of the supposed death of Jane he does not seem to care whether he lives. Vargo constantly threatens the ape-man to no avail.

Meanwhile, Jane has recovered and she sets out for Dagar. She is captured by Lyra's men. Fidel had overheard Vargo and LaVar plotting to take the profits from a great herd of elephants they had been tracking, and he has returned to Dagar to inform Lyra of this. Together, with Jane, and some guards they set out in the direction of the huge stockade that has been built. They reach there in time to see Vargo applying the whip to Tarzan. Lyra orders Vargo bound. She then tells Tarzan that Jane is alive. The jungle lord is permitted to see her. He promises to lure the herd of elephants into the stockade in order to save Jane. Fidel goes hunting, and a wild bull charges him. He shoots at the pachyderm, and the herd stampedes. Tarzan's call rings out, luring the elephants to the stockade, but as the mighty herd bursts into view, the jungle lord orders the Lytoko warriors to close the stockade gates and they seek shelter there-in. The raging herd has been turned on Tarzan's enemies. Vargo breaks loose and meeting Lyra, shoots her. He then steps into the path of thundering elephants and is crushed to death. Tarzan, meanwhile, rescues Jane, and with Cheeta in a shallow cave they watch the destruction of the huts. And with this mad rush of trumpeting elephants the picture comes to an end with Cheeta glesfully watching the havoc that is being wrought.

This reviewer disagrees with the reviewer of Variety who states this is the slowest of all the Tarzan films.

LEX BARKER

as

TARZAN

with

CHEETA

the chimp
When I reached Los Angeles the other A.M., I was mad at the world in general, and TWA in particular. They had separated me from my luggage somehow, and I was stranded at the International Airport with the clothes I had slept in all night, a partially depleted pack of Luckies and a thinning wallet. Calling Mary MacLaren, star of silent pictures on the old Universal lot, it was good to hear my friend's throaty contralto over the wire as she said: "Forget it. You're hungry. Get in a cab and come on out. By the time you get here, I'll have breakfast ready—with plenty of black coffee."

I arrived at Mary's beautiful home on Manhattan Place, in Hollywood, an hour later, fit to be tied and hungry. I rang the front doorbell, and in no time at all the mistress of this lovely house opened the door, and greeted me warmly. Even though Mary was a star long before many of the present day celebrities of the celluloid were born, she is only fifty-four, and looks less than forty. Her once blond hair is grey now, and she is a little heavier, but there is still that warm look of sincere girlhood in her bright blue eyes, and her dainty smile lights up a face that is pleasant to behold.

"What are you doing in Hollywood, this time?" she asked as we sat down to the warm breakfast set out on her well appointed table.

I was going to do some feature stuff on anyone or anything I can find. I believe people would be interested in an article on Gordon Scott, Sol Lesser's new 'Tarzan', and I'm out to get it," I answered with more confidence than I felt.

"It's almost daylight. Why don't you get some sleep, and we'll talk later," Mary said.

She led me to her guest room on the second floor, and after a refreshing shower, I settled down to sleep between snowy sheets in a bed that is king-sized. Five hours later, I awoke, dazed for the moment. Slowly, I realized where I was, and went to the window and raised the Venetian blind. To my pleasurable surprise, I found my luggage was in the room, and unpacked. Mary had taken my baggage checks, gone to the Airport, got the bags, and all I needed to do now was to dress, and join her at a tastefully spread luncheon in her large dining room just off the rear patio of the house.

"I want to call RKO-Pathe, as soon as I can," I told Mary.

"You can use the phone in the library while I clear things away."

I called Hank Fine, Publicity Chief for Producer Sol Lesser. He was more than courteous, he was downright friendly when I explained who I was, and what I was up to.

"It just happens Gordon's going to be out here today for lunch with Mr. Lesser and myself. Why don't you and Miss MacLaren join us?"

I was overjoyed—so much so that I didn't have the heart to tell him we had just eaten.

"Of course, if you're sure we won't be intruding."

"Nothing like it. We'll wait for you in my office. Make it as soon as you can."

I hung up, and rushed to Mary, telling her what I'd let us in for. She fell in with the scheme of things like the good trouper she is.

"I want to powder my nose. You get ready and wait for me on the front porch. I'll drive us out. It's been a long time since I've been to Culver City, and it'll be fun visiting the old lot again."

A little later I stepped into Mary's Cadillac convertible, and we drove over to the RKO-Pathe studio in Culver City.

Naturally, the receptionist stopped us. She phoned Mr. Fine, and he came out and got us. There is a warmth about this man that is friendly and reassuring.

In his office, he said, "Sit down. Gordon hasn't arrived yet, but he did phone. He's taking a voice lesson this morning and is working hard to perfect the 'Tarzan' call before we begin actual shooting."

"Then, he will do the 'call' himself rather than some weird, dubbed in sound, as has been done in other 'Tarzan' pictures, I asked.

"Yes, yes, indeed. Also, he'll use no double or stunt man. You see, with his Army training, as drill and judo instructor, Military Police Sergeant and his life-guard experience, he is well able to perform the many hazardous feats 'Tarzan' is called upon to do before he finally rides the jungle of the villains who menace the wild animal life in his district."

"Can you give me a brief run-down of the plot without divulging anything you hold sacred? I asked hopefully.

Mr. Fine laughed outright. "I'll be glad to. The name of our picture is "Tarzan's Hidden Jungle", and the locale is East Africa. Tarzan is grown and protects animals from hunters who are slaughtering them wildly for hides and fangs. He saves a United Nations' doctor, who, with his daughter, are studying jungle diseases. They get mixed up and tortured and are about to be sacrificed by a village of animal worshippers when Tarzan steps in. There is only a hint of a romance between Tarzan and this girl. After many adventures, the villains are finally routed, the UN Doctor and his daughter continue their research, and Tarzan returns to his jungle. Of course there will be plot changes and different thrill sequences including plenty of footage for our old friend, 'Cheetah', the Chimp, but in the main, that's the general idea of our story."

"Sounds mighty good. Is it one of the Burroughs stories, or an original?"

"It's an original screen-play by Frank Gruber, using the Burroughs' characters, of course. Hal Schuster is our director, and the picture will run at least ninety minutes. The African footage was actually filmed in hitherto unphotographed portions of the Dark Continent and no stock shots of jungles, animals and so on will be used."

There was a pause in our conversation. I was sitting with my back to the door; Mr. Fine was at his desk in front of me, and Mary was seated to my left, facing the door. I glanced her way. Her blue eyes were wide with amazement, her mouth was open in astonishment, and her general expression was one of inhibited pleasure frustrated at the onset by good taste and natural poise. I turned my head, searching for who or what had disturbed the lady.

In the doorway stood a bronzed giant—by name, Gordon Scott. He stands over six feet, three inches, and weighs about 212 pounds. His eyes are brown and they don't just sparkle—they are alive and alert at all times. His hair is thick and heavy, and Mary says it's a sun-burned brown in color. The man's forehead is high, slightly receding at the hair line, and his chin is strong and there is a hint of a dipline at its base. Taken as a whole, Gordon's face is not handsome in a pretty sort of way, but leaves an indelible impression of strength of character and a will to complete and succeed in anything he sets his mind to.

"Come in, Gordon," Mr. Fine invited.

Gordon Scott was pleasantly nervous in my first chat with him. He sat there in Hank Fine's office at RKO-Pathé and chatting with Mary MacLaren and myself. After the preliminary introductions were over, the four of us settled down as though we were old friends that had suddenly and unexpectedly met.

He was born August 3, 1927 at Portland, Oregon; attended grade and Grant High School there. He entered Oregon University at the age of 16, but left it after completing one term in physical education to enter the Army at Ft. Lewis, Washington, in the Infantry. That was September 18, 1944. For the next 16 months, Scott was at Camp Roberts, San Miguel, California with the 81st Training Battalion. In short order he rose to sergeant. He specialized in teaching close order drill, the use of the rifle, bayonet and pistol, judo, and hand to hand combat. From Camp Roberts, Gordon was transferred to the Oakland Army Base. Here, he became a member of the Military Police Battalion, whose job was transporting dangerous prisoners. Gordon was honorably discharged on February 22, 1947.

For a year he worked as an in the Oak Knoll Navy Hospital Fire Department. Scott had previous experience as a fire fighter. At the age of 16, and big for his age, he had talked himself into a summer job with the Portland, Oregon fire department as a hook and ladder man.

In 1950, Gordon went to Eastern, Oregon, where his oldest brother, Jim, owns and operates a working cattle ranch. Two years later, after a stretch of cowboying, Scott went to work for the Minneapolis-Honey farm implement company's division in Portland. It was while working for these people that Scott went on vacation to Las Vegas, a resort he had once visited while waiting the transfer of a military prisoner. The Hotel Sahara management watching him work out in the pool, offered him a job as life guard, making the offer so lucrative he could not afford to turn it down.

It was while he was a life guard at the Hotel Sahara that Scott was spotted by Hollywood actor's agents Ed and Walter Mayer's brothers. They brought him to the attention of film producer Sol Lesser. A test for the 'Tarzan' role followed. Gordon Scott was chosen to play the internationally famous ape-man over 200 others. He was the only one who had never been before a camera other than for a newsreel shot taken at the Sahara pool with Eleanor Holm, Olympic swim champion, who strangely enough herself had appeared in a Tarzan picture in 1938 in the role of "Jane".

The morning of my interview, Gordon was tastefully dressed in a deep, navy blue sport shirt, open at the throat, grey slacks, pink and black socks and black loafers. His big hands, not particularly artisfinite phobia against smoking, and costful brags about being the direct cause of 59 persons forsaking the weed.

"No--not that I've got anything against smoking or smokers--but I knew it would cut down my wind, and if there's one thing a life guard needs, it's wind and good breathing..."

Thereupon, Mary MacLaren established a definite en rapport with the ape-men, which indicated to me that Gordon has a warm affection somewhere for an older woman--no doubt, a mother or an elder sister--and a respect for older people in general. He is the youngest in a family of nine--four brothers and four sisters being older than he. There was none of the cocky, over-confident impudence of the smart-aleck one would almost expect from a young man on the verge of stardom in his initial effort.

Hank's phone rang. "Yes, Mr. Lesser, I understand. We'll see you in the comissary, then, a little later."

Hank turned to us and said: "Mr. Lesser is deep in a production conference and says for us not to wait for him--but he'll join us later in the comissary--so we might as well go on over."

As one, the four of us rose--Gordon helping Mary with her chair. As we left Hank's office, I noticed he was by her side. Timidly, she took his arm.

"Do you dance, Gordon?" I heard her ask him.

"I've never had any lessons, if that's what you mean, I'm crazy about the rhumba, though there's something about that calypso rhythm that sends me. Even if I'm not dancing, I can sit still when I hear a rhumba."

"That's one on me. I'm afraid my dancing is restricted more or less to three quarter time, even though I used to tango quite well with Rudolph Valentino. I'll bet you'd manage though, regardless of tempo."

Mary was buzzing like a Geiger counter in a mine field.

"This is it," Hank said.

We stepped into a modern if modest restaurant. The pretty waitress smiled impartially at all of us as she motioned for us to sit down at a far table. Gordon helped Mary with her chair again, and I maneuvered to get the one facing the door so that I could rubber-neck around--and was rewarded at one table was John Wayne--the 'Duke' in the flesh. Charles Laughton and Edward G. Robinson were seated at another table. Off in a corner quietly attending to his own business, Joel McCrea nibbled on a steak.

Hank asked me about Washington, political trends and The Pentagon. He had been with Military Intelligence during World War II, and if I remember correctly, he still holds a reserve commission as a Major. We found endless things in common to talk about. All the while, Gordon and Mary kept up a steady stream of conversation. Now and then, I caught bits of it--such as:

MARY: Gordon, do you like the Operas?

GORDON: Well, I've never really seen or heard one. But I've got the complete recording of "Carmen"--that is, "Carmen Jones".

Hank smiled.

MARY: Do you like to read?

GORDON: You bet! Especially, historical novels. I've read "The Robe" five times.

I could understand this--for in my youth, I had read General Lew Wallace's, "Ben-Hur", three or four times and had enjoyed it more with each reading.

About half way through our lunch, Mr. Lesser and his party came into the commissary. They went to a reserved table and sat down. As soon as he spotted us, he came over. Hank introduced us.

"I'm sorry I got tied up and can't join you--I know you will understand. If there is anything I can do to help, be sure and let me know." He shook my hand and rejoined his friends.

Producer Sol Lesser is a quite, dignified man who was very busy that morning, but he was not too busy in the midst of his production conference at this time to extend the courtesy of his organization to us. There is an air of genuine friendliness about him that one seldom finds in studio high places.

My antenna in the form of my good ear caught Mary and Gordon's wave length again. MARY: Do you have a girl or a romance?

GORDON: "No. Of course I have girl friends, but no one in particular. I have been too busy and will be for some time to come."

MARY: What kind of girls do you like?

GORDON: Blondes, brunettes and red-heads.

I laughed noisily, which broke up the private conversation between the erstwhile heroine of "Shoes" and Gordon.

"What lucky girl is going to play the daughter of the United Nations' Doctor, Mr. Fine?" Mary asked our host.

"We haven't selected her as yet."

Merry's eyes brightened preternaturally. As though her life depended upon it, she began to talk.

"They perform miracles with make-up these days, and I could have my face lifted and loose fifty pounds in a week and dye my hair--and, well, anything--if you think I'd have a chance to be Gordon's leading lady!"

Merry winked at Hank and me. For a ghastly minute, Gordon thought she was serious, and he turned appealing eyes to Hank. Then, he caught on, and grinned sheepishly.

Mary and I bid the Ape-man good-by, as he joined Mr. Lesser at the conference table. Hank showed us to Mary's car and we thanked him the best we could for his hospitality.

Our whole visit had lasted a little more than an hour. Yet, I felt we were leaving old friends. I'm sure Gordon will be a success, for he is Edgar Rice Burroughs' character in every sense of the word. He gives the impression of great physical strength, kindness of mind for people--and a gentleness for children and animals. He not only looks like 'Tarzan', but I believe he thinks and reacts like the Ape-man would, were his honor, his integrity or his manhood challenged. He can't fail--for he has everything, plus loyal backing in Mr. Lesser and Mr. Fine, and the entire RKO-Pathe organization.

Good luck, 'Tarzan', Gordon Scott!
photographers to accompany him. After Berger, DeGroot and the doctor are gone, the gunbearer recognizes the wounded elephant, and starts beating him. Jill, with the help of a native boy, makes the animal behave decently. From him Jill learns the duplicity of Berger and DeGroot. Fearful for the doctor’s safety, she leaves in a station wagon.

Meanwhile, Tarzan returns with the jungle medicine, and learning of the events, he goes in pursuit.

Jill’s automobile stalls in the jungle, and she proceeds on foot. Fear and terror gripping her, she sprawls into quicksand, and to add to her horror, a python is crawling along the branches of a tree toward her. As she waits, helplessly, for death to come, a vine is tossed from above, and looking up she sees Tarzan in a tree. He rescues Jill and carries her to the bank of a slow-moving stream where he bathes and revives her.

Dr. Celliers reaches the Seculoo village and is hostilely greeted by the witch-doctor; but the chief makes an appearance, and trouble is diverted.

Berger and DeGroot are determined to drive the wild animals out of Seculoo land. Removing the muffler from the jeep they race the motor, frightening the animals. Learning of this, the chief and his people feel Dr. Celliers has betrayed their confidence. He is condemned to die in the lion pit. Tarzan and Jill arrive at the village. Jill is taken prisoner, but the jungle lord manages to escape.

At the moment Dr. Celliers and Jill are thrown into the lion pit, Tarzan leaps to their rescue. Armed with a spear he shouts at the lions and-bluffs them into retreating. Once out of the pit, Tarzan voices his weird cry, and recognizing it, the fleeing animals return to Seculoo land. The chief and his people realize Tarzan, Dr. Celliers, and Jill Hardy have not betrayed them.

Berger and DeGroot are trampled to death by the elephants returning to the Seculoo sanctuary.

With peace again restored in the jungle, Tarzan grasps a vine and goes swinging through the tree tops uttering his victory cry.

The concluding scene reveals Cheta and his amour are very much in love.
Hal Foster, top-ranking "pro" among adventure strip artists and creator of King Features PRINCE VALIANT, presented Ted Mask with an original Val drawing when guest visitor on the NBC-TV Original Amateur Hour program. More recently, Foster was the subject for THIS IS YOUR LIFE television show. 20th Century-Fox's film version of PRINCE VALIANT has been filmed on a lavish scale in Technicolor and Cinemascope with an all-star cast. It's proved so successful that a sequel will be made called VALIANT AND AZETA. Foster did the TARZAN newspaper strip for several years and was awarded the "Silver Lady" statuette as the outstanding cartoonist of 1952.

Lex Barker’s chefs may he wishes he’d never quit the Tarzan pictures. Lex has a contract with Universal for a series of technicolor action films. The first of these, YELLOW MOUNTAIN, was released recently. Lex has been courting for the rights to film Edgar Rice Burroughs' THE OUTLAW OF TOMB. It is about a time someone made movies of ERB’s non-Tarzan stories. Burt Lancaster as THE MUCKER???

The attempts to film the life story of Johnny Weissmuller hit a snag when relatives of the late Hupe Veale cautioned producers Pipe and Thomas they would not release Ulpe in the film without official family approval. There are more than twenty persons related to the fiery actress, who took her own life after a tragic love affair that followed her divorce from Johnny.

Pallisades (N. J.) Park pulled another strong drawing card out of the talent pack when Buster Crabbe, former aquatic star and lately a TV cowboy name, was engaged to teach calisthenics and swimming at the spot last summer. Crabbe has also been conducting a morning calisthenics class via television. Crabbe's last film appearance was in the Columbia serial, THUNDER, KING OF CONGO. He is now starring, with his son Cuffy, in a new TV series, CAPTAIN GALLANT OF THE FOREIGN LEGION. Also on television, recently, the former Tarzan starred as THE CORNERED MAN ON TV THEATER. His portrayal, with the aid of make-up, of a middle-aged ex-champion was excellent.

The ad below is from a recent issue of the Kansas City Star. You have to be a real fan to sit through a triple feature Tarzan program, plus 4 cartoons!

---

Bruce Bennett has been appearing regularly on various TV programs, including the Loretta Young show, Science-Fiction Theatre and Ford Theatre. He also appeared as Quentin in QUANTZILL AND HIS RAINERS on Tales of the Century. His HONE OF THE WILDERNESS serial and old movies are also popular on TV. He has just completed a TV series entitled THE TALKING PICTURE LETTER. His latest movie is THE ADVENTURES OF DANIEL BOONE, which he may also do as a TV series.

Elmo Lincoln, the original Tarzan, can be seen in Republic's "Belle Le Grand," RKO's "The Good Bad Man," and Paramount's "Carrie." Lincoln, considered a film-historian, was a guest columnist for Lowell E. Redeling in the Hollywood Citizen-News and appeared on the "You Asked For It" TV program. Film clips from Elmo's 1934 version of TARZAN OF THE APES were shown with what was probably the former jungle star's last professional appearance.

Harry Meary, the original Jane of the Tarzan films, has been appearing frequently on television. She has starred in "Buy Me Blue Ribbons" and "Up Above the World So High," both for TV Playhouse, and "The Rose Garden" for TV Theatre. She also had leading roles in several hit plays the past few years, "Mrs. McThing," "Mrs. Petterson," and "The Southwest Corner." She also plays on television's Kraft Theatre with the original Broadway cast.

Jon Hall has made the complete cycle from jungle films to leading man and back to jungle films. He started as ERB's "Lion Men" and co-star for Dorothy Lamour and her sarong.

"Now that I'm playing Ramar on TV," he said, "I make more money in six months than I did when I was starring in movies."

Each week brings scores of inquiries to CBS Radio as to the identity of the deep-voiced actor who plays "Tarzan." In order to preserve the drama's illusion and to protect the home life of the actor, no information is released about his identity or whereabouts. ERB readers know him to be Lamont Johnson, who can also be heard on several other radio programs. He has appeared in films RETREAT, HELL AND THE HUMAN JUNGLE. At present he is directing for NBC-TV.

An issue of Avon's STRANGE WORLDS had a story, in which alien creatures were shown speaking ERB's American English. If a fan bothered to translate the script appearing in the balloons above the characters heads he could more readily understand the terrible censorship the "comics" have suffered. Wow!
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>TITLE</th>
<th>FIRST EDITION</th>
<th>COLOR</th>
<th>SIZE</th>
<th>ILLUSTRATOR</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>TARZAN SERIES</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tarzan of the Apes</td>
<td>1914-McClurg</td>
<td>red</td>
<td>5 x 7½</td>
<td>Fred J. Arting</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Return of Tarzan</td>
<td>1915-McClurg</td>
<td>green</td>
<td></td>
<td>N.C. Wyeth &amp; St. John</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Beasts of Tarzan</td>
<td>1916-McClurg</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>J. Allen St. John</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Son of Tarzan</td>
<td>1917-McClurg</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>J. Allen St. John</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tarzan and the Jewels of Opar</td>
<td>1917-McClurg</td>
<td>black</td>
<td></td>
<td>J. Allen St. John</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jungle Tales of Tarzan</td>
<td>1919-McClurg</td>
<td>orange</td>
<td></td>
<td>J. Allen St. John</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tarzan the Untamed</td>
<td>1920-McClurg</td>
<td>green</td>
<td></td>
<td>J. Allen St. John</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tarzan the Terrible</td>
<td>1921-McClurg</td>
<td>red</td>
<td></td>
<td>J. Allen St. John</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tarzan and the Golden Lion</td>
<td>1923-McClurg</td>
<td>tan</td>
<td></td>
<td>J. Allen St. John</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tarzan and the Ant Men</td>
<td>1924-McClurg</td>
<td>brown</td>
<td></td>
<td>J. Allen St. John</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tarzan, Lord of the Jungle</td>
<td>1928-McClurg</td>
<td>green</td>
<td></td>
<td>J. Allen St. John</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tarzan and the Lost Empire</td>
<td>1929-Metropolitan</td>
<td>orange</td>
<td></td>
<td>A.W. Sperry</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tarzan at the Earth's Core</td>
<td>1930-Metropolitan</td>
<td>green</td>
<td></td>
<td>J. Allen St. John</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tarzan the Invincible</td>
<td>1931-Burroughs</td>
<td>blue</td>
<td></td>
<td>Studley Burroughs</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tarzan Triumphant</td>
<td>1932-Burroughs</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>Studley Burroughs</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tarzan and the City of Gold</td>
<td>1933-Burroughs</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>J. Allen St. John</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tarzan and the Lion Man</td>
<td>1934-Burroughs</td>
<td>grey</td>
<td></td>
<td>J. Allen St. John</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tarzan and the Leopard Men</td>
<td>1935-Burroughs</td>
<td>blue 5½x7-3/4</td>
<td></td>
<td>J. Allen St. John</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tarzan's Quest</td>
<td>1936-Burroughs</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>John C. Burroughs</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tarzan and the Forbidden City</td>
<td>1938-Burroughs</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>John C. Burroughs</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tarzan the Magnificent</td>
<td>1939-Burroughs</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>John C. Burroughs</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tarzan and the Foreign Legion</td>
<td>1947-Burroughs</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>John C. Burroughs</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>MARTIAN SERIES</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A Princess of Mars</td>
<td>1917-McClurg</td>
<td>brown</td>
<td>5 x 7½</td>
<td>Frank Schoonover</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Gods of Mars</td>
<td>1918-McClurg</td>
<td>red</td>
<td></td>
<td>Frank Schoonover</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Warlord of Mars</td>
<td>1919-McClurg</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>J. Allen St. John</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Thuvia, Maid of Mars</td>
<td>1920-McClurg</td>
<td>green</td>
<td></td>
<td>J. Allen St. John</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Chessmen of Mars</td>
<td>1922-McClurg</td>
<td>red</td>
<td></td>
<td>Monahan &amp; St. John</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Master Mind of Mars</td>
<td>1928-McClurg</td>
<td>orange</td>
<td></td>
<td>J. Allen St. John</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A Fighting Man of Mars</td>
<td>1931-Metropolitan</td>
<td>red</td>
<td></td>
<td>Hugh Hutton</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Swords of Mars</td>
<td>1936-Burroughs</td>
<td>blue 5½x7-3/4</td>
<td></td>
<td>J. Allen St. John</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Synthetic Men of Mars</td>
<td>1940-Burroughs</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>John C. Burroughs</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Llana of Gathol</td>
<td>1948-Burroughs</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>John C. Burroughs</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>PELLICULAR SERIES</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>At the Earth's Core</td>
<td>1932-McClurg</td>
<td>grey</td>
<td>5 x 7½</td>
<td>J. Allen St. John</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Pellucidar</td>
<td>1923-McClurg</td>
<td>red</td>
<td>5 x 7½</td>
<td>J. Allen St. John</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tamar of Pellucidar</td>
<td>1930-Metropolitan</td>
<td>blue 5 x 7½</td>
<td></td>
<td>Paul Standor</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tarzan at the Earth's Core</td>
<td>(See Tarzan series data above)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>John C. Burroughs</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Back to the Stone Age</td>
<td>1937-Burroughs</td>
<td>blue 5½x7-3/4</td>
<td></td>
<td>John C. Burroughs</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Land of Terror</td>
<td>1944-Burroughs</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>John C. Burroughs</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>VENUS SERIES</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Pirates of Venus</td>
<td>1934-Burroughs</td>
<td>blue</td>
<td>5 x 7½</td>
<td>J. Allen St. John</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Lost On Venus</td>
<td>1935-Burroughs</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>John C. Burroughs</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Carson of Venus</td>
<td>1939-Burroughs</td>
<td></td>
<td>5½x7-3/4</td>
<td>John C. Burroughs</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Escape On Venus</td>
<td>1946-Burroughs</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>John C. Burroughs</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>NOVELS</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Mucker</td>
<td>1921-McClurg</td>
<td>green</td>
<td>5 x 7½</td>
<td>J. Allen St. John</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Girl from Hollywood</td>
<td>1923-Macaulay</td>
<td>red</td>
<td>5 x 7½</td>
<td>P.J. Monahan</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Land that Time Forgot</td>
<td>1924-McClurg</td>
<td>green</td>
<td></td>
<td>J. Allen St. John</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cave Girl</td>
<td>1925-McClurg</td>
<td>blue</td>
<td></td>
<td>J. Allen St. John</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Bandit of Hell's Bend</td>
<td>1925-McClurg</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>Modest Stein</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Eternal Lover</td>
<td>1925-McClurg</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>J. Allen St. John</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Moon Maid</td>
<td>1926-McClurg</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>J. Allen St. John</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Mad King</td>
<td>1926-McClurg</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>J. Allen St. John</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Outlaw of Torn</td>
<td>1927-McClurg</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>J. Allen St. John</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The War Chief</td>
<td>1927-McClurg</td>
<td>orange</td>
<td></td>
<td>J. Allen St. John</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tarzan of the Earth's Core</td>
<td>1929-McClurg</td>
<td>tan</td>
<td></td>
<td>Studley Burroughs</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jungle Girl</td>
<td>1929-Burroughs</td>
<td>blue</td>
<td></td>
<td>John C. Burroughs</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Apache Devil</td>
<td>1933-Burroughs</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>John C. Burroughs</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Oodale Affair &amp; The Rider</td>
<td>1937-Burroughs</td>
<td></td>
<td>5½x7-3/4</td>
<td>John C. Burroughs</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Lad and the Lion</td>
<td>1938-Burroughs</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>John C. Burroughs</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Deputy Sheriff of Comanche County</td>
<td>1940-Burroughs</td>
<td>gray</td>
<td></td>
<td>John C. Burroughs</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

THE TARZAN TWINS BOOKS

The Tarzan Twins (boxed) 1927-Volland illustrated 6½ x 8½ Douglas Grant

Tarzan and the Tarzan Twins 1936-Whitman covers 7½ x 9½ Juanita Bennett with Jad-Bal-Ja, the Golden Lion

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Date</th>
<th>Issue</th>
<th>Story Title</th>
<th>Book Title</th>
<th>Length</th>
<th>Cover</th>
<th>Illustrator</th>
<th>Interior</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Feb. 1912</td>
<td>ALL STORY MAGAZINE</td>
<td>Under the Moons of Mars (Princess)</td>
<td>6 parts</td>
<td>none</td>
<td>none</td>
<td>none</td>
<td>none</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oct. 1912</td>
<td></td>
<td>Tarzan of the Apes</td>
<td>complete</td>
<td>Clinton Pettee</td>
<td>none</td>
<td>none</td>
<td>none</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jan. 1913</td>
<td></td>
<td>The Gods of Mars</td>
<td>5 parts</td>
<td>none</td>
<td>none</td>
<td>none</td>
<td>none</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>July 1913</td>
<td></td>
<td>The Cave Girl</td>
<td>3 parts</td>
<td>Clinton Pettee</td>
<td>none</td>
<td>none</td>
<td>none</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nov. 1913</td>
<td></td>
<td>A Man Without a Soul (Monster Man)</td>
<td>complete</td>
<td>Monahan</td>
<td>none</td>
<td>Small</td>
<td>none</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dec. 1913</td>
<td></td>
<td>The Warlord of Mars</td>
<td>4 parts</td>
<td>Small</td>
<td>none</td>
<td>none</td>
<td>none</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mar. 7, 1914</td>
<td>ALL STORY WEEKLY</td>
<td>The Eternal Lover</td>
<td>complete</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mar. 21, 1914</td>
<td></td>
<td>The Mad King</td>
<td>complete</td>
<td>Clinton Pettee</td>
<td>none</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Apr. 4, 1914</td>
<td></td>
<td>At the Earth's Core</td>
<td>4 parts</td>
<td>Small</td>
<td>none</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mar. 16, 1914</td>
<td>ALL STORY-CAVALLER WEEKLY</td>
<td>The Beasts of Tarzan</td>
<td>5 parts</td>
<td>Small</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oct. 24, 1914</td>
<td></td>
<td>The Mucker</td>
<td>4 parts</td>
<td>Monahan</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jan. 25, 1915</td>
<td></td>
<td>Sweetheart Primeval (Eternal Lover)</td>
<td>5 parts</td>
<td>Monahan</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>May 1, 1915</td>
<td></td>
<td>Pellucidar</td>
<td>5 parts</td>
<td>Small</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Aug. 7, 1915</td>
<td>ALL STORY WEEKLY</td>
<td>Barnaby Custer of Beatrice (Mad King)</td>
<td>3 parts</td>
<td>W. Fairchild</td>
<td>none</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dec. 4, 1915</td>
<td></td>
<td>The Son of Tarzan</td>
<td>6 parts</td>
<td>Monahan</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Apr. 8, 1916</td>
<td></td>
<td>Thuvia, Maid of Mars</td>
<td>3 parts</td>
<td>Monahan</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>June 17, 1916</td>
<td></td>
<td>The Return of the Mucker (Mucker)</td>
<td>5 parts</td>
<td>Williams</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sept. 25, 1916</td>
<td></td>
<td>The Girl from Tarzis's</td>
<td>4 parts</td>
<td>Monahan</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nov. 15, 1916</td>
<td></td>
<td>Tarzan and the Jewels of Opar</td>
<td>6 parts</td>
<td>Small</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mar. 13, 1917</td>
<td></td>
<td>The Cave Man (Cave Girl)</td>
<td>4 parts</td>
<td>Monahan</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>June 30, 1917</td>
<td></td>
<td>The Lad and the Lion</td>
<td>3 parts</td>
<td>Small</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dec. 14, 1918</td>
<td></td>
<td>H. R. H. The Rider (Oakdale Affair)</td>
<td>3 parts</td>
<td>Small</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mar. 20, 1920</td>
<td></td>
<td>Tarzan &amp; the Valley of Luna (Untamed)</td>
<td>5 parts</td>
<td>Monahan</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Aug. 12, 1921</td>
<td>ARGOSY-ALL STORY WEEKLY</td>
<td>Tarzan the Terrible</td>
<td>7 parts</td>
<td>Monahan</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oct. 8, 1921</td>
<td></td>
<td>The Efficiency Expert</td>
<td>4 parts</td>
<td>Stockton Mulford</td>
<td>Mori</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Feb. 18, 1922</td>
<td></td>
<td>The Chasm of Mars</td>
<td>7 parts</td>
<td>Monahan</td>
<td>Mori</td>
<td>Mori</td>
<td>Mori</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dec. 9, 1922</td>
<td></td>
<td>Tarzan and the Golden Lion</td>
<td>6 parts</td>
<td>Monahan</td>
<td>Mori</td>
<td>Mori</td>
<td>Mori</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Feb. 5, 1923</td>
<td></td>
<td>The Moon Maid</td>
<td>6 parts</td>
<td>Monahan</td>
<td>Mori</td>
<td>Mori</td>
<td>Mori</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Feb. 2, 1924</td>
<td></td>
<td>Tarzan and the Ant Men</td>
<td>6 parts</td>
<td>Stockton Mulford</td>
<td>Mori</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sept. 13, 1924</td>
<td></td>
<td>The Bandit of Hell's Bend</td>
<td>6 parts</td>
<td>Monahan</td>
<td>Mori</td>
<td>Mori</td>
<td>Mori</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Feb. 21, 1925</td>
<td></td>
<td>The Moon Men (Moon Maid)</td>
<td>5 parts</td>
<td>Stockton Mulford</td>
<td>Mori</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sept. 5, 1925</td>
<td></td>
<td>The Red Hawk (Moon Maid)</td>
<td>3 parts</td>
<td>Small</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Apr. 16, 1927</td>
<td></td>
<td>The War Chief</td>
<td>5 parts</td>
<td>Small</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>May 19, 1928</td>
<td></td>
<td>Apache Devil</td>
<td>6 parts</td>
<td>Small</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Feb. 12, 1932</td>
<td>ARGOSY-MAGAZINE</td>
<td>Tarzan and the City of Gold</td>
<td>6 parts</td>
<td>Paul Stahr</td>
<td>Samuel Cahan</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sept. 17, 1932</td>
<td></td>
<td>Pirates of Venus</td>
<td>6 parts</td>
<td>Paul Stahr</td>
<td>Samuel Cahan</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mar. 4, 1933</td>
<td></td>
<td>Lost on Venus</td>
<td>7 parts</td>
<td>Paul Stahr</td>
<td>Samuel Cahan</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sept. 19, 1936</td>
<td></td>
<td>Tarzan &amp; the Magic Men (Magnificent)</td>
<td>3 parts</td>
<td>Paul Stahr</td>
<td>Samuel Cahan</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jan. 9, 1937</td>
<td></td>
<td>7 Worlds to Conquer (Back to Stone Age)</td>
<td>complete</td>
<td>Paul Stahr</td>
<td>Samuel Cahan</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Feb. 20, 1937</td>
<td></td>
<td>The Ressurrection of Jimber-Jaw</td>
<td>complete</td>
<td>Paul Stahr</td>
<td>Samuel Cahan</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jan. 8, 1938</td>
<td></td>
<td>Carson of Venus</td>
<td>3 parts</td>
<td>Paul Stahr</td>
<td>Samuel Cahan</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Aug. 23, 1941</td>
<td></td>
<td>The Quest of Tarzan</td>
<td>5 parts</td>
<td>Paul Stahr</td>
<td>Samuel Cahan</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mar. 19, 1938</td>
<td></td>
<td>Red Star of Tarzan (Forbidden City)</td>
<td>6 parts</td>
<td>Virgil Finlay</td>
<td>Virgil Finlay</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jan. 7, 1939</td>
<td></td>
<td>The Synthetic Men of Mars</td>
<td>6 parts</td>
<td>Volkswagen</td>
<td>Volkswagen</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>NEW STORY MAGAZINE</td>
<td></td>
<td>The Return of Tarzan</td>
<td>7 parts</td>
<td>N. C. Wyeth</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jan. 1914</td>
<td></td>
<td>The Outlaw of Torn</td>
<td>5 parts</td>
<td>N. C. Wyeth</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>BLUE BOOK MAGAZINE</td>
<td></td>
<td>Beyond Thirty</td>
<td>complete</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>Herbert M. Toops</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mar. 1916</td>
<td></td>
<td>New Stories of Tarzan (Jungle Tales)</td>
<td>12 parts</td>
<td>Dom J. Lavin</td>
<td>Quin</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Aug. 1918</td>
<td></td>
<td>The Land That Time Forgot</td>
<td>complete</td>
<td>Frank Hoban</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oct. 1918</td>
<td></td>
<td>The People That Time Forgot (Land)</td>
<td>complete</td>
<td>Frank Hoban</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dec. 1918</td>
<td></td>
<td>Out of Time's Abyss (Land Time Forgot)</td>
<td>complete</td>
<td>Frank Hoban</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dec. 1927</td>
<td></td>
<td>Tarzan, Lord of the Jungle</td>
<td>6 parts</td>
<td>Frank Hoban</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oct. 1928</td>
<td></td>
<td>Tarzan and the Lost Empire</td>
<td>6 parts</td>
<td>Frank Hoban</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mar. 1929</td>
<td></td>
<td>Tarzan at the Earth's Core</td>
<td>7 parts</td>
<td>Frank Hoban</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sept. 1929</td>
<td></td>
<td>Pellucidar</td>
<td>7 parts</td>
<td>Frank Hoban</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Apr. 1930</td>
<td></td>
<td>A Fighting Man of Mars</td>
<td>6 parts</td>
<td>Frank Hoban</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
<td>None</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>DATE</td>
<td>STORY TITLE</td>
<td>BOOK TITLE</td>
<td>LENGTH</td>
<td>COVER</td>
<td>ILLUSTRATOR</td>
<td>INTERIOR</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>------------</td>
<td>-------------------------------------------------</td>
<td>--------------------------------</td>
<td>--------</td>
<td>-------------</td>
<td>----------------</td>
<td>---------------</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oct. 1930</td>
<td>Tarzan, Guard of the Jungle (Invincible)</td>
<td>7 parts</td>
<td></td>
<td>Laurence Herndon</td>
<td>Frank Hoban</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>May 1931</td>
<td>The Land of Hidden Men (Jungle Girl)</td>
<td>5 parts</td>
<td></td>
<td>Laurence Herndon</td>
<td>Frank Hoban</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oct. 1931</td>
<td>The Triumph of Tarzan (Triumphant)</td>
<td>6 parts</td>
<td></td>
<td>Laurence Herndon</td>
<td>Frank Hoban</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Aug. 1931</td>
<td>Tarzan and the Leopard Men</td>
<td>6 parts</td>
<td></td>
<td>Joseph Chenoweth</td>
<td>Frank Hoban</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nov. 1934</td>
<td>Swords of Mars</td>
<td>6 parts</td>
<td></td>
<td>Chenoweth &amp; Zaula</td>
<td>Robert Pink</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oct. 1935</td>
<td>Tarzan and the Immortal Men (Quest)</td>
<td>6 parts</td>
<td></td>
<td>Herbert M. Stoops</td>
<td>Frank Hoban</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nov. 1937</td>
<td>Tarzan and the Elephant Men (Magnificent)</td>
<td>3 parts</td>
<td></td>
<td>Herbert M. Stoops</td>
<td>J. Cannon</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Apr. 1940</td>
<td>Tarzan and the Champion</td>
<td>complete</td>
<td></td>
<td>L. R. Gustavson</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jan. 1942</td>
<td>Beyond the Farthest Star</td>
<td>complete</td>
<td></td>
<td>Grattan Condon</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mar. 1919</td>
<td>An Eye For an Eye (Tarzan the Untamed)</td>
<td>complete</td>
<td></td>
<td>Chas. Livingston</td>
<td>Bull</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Apr. 1919</td>
<td>When the Lion Fed</td>
<td>&quot; &quot; &quot;</td>
<td></td>
<td>Chas. Livingston</td>
<td>Bull</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>May 1919</td>
<td>The Hidden Locket</td>
<td>&quot; &quot; &quot;</td>
<td></td>
<td>Chas. Livingston</td>
<td>Bull</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>June 1919</td>
<td>When Blood Told</td>
<td>&quot; &quot; &quot;</td>
<td></td>
<td>Chas. Livingston</td>
<td>Bull</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>July 1919</td>
<td>The Debt</td>
<td>&quot; &quot; &quot;</td>
<td></td>
<td>Chas. Livingston</td>
<td>Bull</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Aug. 1919</td>
<td>The Black Flyer</td>
<td>&quot; &quot; &quot;</td>
<td></td>
<td>Chas. Livingston</td>
<td>Bull</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>June 1922</td>
<td>The Girl from Hollywood</td>
<td>6 parts</td>
<td></td>
<td>none</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1927</td>
<td>The Master Mind of Mars</td>
<td>complete</td>
<td></td>
<td>Paul</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mar. 1941</td>
<td>John Carter and the Giant of Mars</td>
<td>complete</td>
<td></td>
<td>St. John</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mar. 1941</td>
<td>The City of Mummies (Llama of Cathol)</td>
<td>complete</td>
<td></td>
<td>St. John</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>June 1941</td>
<td>Black Pirates of Barsoom (&quot; &quot; &quot; )</td>
<td>complete</td>
<td></td>
<td>St. John</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Aug. 1941</td>
<td>Yellow Men of Mars (&quot; &quot; &quot; )</td>
<td>complete</td>
<td></td>
<td>St. John</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oct. 1941</td>
<td>Invisible Men of Mars (&quot; &quot; &quot; )</td>
<td>complete</td>
<td></td>
<td>St. John</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Feb. 1942</td>
<td>Return to Pellucidar</td>
<td>complete</td>
<td></td>
<td>none</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mar. 1942</td>
<td>Men of the Bronze Age</td>
<td>complete</td>
<td></td>
<td>St. John</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Apr. 1942</td>
<td>Tiger Girl</td>
<td>complete</td>
<td></td>
<td>St. John</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Feb. 1943</td>
<td>Skeleton Men of Jupiter</td>
<td>complete</td>
<td></td>
<td>St. John</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nov. 1929</td>
<td>#Tarzan Returns (Beasts of Tarzan)</td>
<td>4 parts</td>
<td></td>
<td>Chas. E. Cameron</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nov. 1928</td>
<td>#Conquest of the Moon (Moon Maid)</td>
<td>4 parts</td>
<td></td>
<td>C. Saunders</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Feb. 1929</td>
<td>#Lost Inside the Earth (At Earth's Core)</td>
<td>3 parts</td>
<td></td>
<td>C. Saunders</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Apr. 1929</td>
<td>#Carter of the Red Planet (Princess)</td>
<td>4 parts</td>
<td></td>
<td>C. Saunders</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nov. 1933</td>
<td>Tarzan and the Lion Man</td>
<td>9 parts</td>
<td></td>
<td>Ray Dean</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jul. 1939</td>
<td>The Scientists Revolt</td>
<td>complete</td>
<td></td>
<td>Julian Krupa</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mar. 1941</td>
<td>Slaves of the Fish Men (Escape On Venus)</td>
<td>complete</td>
<td></td>
<td>St. John</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jul. 1941</td>
<td>Goddess of Fire</td>
<td>&quot; &quot; &quot;</td>
<td></td>
<td>St. John &amp; McCauley</td>
<td>St. John</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nov. 1941</td>
<td>The Living Dead</td>
<td>&quot; &quot; &quot;</td>
<td></td>
<td>St. John</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mar. 1942</td>
<td>War on Venus</td>
<td>&quot; &quot; &quot;</td>
<td></td>
<td>St. John</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mar. 1940</td>
<td>The Terrible Tenderfoot (Deputy Sheriff)</td>
<td>3 parts</td>
<td></td>
<td>Rudolph Belarski</td>
<td>C. A. Murphy</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>June 1940</td>
<td>Tarzan and the Jungle Murders</td>
<td>complete</td>
<td></td>
<td>Rudolph Belarski</td>
<td>C. A. Murphy</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

RED BOOK MAGAZINE

MUNSEY'S MAGAZINE

AMAZING STORIES ANNUAL

1927 The Master Mind of Mars

TRIPLE-X-MAGAZINE

MODERN MECHANICS AND INVENTION

LIBERTY MAGAZINE

PANTASTIC ADVENTURES

THRILLING ADVENTURES

MAGAZINE AND NEWSPAPER ARTICLES BY EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS

No attempt has been made to list the UP and Honolulu Advertiser articles written by Burroughs as a war correspondent. Readers knowing of any other newspaper or magazine articles written by ERB please contact the editor.
The first eight titles in the Martian series were reprinted, countless times, by Grosset & Dunlap in 75c editions. ERB, Inc. published all the Martian series, except LILIAN OF GATHOL, in matched $1.00 reprint editions during 1946.

Only the first four Pellucidar titles have been reprinted by Grosset & Dunlap in 75c editions. However, remainders of BACK TO THE STONE AGE first editions were distributed by Grosset & Dunlap, for 75c, in G&D dust jackets. LAND OF TERROR appeared in first edition only.

PIRATES OF VENUS and LOST ON VENUS were reprinted by Grosset & Dunlap in 75c editions. All the Venus titles, except ESCAPE ON VENUS, were reprinted by ERB, Inc. during 1946 in matched $1.00 editions.

All of Burroughs' novels, except THE GIRL FROM HOLLYWOOD and THE DEPUTY SHERIFF OF COMANCHE COUNTY, have been reprinted by Grosset & Dunlap in 75c editions. No data or record of THE GIRL FROM HOLLYWOOD in reprint edition is available. DEPUTY SHERIFF OF COMANCHE COUNTY appeared in 1st edition only. In 1950 Dell published THE CAVAGE GIRL in pocket edition.

TARZAN OF THE APES and THE RETURN OF TARZAN were published in Armed Services Editions. THE TARZAN TWINS was published in first edition and reprinted at least seven times by the P.J. Volland Co. The 2nd TWINS title was never reprinted. The dust jackets for the reprint editions of TARZAN OF THE APES and TARZAN AND THE LION MAN are different than the first edition jackets.

MISCELLANEOUS ERB PUBLICATIONS

Eldon K. Everett informs me that a photocopy of the sections in booklet form of Elmo Lincoln's ADVENTURES OF TARZAN, written by Bert Ennis, was distributed as a premium to the serial goers when the film was released. Also, that a 15 part novelization of the film was published by some newspapers, running consistently with the motion picture serial.
"TARZAN" MERCHANDISE

TARZAN BALLOONS
Pioneer Rubber Co., Willard, Ohio

TARZAN STATIONERY & TABLETS
Birmingham Paper Co., Birmingham, Ala.

TARZAN MOULDED RUBBER TOYS
Auburn Rubber Corp., Auburn, Ind.

TARZAN SPEARS, KNIVES, LOCKETS; MECHANICAL WOODEN TOYS Clarke & Hyde Toys, Memphis, Tenn.

TARZAN INDOOR GAMES
Parker Bros., Inc., Salem, Mass.

TARZAN PLAQUES
Metcalf Mfg. Co., Los Angeles, Calif.

TARZAN STATUETTES
Gem Clay Forming Co., Sebring, Ohio

TARZAN COSTUMES
A. Fishbach Inc., 18 W. 20th St., N.Y.

TARZAN KNIVES
Imperial Knife Co., 401 Broadway, N.Y.

TARZAN GAME
Lindstrom, 200 Fifth Ave., N.Y.

TARZAN LOUSERS & SHIRTS, FREE TIE & STORY Commercial Shirt Corp., 1239 Broadway, N.Y.

TARZAN MAGIC CARDS
Brandt & Brandt, 108 Grand St., N.Y.

TARZAN CARTOON AND MOVIE SUBJECTS ON FILM
Irwin Corp., 27 West 20th St., N.Y.

TARZAN AND HIS MATE TOY FILM STRIP
Geo. A. Hormel & Co., Austin, Minn.

TARZAN COLORING BOOKS AND JIGSAW PUZZLES
Saalfield Pub. Co., Akron, Ohio

TARZAN PAPER MARKS, RESCUE PUZZLE, TREASURE HUNT & JUNGLE MAP Eison-freeman Co., L.I.N.Y.

TARZAN TOY STRIPS, MOVIE PROJECTOR & JUNGLE STRINGING TARGET
J. Schneider, Inc., N.Y.

TARZAN RUBBER HUNTING KNIFE, HATCHETS, BALLOONS AND BASEBALLS Barr Rubber Co., Sandusky, O.

TARZAN CELLULOID BUTTONS
M. Pudlin and Co., 286 Fifth Ave., N.Y.

TARZAN PAPER-MAQUE HELMETS
Hawley Products Co., St. Charles, Ill.

TARZAN BOW AND ARROW SETS
The Archers Company, Bristol, Conn.

TARZAN SWEAT SHIRTS
A.A. Smith & Son, 346 Broadway, N.Y.

TARZAN BELTS

TARZAN ICE CREAM CUPS AND CONTAINERS
Lily-Tulip Cup Corp., 122 E. 42nd St., N.Y.

TARZAN BREAD WRAPPERS
Muehl Print Products Co., Graybar Bldg., N.Y.

TARZAN BADGES AND BRACELETS
Etched Products Corp. Long Island City, N.Y.

TARZAN PAPER TRANSFERS

TARZAN BOARD GAMES
Iutz & Sheinkman Inc., 2 Duane St., N.Y.

TARZAN PACKAGE CUT-OUTS ON BOXES OF SALT

TARZAN PHOTO STAMPS
Photo Stamp Inc., 303 W. 42nd St., N.Y.

TARZAN BOW AND ARROW SET
The Outdoor Sports Co., Forestville, Conn.

TARZAN BROOCHES
President Jewelry Co., 1220 Broadway, N.Y.

TARZAN TIES
Senglade Gravats, 302 Fifth Ave., N.Y.

TARZAN MAGS
Stephen Slesinger, N.Y.

TARZAN CANDY
Schutter-Johnson Corp., Chicago-Brooklyn

TARZAN OF THE APES JIG-SAW Midwest Distributors, Inc., Minneapolis.

TARZAN OF THE APES AND TARZAN AND THE BLACK BOY, TWO STORIES ON RECORDS
Deca Records, N.Y.

TARZAN SONG
Fred Fisher Pub. Co., 1619 Broadway, N.Y.

TARZAN GAME AND SPINNER
United Features, N.Y.

TARZAN GIFT PICTURE NO. 1
United Features, N.Y.

Most of the previously listed items are no longer being manufactured or published and are therefore unobtainable from the distributors. Your editor is trying to complete a collection of this material and will be glad to hear from anyone with such items for sale.

Following is listed new merchandise that can be purchased from the manufacturer or your local dealer.

TARZAN IN THE VALLEY OF TALKING GORILLAS
Tarzan Records, 6607 Sunset, Hollywood

TARZAN YELL RECORD
T. J. Valentino, Inc., 1600 Broadway, N.Y.

TARZAN SONG AND JUNGLE DANCE
Little Golden Records, N.Y.

TARZAN 35mm COLOR SLIDES
National Picture Slides Co., N.Y.

TARZAN 3D BUBBLE GUM manufactured by Topps Chewing Gum, Inc., Brooklyn, N.Y. contains a series of sixty Tarzan picture cards, in three dimensions, and story based on the Sol Lesser production TARZAN AND THE SHE DEVIL.

PICTURE CARDS & BUBBLE GUM

ADVENTURES OF TARZAN VIEW-MASTER REELS (4)
Sawyer's, Inc., Portland, Oregon

TARZAN COLORING BOOKS (2)
Whitman Pub. Co., Racine, Wis.

TARZAN INLAY PUZZLE
Whitman Pub. Co., Racine, Wis.

TARZAN 8MM & 16MM MOTION PICTURE FILMS
Hollywood Sales, Burbank, Calif.

TARZAN PLANTER (Made in Japan)
Available in 5 & 10¢ stores

TARZAN LICENSE PLATE
Tartana, Calif.

TARZAN "CLICKER" TOY (Made in Japan)
Available in Novelty Stores

TARZAN AND THE DISTINGUISHED MONKEY
Available in jazz record

MISS TARZAN (two-piece Leopard Print)
Frederick's of Hollywood

Collectors can look for a flood of new TARZAN MERCHANDISE to become available with the release of the TARZAN series on television, which will certainly cause renewed interest in the character, similar to the Davy Crockett fad.
Tarzan Story Strips

The daily Tarzan cartoon strip made its first appearance in January 1929 and was followed by a Sunday page in March 1931. The feature is carried by more than 300 American newspapers, plus many foreign publications. Following is a list of the daily Tarzan story-strips and their illustrators, in order of publication.

Tarzan of the Apes    Harold Foster
The Return of Tarzan  Rex Maxon
The Beasts of Tarzan  Rex Maxon
The Son of Tarzan    Rex Maxon
Tarzan and the Jewels of Opar  Rex Maxon
Tarzan and the Lost Empire Rex Maxon
Tarzan and the Golden Lion Rex Maxon
Tarzan, Lord of the Jungle Rex Maxon
Tarzan at the Earth's Core  Rex Maxon
Tarzan the Terrible   Rex Maxon
Tarzan and the Ant Men  Rex Maxon
Tarzan the Untamed    Rex Maxon
Tarzan the Ape-man   Rex Maxon
Tarzan the Invincible Rex Maxon
Tarzan and the City of Gold Rex Maxon
Tarzan and the Lion Man Rex Maxon
Tarzan and the Fire Cods  Rex Maxon
The Tarzan Twins  Rex Maxon
Tarzan and the Leopard Men Rex Maxon
Tarzan and the Mayan Goddess  Wm. Juhr
Tarzan's Quest      Wm. Juhr
Tarzan the Magnificent Wm. Juhr
Tarzan Under Fire   Wm. Juhr
Tarzan the Fearless  Wm. Juhr
Tarzan and the Forbidden City Rex Maxon
Tarzan and the Elephant Men Rex Maxon
Tarzan and the Fires of Tohr  Rex Maxon

With the conclusion of "The Fires of Tohr" the daily Tarzan strip dropped the four-picture illustrations, with text below, and began the present type strip featuring new Tarzan exploits illustrated by the following artists.

Numbers 1 to 2508    Rex Maxon
Numbers 2509 to 2616  Burne Hogarth
Numbers 2617 to 2892  Dan Barry
Numbers 2893 to 2958  John Lehti
Numbers 2959 to 3276  Paul Reinman
Numbers 3277 to 3414  N. Cardy
Numbers 3415 to 4500  Bob Lubbers
Numbers 4501 to date  John Celardo

The Sunday Tarzan page has been drawn by Rex Maxon, Hal Foster, Burne Hogarth, Rubimone, Bob Lubbers and John Celardo.

It is interesting to note that the Tarzan cartoon strip was the first to introduce the now popular continued drama-adventure type story. Previous strips had all been of humorous nature.

It should be mentioned here that in June 1942 United Features released the JOHN CARTER OF MARS cartoon strip which was features by many Sunday newspapers. It was drawn by John Coleman Burroughs and ran for almost two years before Mr. Burroughs' war work made it necessary for him to discontinue the strip.

John Coleman also illustrated most of the John Carter episodes that appeared in THE FUNNIES magazine. He also illustrated the John Carter Big-Little-Book, which was adapted from JOHN CARTER AND THE GIANT OF MARS. Many other B&L items had covers by John Coleman. John and his brother, Hubert Burroughs, co-authored the stories that are listed below.

THE MAN WITHOUT A WORLD  T. Wonder June '39
THE LIGHTNING MEN  Thrilling Wonder Feb. '40
BOTTOM OF THE WORLD  Startling Sept. '41

John Coleman and his wife, Jane Ralston, also co-authored the story below.

HYBRID OF HORROR Thrilling Mystery July '40

John is also the author of an unpublished novel entitled LAIR OF THE FALCON.

THE BIG-LITTLE AND BETTER LITTLE BOOKS
Whitman Publishing Co., Racine, Wis.
Title and Illustrator

Tarzan of the Apes    J. Bennett
The Return of Tarzan  Rex Maxon
The Beasts of Tarzan  Rex Maxon
The Son of Tarzan    Rex Maxon
Tarzan and the Jewels of Opar Rex Maxon
Tarzan the Untamed    Rex Maxon
Tarzan the Terrible   Rex Maxon
Tarzan and the Golden Lion  Rex Maxon
Tarzan and the Ant Men  Rex Maxon
Tarzan, Lord of the Jungle Rex Maxon
Tarzan and the Lost Empire Rex Maxon
Tarzan, the Story of J. Weismuller Ill.
Tarzan Escapes
Tarzan the Fearless  movie
New Adventures of Tarzan  stills
Tarzan's Revenge  J. Bennett
The Tarzan Twins  J. Bennett
John Carter of Mars  J.C. Burroughs
Tarzan in the Land of Giant Apes J. Marsh
Tarzan and the Journey of Terror J. Marsh

MAGAZINES CONTAINING VARIOUS ERB ITEMS

Tarzan of the Apes (Feature Book #5) Dell
Tarzan and the Hidden Treasure (Famous Feature Stories) Dell
Tarzan and the Devil Ogre #134 Dell
Tarzan and the Fires of Tohr #161 Dell
Tarzan (Single Series #20) United Features Tarzan in COMICS ON PARADE Issues #1-#30
Tarzan in TIP-TOP COMICS* Issues #1-#60
Tarzan in SPARKLER COMICS Issues #1-#92
Tarzan in POPULAR COMICS Issues #30-#43
Tarzan in CRACKJACK FUNNIES Issues #16-#36
John Carter in THE FUNNIES Issues #50-#56
David Innes in HI-Spot COMICS Issue #2
Tarzan the Ape Man Screen Romances Apr.'32
Tarzan and His Mate Screen Romances Jan.'34
Capture of Tarzan Screen Romances Dec.'35
Tarzan Escapes Movie Stories Jan.'37
Tarzan's Magic Fountain Screen Stories Mar.'49
Tarzan's Peril Screen Stories Apr.'51
Tarzan and Little Konga Golden Digest #1

TARZAN RADIO PROGRAMS

During the 1930's Tarzan was heard on the radio in two series of programs, consisting of 364 fifteen-minute episodes. For the first series, James H. Pierce recreated his motion picture role, TARZAN AND THE GOLDEN LION, with Joan Burroughs Pierce as Jane. Following Pierce, in the second series, Carlton Kardell was the "voice" of Tarzan.

In Puerto Rico Tarzan is heard every afternoon at 5:15 P.M., Monday through Friday, on WKAQ, The El Mundo Broadcasting Co., in San Juan. The program is also broadcast throughout the rest of the island by various local stations.

If you live in Oakland, California you can hear the daily Tarzan adventure strip read dramatically over KLX each week day. The notice below appears above each Tarzan strip in the Oakland Tribune.

Commodore Productions informed us that: "The TARZAN radio series is presently being released for broadcast over the entire Don Lee Mutual Broadcasting System, comprised of some 45 stations in the Western States, and is heard each Thursday night at 8:00 P.M., F.S.T.

The role of TARZAN is played by an anonymous radio actor, with no air credit being given. This is due to the fact that we are striving to build the name TARZAN by, without having it identified with any other personality. In radio, as in the famous books, TARZAN is TARZAN.

The writer of the series is Bud Lesser, a well-known Hollywood scripter, and the entire production is supervised by Walter White, Jr. Music is composed and conducted by Albert Glasser.

As soon as TARZAN has earned its wings, so to speak, on the regional network under sponsorship of Dr. Rose Dog and Cat Foods, it will be offered to a national sponsor, and at that time will be heard coast-to-coast. It is now in the grooming stage that both "Hopalong Cassidy" and "The Clyde Batty Show" went through before they reached national stature."

The above correspondence was received late in 1951. Since then, on March 22, 1952, the Tarzan radio program made its debut on the CBS network and was heard Saturdays at 8:30 P.M., Central Standard Time, for sixty-five consecutive weeks. The program was sponsored by Dr. Rose Dog and Cat Foods.

A radio play, "Young Tarzan Goes" by Akamare Yamada, was broadcast in Japan late in May 1954.

The Commodore series was translated into Spanish and broadcast by Radio Programas Continental of Panama.

The following review of the Commodore series are by Maurice B. Gardner.

TARZAN AND THE COWARD
April 19, 1952

In the New York penthouse of William Dudley Pendler, a stockbroker, his nephew, Harry, and Scorrutti, a gambler, are discussing a gambling debt. The nephew speaks sinisterly of his good graces with his wealthy uncle, and that during a planned big game hunt to Africa, his uncle shall come with an "accident." Pendler presently joins their company, and further details are discussed of the proposed hunting trip. The wealthy stockbroker shamefully compares his only son's lack of manliness to his own youth, and when Billy joins them, he chides him openly. Plans are made that Billy shall be made to accompany the party on their big game hunt.

In the jungle, Tarzan comes upon Wappi with an arrow through its body, and he recognizes the arrow, and believes Torgo, a native boy who admired, had killed the antelope. Gunfire arrests his attention and he departs in its direction and comes upon a hunting party. Tarzan expresses his anger toward Pendler and his companions, but takes an interest in Billy who doesn't seem to belong with them.

Scorrutti, now known as Smith, chides Harry because of his seeming reluctance to shoot Mr. Pendler, but the nephew assures him he will do so when the time is more favorable.

Later, Tarzan rescues Billy from Sheeta, the leopard. The two become better acquainted, and Tarzan assures the youth's admission of not wishing to slaughter animals. Billy informs Tarzan of his fears for his father.

Tarzan returns to the camp with Billy in time to avert an "accident." The jungle lord decides to remain as a guest and guide. Tarzan takes Billy in hand and tells him much of the jungle and its inhabitants. After the magnificent "accident," the jungle lord finds his knife has been stolen. That night Tarzan intercepts Harry in an attack upon Mr. Pendler.

The next day Tarzan leads the party in search of rhinos. Harry and "Smith" make their treacherous plans. They come upon a band of rhinos. In the action that ensues, Harry is mortally attacked by Buto, and when Billy sees "Smith" about to fire at his father, he shoots the gambler. Mr. Pendler is amazed to learn through Tarzan that his own son shot and killed the gambler who had been about to shoot him. Mr. Pendler assures Billy he will never think he is a coward again.

The musical interludes are hauntingly beautiful throughout the program.

TARZAN AND THE FEMALE OF THE SPECIES
April 22, 1952

Tarzan is at peace with the jungle. He was remaining at the Punya village before returning to his seaside cabin. With a native girl he is joking about her pet parrot whom he names Bill. From her he learns a strange warrior wishes to see him. He enters... the jungle to find that Murivo seeks his assistance against the strange women who lure warriors to their death. Together they seek the Kahali stronghold.

The last outposts Tarzan is first to hear the strange music; but it is Murivo who succumbs to its spell. Fleet though Tarzan is, he fails to halt Murivo in his speedy flight.

The jungle lord doggedly follows the trail, and when night falls, tired and thirsty, he comes upon a well and drinks of the water, which is drugged. Then savage women come-upon him. He is bound with chains and carried to a cell where he is imprisoned. In the morning one of the jailers, by name of Margareta, tells him he is to go to the Trial Chamber with her and be judged by the queen. There Tarzan finds all present are women, and from Cohsuaella, their queen, he learns of their hatred for all men. A vote is taken to decide his fate, which is to be death upon the following day.

Back in his death cell, he learns that Murivo is in the cell adjoining his. From Margareta he learns much of the history of the Kahali, and of the instrument their queen had perfected to lure men to their death. From Igwana, who brings a frugal meal, he learns still more—and that the strange instrument also haunts men. When the girl departs, Tarzan and Murivo make their plans for escape. Murivo is successful in beggling Igwana to let him see the instrument, and he passes it to Tarzan. Stuffing their ears so as to be free of the affects of the instrument, Tarzan blows it. Margareta comes to his bidding. The jungle lord bade her to open their cells, and together he and Murivo escape from the fortress of the Kahali. Tarzan tells Murivo he will inform the territorial authorities of the Kahali, and let the law bring the city of "man killers" to justice.

Many moons later Tarzan returns to the Punya village, and their he learns that the parrot he had named Bill proved to me a female. He does not wish to take her with him, having had experience enough with the female of the species.

---

Tarzan and the Killer
May 3, 1952

Luanda is the setting for a prize fight between a black man and a white giant weighing some three hundred pounds and standing seven feet in height. An English cockney by name of Herbert Graves congratulates the giant, and thus a pact is formed of an unholy alliance that was to terrorize that part of Africa.

In his seashore cabin Tarzan was teaching We-beeta, (green bird) a parrot, when Captain Lawrence of the Government Police comes and informs him that he is wanted for savage beatings and wanton robbery and other crimes. The jungle lord and the captain go to Headquarters and Tarzan demands of the Major the particulars, and from him he learns of the crimes he was credited with.

While Tarzan languishes in a cell, Graves and the "killer" hide in a shack on the outskirts of Luanda. The "killer" is reluctant at such inactivity, but Graves advises him what is best.

Captain Lawrence visits Tarzan in his cell and advises him not to act rashly; but later the jungle lord pulls apart the bars of his cell and escapes with bullets flying all about him.

Meanwhile Graves tells his giant companion of a further murder that must be committed to further implicate Tarzan. An elderly chief who is near death and attended by his grand-daughter, is killed, and so another crime is charged to Tarzan.

In the jungle Tarzan spares a patrol from Sheeta, the leopard, only to learn the patrol was stalking him. The ape-man protests his innocence and bargains that he be given a chance to clear himself of the accused crime.

In Luanda Tarzan learns where the "killer" and his companion are to be found. Yumboya, a small native village, was in a state of terror, caused by the presence of the "killer" and Graves. There Captain Lawrence advises the jungle lord to be careful and begs him to allow the law to deal with the "killer" and his companion. But Tarzan is adamant in settling scores in his own way.

Entering a building where food and whiskey is to be had, Tarzan recognizes Graves as an old enemy. The "killer" attacks him and a terrific battle ensues with Tarzan emerging as the victor. Watching the tide of battle, Graves escapes into the jungle, but it is certain he will not get far alone, so he is pursued.

---

King of the Jungle and His Mate

From darkest Africa, land of enchantment, mystery and violence, comes Tarzan, the bronzed son of the jungle, hero of CBS Radio's weekly adventure series based on the famous Edgar Rice Burroughs' tales.
THE LAD AND THE LION
Selig Polyscope Co. 1917
Vivian Reed

TARZAN OF THE APES
First National 1918
John Emo Lincoln

THE ROMANCE OF TARZAN
Elmo Lincoln
First National 1918

THE OAKDALE AFFAIR
Reginald Denny
World Film Co. 1919

THE REVENGE OF TARZAN
Gene Pollar
Weiss Brothers 1920

THE SON OF TARZAN
P. Dempsey Tabler
First National 1920

THE ADVENTURES OF TARZAN
Elmo Lincoln
Weiss Brothers 1921

TARZAN AND THE GOLDEN LION
James H. Pierce
FBO-Gold Bond 1927

TARZAN THE MIGHTY
Frank Merrill
Universal 1928

TARZAN THE TIGER
Frank Merrill
Universal 1929-30

TARZAN THE APE MAN
Johnny Weissmuller
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer 1932

TARZAN THE EARRING
Buster Crabbe
Sol Lesser 1933

TARZAN AND HIS MATE
Johnny Weissmuller
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer 1934

THE NEW ADVENTURES OF TARZAN
Herman Brix
Burroughs-Tarzan 1935

TARZAN AND THE GREEN GODDESS
Herman Brix
Burroughs-Tarzan 1935-36

TARZAN ESCAPES
Johnny Weissmuller
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer 1936-37

THE LION MAN
Jon Hall
Paramount 1937

TARZAN’S REVENGE
Glenn Morris
Sol Lesser-20th Century Fox 1938

TARZAN FINDS A SON
Johnny Weissmuller
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer 1939

JUNGLE GIRL
Frances Gifford
Republic 1941

TARZAN’S SECRET TREASURE
Weissmuller
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer 1941-42

TARZAN’S NEW YORK ADVENTURE
Weissmuller
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer 1942

TARZAN TRIUMPHANT
Johnny Weissmuller
Sol Lesser-RKO 1943

TARZAN’S DESERT MYSTERY
Johnny Weissmuller
Sol Lesser-RKO 1943-44

TARZAN AND THE AMAZONS
Johnny Weissmuller
Sol Lesser-RKO 1945

TARZAN AND THE LEOPIARD WOMAN
Johnny Weissmuller
Sol Lesser-RKO 1946

TARZAN AND THE HUNTRESS
Johnny Weissmuller
Sol Lesser-RKO 1947

TARZAN AND THE MERMAIDS
Johnny Weissmuller
Sol Lesser-RKO 1948

TARZAN’S MAGIC FOUNTAIN
Lex Barker
Sol Lesser-RKO 1949

TARZAN AND THE SLAVE GIRL
Lex Barker
Sol Lesser-RKO 1950

TARZAN’S PERIL
Lex Barker
Sol Lesser-RKO 1951

TARZAN’S SAVAGE FURY
Lex Barker
Sol Lesser-RKO 1952

TARZAN AND THE SHE DEVIL
Lex Barker
Sol Lesser-RKO 1953

TARZAN’S HIDDEN JUNGLE
Gordon Scott
Sol Lesser-RKO 1954-55

During 1935-36 Edgar Rice Burroughs Inc. formed their own motion picture company under the name BURROUGHS-TARZAN PICTURES. The first films to be released by this company were "The New Adventures of Tarzan" and "Tarzan and the Green Goddess", which were filmed in Guatemala and starred Herman Brix. Later releases included "The Drag-Net" starring Rod La Roque, "Tundra" and "Three Wise Monks." In course of preparation when the company was dissolved were the following stories; "Murder At the Carnival" by Edgar Rice Burroughs, "The Mad King," "The Outlaw of Zemir" and "Tarzan, Lord of the Jungle." Mr. Burroughs planned to star Herman Brix in a whole new series of Tarzan films.

It is also interesting to note that M-G-M once planned to produce "The Monster Men" under the title "The Wild Man from Borneo" with Johnny Weissmuller as the star, "The Adventures of Chinese Tarzan" with Peng Sei in the title role was produced by the Hsin Hwa Motion Picture Co., Shanghai, China in 1940.

Following is a list of BURROUGHS-TARZAN ENTERPRISES films known to be released.

THE NEW ADVENTURES OF TARZAN
TARZAN AND THE GREEN GODDESS
THE DRAG-NET
TUNDRA
THE PHANTOM OF SANTA FE
THREE WISE MONKS

Some fans claim to have seen THE MUCKER on the screen, starring George O’Brien. In answer to my inquiry ERB wrote: "Insofar as I know, THE MUCKER was never made into a movie. If it was, somebody owes me a lot of money." It is my believe that in the film entitled THE ROUGHNECK, which starred George O’Brien, these fans have mistaken a similar theme for THE MUCKER.

Also, many letters have been received from fans insisting they remember Joe Bonomo in a film as Tarzan. Mr. Bonomo offers the following explanation:

"Many years ago when I was starring in pictures in Hollywood, I was under contract to Universal Pictures. When I began my career I was a top-notch stunt man and excelled in all kinds of stunting, especially rope climbing, trapeze work, etc. For many years I doubted for some of the outstanding stars in Hollywood. Later on, I was starred in many pictures in my own right, such as THE GREAT CIRCUS MYSTERY, PERILS OF THE WILD, THE IRON MAN, COLISEE COWBOY, etc. I was signed to do a Tarzan serial for Universal and a lot of exploitation and publicity about it got around. At this time I was finishing a serial for Universal called PERILS OF THE WILD (captioned from the classic SWISS FAMILY ROBERTSON) and Louise Lorraine was my co-star and leading lady in this and other productions. It was in reality a Tarzan film, but the actual name of the character was not Tarzan. In other words, it was a jungle film and I worked with animals and spent considerable time in the trees, etc. At the finish of this I was to go into the Tarzan serial, but towards the end of the picture, while performing a stunt, I broke my leg and severely injured my sacro-iliac and, as the film was scheduled for immedi-
The film listed as THE REVENGE OF TARZAN, is the one usually referred to as THE RETURN OF TARZAN. The film was produced under the latter title, but it was released and shown as THE REVENGE OF TARZAN.

TARZAN ON STAGE
TARZAN OF THE APES Broadhurst Theatre N.Y. Produced by George Broadhurst 1921

Cast
Lionel Glenister John Crattan
Alice Mosley Lawrence Marks
Howard Kyle Minna Gale Haynes
John F. Morrissey Greta Kemble Cooper
Edward Stillward Boyd Clarke
Alfred Arno Forrest Robinson
Ethel Dwyer Ford Chester
Ronald Adair as Tarzan

TELEVISION PROGRAMS

TARZAN OF THE APES, the original Elmo Lincoln film, and THE LION MAN are the only ERB motion pictures that have been shown on television. Burroughs always switched out the TV clause when he contracted to sell motion picture rights. ERB, Inc., recently sold Sol Lesser, the Tarzan film producer, the rights to film a Tarzan TV series. Gordon Scott, the current screen Tarzan, will star. The Tarzan television show is already being sold to sponsors, and without even a pilot film in the can. An unprecedented procedure; but such is the fame of the ape-man, that sponsors are willing to buy the show without seeing an audition print.

TARZANA, CALIFORNIA
Out of respect for Edgar Rice Burroughs the founder of Tarzana, the Merchants of that city and some of the adjoining communities, closed their doors and observed a period of quiet for several minutes soon after the author's death.

At the regular meeting of the Council of the City of Los Angeles, held March 21, 1950, a resolution was adopted that the City Council adjourn in memory of Edgar Rice Burroughs in recognition of the services rendered to the City of Los Angeles through the medium of his literary works and civic activities. A leather-bound certified copy of this resolution was presented to the family of Edgar Rice Burroughs.

ERB Inc., will continue to function, managed, as before, by Ralph Rothmund.

Plans for unpublished and unfinished stories are as yet indefinite.

TARZAN, TEXAS
Yes, this place was named after Mr. Burroughs' Tarzan. Mr. Tant Lindsay built the first store here about 30 years ago. He named the town and post office Tarzan.

This is a small town with two churches, a 4 teacher school, barber shop, blacksmith shop, help-u-self laundry, 3 stores, a gin mill and the post office.

There is rich farming land and Ranches surrounding the town.

Tarzan is in Martin County, 20 miles NW of Stanton on the Andrews highway. 30 miles from Andrews and 35 miles from Midland, Tex. The Tarzan Marketing Assn. is also here. They have an office and bring in thousands of Mexican Nationals, by contract, to gather the crops each year. Last fall this office received mail for about fourteen hundred Nationals.

Mrs. Nellie McMorries, Postmaster Tarzan, Texas

THE TARZAN MAGAZINE
Dell Publishing Co., 10 West 33rd St., N.Y.

The Tarzan magazine originally appeared as a "one-shot" publication for two issues, TARZAN AND THE DEVIL OGRE and TARZAN AND THE FIRES OF TOHR. It became a bi-monthly with the Jan. 1948 issue, featuring TARZAN AND THE WHITE SAVAGES OF VARI, and remained a bi-monthly until the July 1951 issue, when it went monthly, which it has remained to date.

TARZAN'S JUNIOR ANNUAL
Dell Publishing Co., 10 West 33rd St., N.Y.

This is a 25¢ Annual publication, somewhat larger in size than the monthly magazine. It features wildlife covers, stories, games, cutouts, etc. Most of the artwork is handled by Jesse Marsh, the illustrator of the monthly publication, but the work of Russ Manning and Tony Sgroi also appears. There have been four issues to date, 1952, '53, '54 and '55, with the '56 issue now in preparation. Russ Manning illustrates the lead story in the '56 Annual. Following is a list of the feature stories that have appeared in the Annuals.

TARZAN RETURNS TO GRAN #1-1952
TARZAN IN THE VALLEY OF TOWERS #2-1953
TARZAN AND THE PIRATES STRONGHOLD #3-1954
TARZAN DEFENDS THE WALLS OF CATHANE #4-1955
TARZAN AND THE VIKINGS #5-1956

JOHN CARTER OF MARS MAGAZINE
Dell Publishing Co., 10 West 33rd St., N.Y.

The John Carter magazine appeared as three "one-shot" issues. Jesse Marsh illustrated all three issues. An attempt was made to modernize John Carter by making him a soldier who is killed in action during the Korean war. The plots were adapted from PRINCESS, GODS, and a brief part of WARLORD. The titles and issues follow.

THE PRISONER OF THE THANKS #375
THE BLACK PIRATES OF OMEAN #437
THE TYPANT OF THE NORTH #486

The above issues are not dated. Numbers refer to the Dell "one-shot" numbers.

TARZAN AT MARCH OF COMICS

K.K. Publications is a subsidiary of the Dell Publishing Co. The MARCH OF COMICS is a small, 5x7½, magazine distributed by Sears, Roebuck & Co., and other stores, as "give-away" advertisements. It features a famous character each issue. Three issues, that I know of, have been TARZAN numbers. There may have been others. Marsh illustrated the first two numbers, and Russ Manning the third.

TARZAN AND CHIEF MITEY-POO #62
TARZAN AND THE DEATH SPELL #98
TARZAN AND THE HORNS OF THE KUDU #114

Fans knowing of other Burroughs items can be of assistance in correcting and adding to the foregoing and future listings by informing the Editor of same.

Former "Lion Man" Jon Hall returned to the jungle in his own TV series, RAMAR OF THE JUNGLE. Hall is now producing ENIGHT OF THE SOUTH SEAS and ST. FRANCIS DRAKE for TV ... TUNDRA, the old Burroughs-Tarzan Enterprise film, has been re-released under the title AFRICAN PURY ... Maureen O'Sullivan returned to a-pee-antics in BONZO GOES TO COLLEGE. She recently completed a TV pilot entitled ROOM-MATE .... Ex-Jane, Julie Bishop, co-stars with Bob Cummings in MY HERO for TV .... A TV show for Johnny Sheffield about BANTU is in progress. His LORD OF THE JUNGLE movie is his final Bomba film ... Sabu stars in JARUGU, a South American Tarzan, based on Rex Beach's yarn.

...Jim has it that Dick Dare, famous star of Ed Wheelan Productions, will come out of retirement to star in a new Tarzan series.

JOHNNY WEISSMULLER

Recently I stopped in to see one of Weissmuller's JUNGLE JIM epics playing at a Minnesota theatre. Frankly, I did not expect to enjoy it, but found it to be surprisingly good. Not much plot, but packed with plenty of action and derrim-do. And Johnny was down-right vocal-toscing dialogue and villains about with equal ease, plus doing away with old Numa in an exciting fight sequence. The theatre was well filled, and, on the way out, I stopped to talk with the Manager. "They don't make enough of these Jungle Jims," he said. "I play them all, then re-run the old ones. They are better box-office than the Bombas and even Tarzans, unless it's an old Weissmuller re-release. The kids just won't accept the new Tarzan. To them, Jungle Jim is Tarzan. I'll play a Jungle Jim in preference to a western any time. They are good family pictures."

I thought about this after I left the theatre and it occurred to me that Weissmuller has been Tarzan to two generations of movie goers and in spite of the fact that he has not made a Tarzan film in almost eight years, his popularity has not diminished and he is still Tarzan to most fans. Both Sol Lesser and MGM continue to re-release his old Tarzans, Lesser just issued TARZAN'S BATTLE MOUNTAIN & TARZAN TRIUMPHS for the third round while MGM brings back the very first and third Weissmuller pix, TARZAN THE APEMAN & TARZAN ESCAPES, (the second and best Weissmuller vehicle is unable to get past today's blue-noses). And does all this capitalizing or Johnny's old Tarzan films hurt his present endeavors? Not in the least. He continues to turn out Jungle Jim films serially, for which he reaps, on a percentage basis, something like $200,000 a year for 27 days work. And now he is invading TV with his own filmed JUNGLE JIM series while producers Pine and Thomas are preparing to screen his life story. From 1952 to 1948 Johnny made 12 Tarzan films and from 1948 thru 1954 he has turned out 15 Jungle Jims, the latest with a Burroughs-like title, THE MOON MEN.

Even a bad Tarzan picture makes money for its producer, but the lack of action in recent films has deftly hurt the series. Now that movies have the competition they deserve in television. Tarzan films should expend, and I don't mean that fraud, cinemacope. They should not be low budget "quickies" aimed at the Saturday matinee gang. They should be well plotted, wild animal, darkest Africa, slam-bang, grand-with-action, once-a-year circus affairs! Just good Tarzan pictures--in technicolor. The fact that the new Tarzans are not accepted by the public is not the fault of the actor, but of the producer, who insists all his Tarzans imitate Weissmuller. We fans want new Tarzan in a new version of Tarzan, or better yet, ERB's original version; There is only one Weissmuller--still King of the Jungle cinema! in Moscow which was preceded by a film censor’s note supplying the missing link between Karl Marx and the apes. The censor explains that Tarzan is supposed to be a child of an English peer lost in a shipwreck but he has been reared in a healthy proletarian environment of apes. Tarzan is uncorrupted by bourgeois culture until he meets an American explorer and his beautiful daughter.

---COMIC COVERUP---

Catholic action groups have begun a special campaign against American comic strip girls who wear two-piece wet suits. Now the heroines in such comics as Li'l Abner, Tarzan, and Abbie and Slats (Italian favorites) must wear modest bikinis.

THE GOLDEN AGE (concluded from page 82)

interested in fantasy or sf, but he indulgently allowed me to purchase such with my own money. On birthdays and Christmases I would ask for, and get, at least one ERB, usually a John Carter or Tarzan, but occasionally there would be The Moon Maid or The Mysterious Island.

The point is, if my father had had the ERB collection I now possess, I would have blithered with joy, blown a tender young blood vessel with ecstasy. But my son is being raised in the heyday of the comics. He, in common with most of his kind in this neo-Noachian age, is being flooded beneath a deluge of crud that will last longer than forty days because there seems to be no end to paper, whereas every rain can last only so long.

(Lest I be accused of being partial, I hasten to add that some comics are quite good.)

My son, instead of living in the golden age, is surrounded by brass. Brass is notoriously easier to get than gold and is far noisier. Not that I mind the presence of brass. I can ignore it and reach for the gold.

Unfortunately, most people don’t. And most can’t see the gold— which they would naturally prefer— because brass glitters in their eyes and they can’t see beyond it. My son looks at the John Carter, the David Innes, the Moon Maid, the Land That Time Forgot, the Tarzan books. There is an interested but dubious expression on his face. Then, after leafing through their pages— which contain so many words— he turns to the comics— full of pictures and their swiftly-read balloons. I am somewhat impatient, because I want him to know the joys I knew, because he does have the type of imagination that revels in the things that throb in ERB.

Yet, I can’t force them on him, and I wouldn’t want to.

Time passed, as it always did and does. I resigned myself to letting dust gather and dim the golden treasury of Burroughs.

Then, one bright day in the midst of many grey, I noticed one thing that gives me hope. Among all the hundreds, perhaps the thousands, of comics he has read, he remembers none over six months old. Except two, which he read at least eight months ago. Both these are John Carter comics, ERB translated. He still talks of these, and I am gently guiding him back to those dusty clumses, gently, gently, for I hope his interest in the real world, when he, too, knows the delights, raptures, and terrors that I, as a child and budding adolescent, found in the mythmaker Edgar Rice Burroughs.

THE PASSENGER (concluded from page 85)

rations had been made in the event of it actually happening, but now the plans seemed pitifully inadequate, and the men wavered on that edge of bad temper with which they tried to disguise their panic.

The throne stood at the TV screen which eliminated the necessity of sitting-up for the surface, from the caverns carved in the age-old pumice of the Moon’s crust. The scene reflected none of the hectic activity inside, showing only the grey expanse of dust that stretched to the opposite side of the crater, broken here and there by the flower-shaped spots where the rocket-exhausts had fused the dust into glassy islands.

"Here they come," murmured Kelly, as a spot half-a-mile out on the plain suddenly billowed dust. The cloud greyed until it almost obscured the ship, riding its braking rockets down to the surface. From the airlock, out of sight to the left of the screen, streaked one of the small open "moon-bugs", atomic-powered cousin to the earth-bound jeep, which were used for most transportation purposes outside. It disappeared into the cloud of floating pumice.

The thrum began to mutter impatiently at the delay when the phone next to the screen buzzed insistenty, and at the same time the reflected scene disclosed the larger, closed car with the telescoped airlock, with which they transferred freight and other items which would be harmed by vacuum, following the "bug" toward the hidden ship.

The general answered the phone brusquely, without ceremony, then with a grunt returned the receiver to its cradle. With a quick jerk of his head, he motioned the way toward the door. He ignored the questions of the other two, and they had lapsed into a puzzled silence as they stepped into the large unloading cavern just inside the huge airlocks leading outside.

Finally, a red light blinked on, indicating that the car had entered the lock, and there was a thin whine as the compressors brought the air pressure inside the lock up to a point where the doors could be opened. The general stood, a half-eager, half-taut expression on his face, with the other two officers inside the rail of the fenced-off area just outside the elevator, as the door of the car opened.

A grinning uniformed man stepped out, waving. Richards recognized him as the pilot of the earlier moments later two more— the crew — had followed him. The colonel— impatient— turned to the general. "But, where—" then paused again as he caught sight of the stunned expression on Major Grant’s face as he stood clutching the railing as if it were his sanity. He swung back toward the car where a towering, imposing green figure with four arms was just straightening up. But his yelp of joy was cut short by Kelly.

"My God" breathed the general, "A Thark!"

113
In Memoriam

OTTO E. LINKERHOLT
Born Feb. 6, 1889
Died June 27, 1952