THEY SAID IT
COULDN'T BE DONE

COULDN'T BE DONE

COULDN'T BE DONE

COULDN'T BE DONE

THEY said you couldn't make a magazine as great as FAMOUS MONSTERS.

THEY said it would only last one issue, the PTA (Peasants of Transylvania Association) would stop it.

THEY said, "How could you top it? Where would you get photos for the second issue greater than the first? How could the pictures in #3 surpass those in #2? Would there be enough new material for a 4th number?" (Well, just watch for the sensational Specials, Exclusives and Scoops in #5!)

THEY said, "You'd be swamped by cheap, inferior imitations."

THEY talk too much. THEM! What do they know about IT?

YOU — YOU are the ones we listen to, YOU thirsting thousands upon thousands who can't get enough Ghoul-Aid, Choke-late Sodas, Vanilla Milk-Shocks and Coca-Dracolas to soothe your parched throats till the glorious day (today) when you discover the new issue of FAMOUS MONSTERS on sale! Drink ye deep! Quench your thirst! Every page guaranteed to make your mouth water or your tongue replaced free of charge.

DEAR MONSTER

YOU'LL NEVER GUESS HOSE PICTURE THIS IS

My Daddy had this picture of himself taken when he was a teenager. When he grew up my Daddy wrote THE ILLUSTRATED MAN, DARK CARNIVAL and other books and movies. My Daddy is Ray Bradbury.

RAMONA BRADBURY

W. Los Angeles, Calif.

● And a mighty handy Daddy to have around the house, especially at bed-time storytelling time! Incidentally, he hasn't changed a bit since that foto was taken. Nor, for that matter, has your editor...that's me in his hand!

--Your Ack

FOR GROAN-UPS ONLY

● Kids, this is the only small portion of the whole issue that probably won't interest you. It's addressed to parents and educators. Statement from Publisher: Mr. William Hotin, a high school teacher of Jaffrey, New Hamp., takes my Editor to task for producing insidious trash, recommends he search his conscience instead of his pocket-book before continuing to contribute to the moral degradation of our culture. While appreciating Mr. Hotin's sincere concern with molding the minds and mores of modern youth, I feel he is misguided regarding FAMOUS MONSTERS as a menacing factor in the mental health of present and future America. The salary I pay my altruistic editor is scarcely enough to influence him to abandon the principles of a lifetime, and Forrest Ackerman replies:

"If FAMOUS MONSTERS had existed when I was 8 years old, I'm sure my dearly beloved Grandmother--and she was the last of the angels--would have bought it for me regularly. Among my fondest memories of her are those of her reading Ghost Stories magazine to me and taking me (my Grandfather holding my other hand) to THE PHANTOM OF THE OPERA, THE CAT AND THE CANARY, etc. Before condemning this magazine, Mr. Hotin, I feel you must prove that Lon Chaney Sr. perverted his life portraying monsters; that Edgar Allan Poe should never have picked up a pen; that Mary Shelley loosed a greater evil on the world than a fictional Frankenstein; that Universal Studios should be ashamed of itself for having built a reputation with DRACULA, THE MUMMY, etc; and that Good News Productions, principal producers of religious movies in the USA, had no business forming a sibling organization to produce THE BLOB, nor a local (Hollywood) branch of the Lutheran Church to sponsor the filming of GRAVE-ROBBERS (now PLAN 9) FROM OUTER SPACE. Quantitatively, a single monster movie must surely influence many times over the number of high school students our magazine does. We but humorously reflect on what already exists in movie monsterdom."

Mr. Hotin, my Editor (at 42) has never smoked or drunk in his life, has no police record, is a peace-promoting Esperantist, has received a "Hugo" (the science fiction field's highest award), is regarded as a hero in the home of Ray "Fahrenheit 451" Bradbury (who did the screenplay of MOBY DICK and IT CAME FROM OUTER SPACE) by Mr. Bradbury's monster-loving daughters, and, to cap the climax, was recently invited to lecture on sci-fi AND monster movies to the student body of a Los Angeles Jr. High! The Defense rests.

--James Warren

It is a bad day for your editor when the mailman doesn't draw up in a hearse and deliver a whole casketful of letters saying how FM makes its would-be imitators look sick, but we can't give prizes for who praises us the most. So, keep your criticisms, witticisms and suggestions for improvement coming; and publishable pix are welcome as well. For greatest assistance to Dr. Acula this time, First Prize goes to DENIS GIFFORD; Second to KLAUS UNBEHAUN; and Third to GIOVANNI SCOGNAMILLO. They have each received an enviable selection of monster stills. The First Prize for Best Letter next time will be a copy of the actual movie script of DOCTOR DOOM, The Invisible Monster--presented to some lucky FM reader compliments of the co-authors, Ron Kenner and Gene Coughlin.--Forrest J. Ackerman

HOW TO UNMAKE A MONSTER?

Your article on "How to Become a Monster in 6 Easy Lessons" worked surprisingly well--now please rush into print an article on how to become normal again! Better make it in 3 easy lessons, 'cuz us monsters ain't noted for our brains.

MIKE EDWARDS

Westminster, Colo.

● The way I heard it, you monsters are noted for other people's brains!--Ed.

THE MASK OF ACKER-MANCHU

How can I get one of those frightful Forrest J. Ackerman masks?

DAVID STENITT

Bay Shore, N.Y.

● If FJA knew how to get rid of his without losing face, I'm sure he'd give it to you,

ALL ABOUT ZACH IN THIS ISSUE!

HE'S ONLY KIDDING, MA

I think your magazine is the best one in the world. My Mother thinks different, but that doesn't matter much--she is just an ordinary human being.

STEVE BURNS

THEY AX FOR GAY YOUNG BLADE

Dear Monster or an Editor, Sorry, we mean Editor of MONSTER: My girl friends and I are sci-fi horror fans and we saw "Night of the Blood Bees" and thot it was a honey of a picture. Since we usually hear all about actors, actresses, directors, etc. we were wondering if you could write something about the fiendish author, his background, the whole bit. Maybe you could even show his picture. Hope so!!!

THE SHE MONSTERS OF Los Angeles, Calif.

KNIGHT OF THE BLOOD BEAST

● Just see any FBI poster for foto of Martin Varno. (In this case FBI means Fiend-Beast Investigators.) Seriously, here is a picture of the handsome, talented, 22-year-old independently broke genius whose new sci-fi film-script is "The Brother." Don't all devour him at once, ghouls!--Ed.

ED, ANY RELATION TO FRANKEN? I must have been hanging upside-down from my rafter for too long, for I find I missed your first issue. To solve this problem why not publish your mag monthly, semi-monthly, weekly or daily already? More, more, more. You're super-ghoul-ossal.

EDWARD GOLDSTEIN

Montreal, Canada

● FM has now been stepped up to quarterly appearance. Don't you think every 7 days would make one weak?--Ed.

STORK STARING MAD

This is the firstime I have ever written to a monster on a scroll and this stylus was given to me personally by Pharoah. Really, to tell you the truth, I am not as old as you think; the pterodactyl dropped me in 1947.

CHRISTINA R.D. VANCHERI

Pittsburgh, Penna.

SOME MONSTERS HAVE ALL THE LUCK!

I am writing a research paper on the origin of such figures as Count Dracula, werewolves and Frankenstein, and your articles have been a great help. If this information in my report is good enough to draw an A, well, up to now the people in this town have been slightly on the ghoulish side, and this should rock the balance over to our side!

PAULA EBERSOLE

Elizabethtown, Penna.

THIS IS A READER?

● Ah, Paula, if I were wolf I would send for you to come to Horrorwood and research my life story at second-hand (my first hand is chained to the typewriter) but, alas, I am only bats.--Dr. Acula

Cleveland, Ohio

● Gee whiskers, why'd Gillette 'em grow so long?--Ed.

BLACKBEARD JUNGLE

ONLY ROBOTS STEEL

When I saw the latest, greatest issue of FM, I got a funny feeling where my heart used to be. I extended my right tentacle, snatched it up and ran from the drugstore --I ran because I couldn't wait to get home to read it, I ran because my Mother told me to get back to the graveyard before midnite, but mainly I ran because I didn't pay any money.

JIMMY FLOOD

● To what punitiveary would you like your life subscription sent?--Ed.

MICKEY MOUSE CLUB?

#3 cover best yet---excellent gastronomical, words can't describe it. (How about ghastli-gnomical?--Ed.) I love your mag. It's doing a lot to spread monsterism. Incidentally, I think editor Ackerman looks a lot like Walt Disney-I hope he will make as much Money from Monsters as Disney did from Mickey Mouse.

T. DRACULA GRANTON

Oxford, Conn.

● Thanks, friend. Watch for my productions of "Slurping Beauty," "Devilly Crockett," "Zombi, Son of Bambi," "Peter and the Werewolf," "The Abominable Snow White" and, in hictory screamophonic sound, "Old YELLER."--Forrest "Dizny" Ackerman.

—Today, with my evil eye, I pierced my Crystal with a penetrating stare. In fact, so deep did my eye stab that it almost cracked the glass, and I withdrew it just in time. Have you ever heard a Crystal bawl?

But just before I fished my eyeball out of the crystal bowl, here are some of the shocking revelations I saw:

monsters sick?

Is the cycle of monsters pix waning? I'm alarmed. Why, I could foresee only ten new films with Monster in the title, and one re-titled revival. Of course there are plenty of new movies planned with Brain, Beast, Blood, etc., in the title—but only ten with Monster? It's murder!

Write to your Kongressman today and demand more Monster movies. Warn him the following won't last you very long, and if you don't get more! more!! MORE!!! you're liable to turn into a MONSTER yourself!

(Or has it already happened?)

Anyway, here is FAMOUS MONSTERS' genuine list of Marquee Monsters. Under no circumstances disclose this list to anyone other than a bonafide member of the Famous Monsters Club. Memorize this list, and then burn your brain.

eenie, meanie, minie, monsters

MONSTER ASSASSIN! That's the first production scheduled from the new Kirkham-Reed International Corpse — oops — Corp. Willard Kirkham, the producer, has been interested in science fiction for some time, and plans other weird science pictures.

"Well, what are YOU staring at? We can't ALL be handsome like my friends the Mummy and Frankenstein!"
says Rondo Hatton.

Head Man in this Laboratory is Nostradamus, no less! He was the amazing Medieval prophet, but there doesn't seem to be much profit in losing one's head as he has done in THE MAN WITHOUT A BODY.

Run-Tin-Can, the robotman from TARGET - EARTH! Alas, poor Tin; foiled again!

MONSTER OF PIEDRAS BLANCAS — this is one of the masterpieces of Jack Kevan, creator of the Mole Men, the Monster on the Campus. This Island Earth Mutant and numerous others (for article on Jack see "Monsters of Tomorrow" in FM #3).

MONSTER FROM MARS—this is Wyatt Ordung's 3D picture, ROBOT MONSTER, being re-released under this new title in 2D.

THE KIVA MONSTER—a horror based on Hopi Indian legends.

MOON MONSTER—is something sinister lurking on the Dark Side of our earth's own satellite?

BROTHER MONSTER—a perhaps next-to-final title for Martin Varno's technicolorful screenplay which he calls "10 times better than my first, NIGHT OF THE BLOOD BEAST."

THE MONSTER—the just plain monster from 1899 discovered by Lou "I Bury the Living" Garfinkle.

THE LITTLE MONSTER—That Swift's original idea, and an ideal plot in which to introduce his own son, "The Boy Who Became A Monster" (see foto feature in FM #3).

THE 2-HEADED MONSTER — like the Muties say, "Two heads are better than none."

THE INVISIBLE MONSTER — see our "Dear Monster . . ." dept. for info on how YOU may win and read the entire script of this story in advance of its production.

And last, but far from least, that amazing beast The Metamorph created by Stuart J. Byrne for—MONSTER IN MY BLOOD!

beastly, eh wot?

So much for the monsters, so what's new in beasts, vampires, werewolves and what-nots?

Well, there'll be a BEAST FROM BLOOD ISLAND. And CHOOKNA — THE BEAST FROM WORLD'S END. And GIGANTIS — he's the brother of Godzilla, who meets up with a perfectly charming, er, alarming new slaymate.

There'll be a dandy dragon in EVE AND THE DRAGON, the Jim Nicholson Special that will be filmed in Superama and drama-color in the mysterious Matto Grosso jungle.

AFFAIRS OF A VAMPIRE will be co-billed with THE LEECH, both Universal-International, the latter not to be confused with ATTACK OF THE GIANT LEECHES, an American-International title.

And it will take Skin-'em'scope to properly cover THE ALLIGATOR PEOPLE.

Grim and brrr it! (From the 1929 production THE THREE PASSIONS.)

They say he got this way when FAMOUS MONSTERS

things are buzzing

THE FLY was such a block-buzzer that the inevitable has happened: there's to be, oops, be a RETURN OF THE FLY.

But, as Shakespeare once said (after reading a copy of FM): "To bee or not to bee, that is the question"; and the answer seems to be THE WASP WOMAN, which is the new title for INSECT WOMAN, announced here list issue. Susan Cabot, whom you will remember as the beautiful brunet star of THE SAGA OF THE VIKING WOMEN AND THEIR VOYAGE TO THE WATERS OF THE GREAT SEA SERPENT, plays the waspish character.

Things will no doubt be humming at the bucks-office too when it's hit by THE HIDEOUS ROCK 'N' ROLL CREATURE. Or THE CRAZY QUILT TERROR, suggested by David Grinnell's short story, "The Rag Thing."

mish-mash

There's a perfect mish-mash coming up in the Battle of the Masks.

THE MASK OF THE RED DEATH will be produced by Alex Gordon.

Allied Artists plans a plain one called just THE MASK.

Boris Petroff has registered the title MASK OF TERROR.

There's to be a new BEHIND THE MASK, not to be confused with the Boris Karloff BEHIND THE MASK of 1932 nor the BEHIND THE MASK of 1946 with Kane Richmond nor Peter Lorre in THE FACE BEHIND THE MASK!

THE MASK OF MELOG—a Golemesque idea by Weaver (Frankenstein from Space) Wright.

one's company, two's a cloud!

A Cloud of Death is bad enough to contend with when it's high in the sky like THE FLYING EYE but when it splits in two (like THE TROLLENBERG TERROR) and starts

When his hair's a disgrace and his face is half gone And this is poor Dorian some years later on — down the mountainside for you — that's the time to head for the nearest exit! Actually, these are both the same picture — "Eye" is the American title and "Trollenberg" the British. It's about Forrest Tucker as a science investigator for UNO who discovers that a space-creature is hidden in a radioactive cloud atop a Swiss Alp. This "thing," which is like an airborne octopus, can only survive where it's extremely cold. The Thing thrives on mountain-climbers and villagers, beheading a couple and possessing two others. Those who become mad puppets under the baleful influence of The Flying Eye eventually have to be destroyed. Threat to the existence of the creature is the presence of a psychic young woman whose mind reaches out and uncovers the secret existence of the cloud-hidden monster. There is a thrilling climax as the tentacled terror, aware that its life is in danger, moves down the mountainside to destroy its enemies in the Observatory — only to be met by a plane dropping fire bombs.

nicholson's new ones

No issue of FAMOUS MONSTERS would be complete, of course, without announcements from American-International Pix, where prexy Jim Nicholson is always busy fixing to offer further fantastic flickers. As a followup to THE SCREAMING SKULL he'll display THE HEADLESS GHOST; and since he didn't quite get rid of the world in THE DAY THE WORLD ENDED, he'll aim at total destruction in END OF THE WORLD.

Nicholson has bought Jack Williamson's great werewolf story, WOLVES OF DARKNESS. Some of its exciting chapter heads are: "The Tracks in the Snow," "The Pack that Ran by Moonlight," "The Wolf and the Woman," "A Strange Homecoming," "The Machine in the Cellar," "The Temple of Crimson Gloom," "The Creeping Darkness" and Spawn of the Dark Dimension! Wow! Rush this one, Jim!

"This summer we'll have an unusual one out," Jim tells us, "WORLD WITHOUT WOMEN." His company is also preparing to do THE WAR OF 1999, Richard Wilson's GIRLS FROM PLANET 5, and a monster-comedy called TAKE ME TO YOUR LEADER. But the very biggest announcement of all is (and I'll let Jim Nicholson tell it to you in his own words): "A few months ago many of you read in the supplement to your Sunday paper a special fiction-prediction feature by Jules Verne called IN THE YEAR 2889. HG Wells' great THINGS TO COME only dealt with the wars and wonders of the next 100 years, but Verne's prophecy goes Pretty Fritzie! You remember Fritz, Colin Clive's active little helper in THE BRIDE OF FRANKENSTEIN?

Don't look now, Mister, but your face is falling apart. (That's Cloyce Bump's body that Eric Jason is snatching.)

nearly 1000 years into the future. To give this exciting Verne property the scope it deserves we are going to film it in Cinema-Scope and color. We hope it will be as successful as 20,000 LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA."

Although no decisions have been reached at the time this issue of FM goes to press, it is known that American-International is also studying for possible production such works as Ray Cummings' "Brigands of the Moon," "Interplanetary Hunter" by Arthur K. Barnes, "Power Metal" by Stuart J. Byrne and the late E. Everett Evans' "Alien Minds."

war of the golem's

Golem. Golem, who's got the Golem?

"First of all," you may ask, "who or what is this Golem?" Well, it was a legendary android (human-like robot), said to have been constructed in Czechoslovakia during the Middle Ages. The Germans made a film about it in 1914. They liked it so well that they did it over again just 6 years later. Then in 1937 the French collaborated with the Czechs and filmed a version. A few years ago the Czechs did a version all their own.

And now there's considerable confusion over who'll do version #5, for 3 separate companies are all anxious to do so: the Mirisch Co., Frankel-Davis Co. and Galaxy Pictures! Galaxy is George Pal's organization, and your editor has been assisting him so much with research on the Golem that I doubt he will want to abandon the project. But Frankel-Davis say they are prepared to spend $3,000,000 to turn THE GOLEM into a widescreen-color-stereophonic smash hit, and the Mirisches also have big plans.

Yes, we know what you little golems would recommend: make 'em all—the more Golems the gorier!

title changes

THE BRAIN EATERS was what finally wound up on the marquee after being variously referred to previously in FM's pages as The Brain Snatchers, Keepers of the Earth and just plain The Keepers.

The Last Woman on Earth has been changed to WORLD WITHOUT WOMEN.

Insect Woman is now THE WASP WOMAN.

"Kiss me, you mad fool!" cries this high school beauty in BLOOD OF DRACULA, but our reluctant hero would appear to prefer blonds.

IT — THE TERROR FROM BEYOND SPACE sticks his tongue out at his teacher and starts to bawl. Seems Creature Teacher caught him in class reading a horror magazine about people and took away his only copy of FRIGHTENING HUMANS OF EARTH.

It looks as if Tor Johnson & Vampira have just seen the cover of the latest FM.

"C'mon-a my house," invites Actor Robert Clarke in this specially posed picture for FM. "You'll like it there — it's the first home in Horrorwood to have an air-conditioned dungeon." (You can see Bob in THE SUN DEMON.)

LOU COSTELLO AND HIS 30-FOOT BRIDE was formerly known as "The Secret Bride of Candy Rock."

Jerome Bixby's The Sea Demon has become THE DEVIL FROM THE DEEP.

FIEND FROM THE FUTURE is the retitling of the Larry Maddock-Weaver Wright collaboration formerly known as It Came to Kill.

carradine the cosmic

John Carradine is back to scare us, this time arriving from over-crowded space in a mysterious ball-shaped object. As THE COSMIC MAN his object is to study us Earthians and remove our gravity altogether if not satisfied with his findings. Some of the time he's invisible, other times he's vaguely seen as a ghost-like wraith. He destroys several million dollars worth of laboratory equipment at one point. An arc-light almost gets him at another. See THE COSMIC MAN and discover his fate for yourself.

We've seen a few scenes from WHITE ZOMBIE, do you have any from ZOMBIES ON BROADWAY?—ZHAN DARK & HAITI LaMARR, Zanzibar. (Yes, here's one, in starey-orphonic sound.)

FOR IT!

When A. Merritt's "Burn, Witch, Burn!" was filmed (as THE DEVIL DOLL) I remember they had an Incredible Shrinking Girl in it. I'd like to see one of those scenes again.—G. GORDON DEWEY. (Here she is, Gordon, shrinking in terror from the late Henry B. Walthal.)

I remember Lon Chaney and Charles Laughton's interpretation of THE HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME but missed Anthony Quinn's. Could you show his makeup? —HUGO VICTOR. (Isn't Tony's face the Quint-essence of horror? But, question: which Quinn has the Tony?)

I once heard there was a Spanish version of DRACULA and would be very curious to see how the star compared with Bela Lugosi. If you can fulfill this wish, I in return will send you my recipe for bat tamales.—PHYLLIS FARKAS.

(We had to search high and low to satisfy your request, and it was finally low where we found this foto of CARLOS VILLARIAS as Count Dracula: in a casket in Mexico! We would appreciate your recipe for making super-natural tamales, but in order to stuff them with bat meat don't you first have to cast a net over a bat? And unfortunately we are fresh out of castanets.)

YOU AXED FOR IT!

I wonder if my son "Dynamite" is your youngest fan? He's only 5 but already a veteran of TV monsters like MIGHTY JOE YOUNG, GODZILLA and KING KONG. He's a little too young to write for himself, but I know he'd get a kick out of seeing a picture of King Kong just for himself—and a couple of thousand other youngsters.—
JAMES V. TAURASI.

(Wish granted, for "Dynamite" and a couple of hundred thousand like him, give or take a few years, altho guess it would be mostly give as if we took away many years from 5 it would be a very small tyke indeed! Here's a bust of Kong as he appeared in all his glory in the forecourt of the world famous Grauman's Chinese theater in Hollywood when the public first made its acquaintance with him, long before Jimmy Taurasi Jr. was born.)

READERS DIE JEST

The following bits of wits-dumb were lifted from can-dead comments contained in letters from our ribbers, er, readers. For each clever quotation (they're the kind that cut close to home) we will give the writer a one-way train ticket to Transylvania.

ALICIA ARIA of Palo Alto, Calif., reports: "Every time I turn on my TV set I get a revival of a great Lugosi film. I'm so happy with my Belavision!"

"A thing in my cellar is dripping green on me," complains MATT RICHARDSON of Southern Karloffornia. "How do I remove a Franken-stain?"

"It isn't the cough that carries you off, it's the coffin they carry you off in."—JOSE MILLER.

"I have a Teensville mania to visit Transylvania!" confesses DAVID ELYK of Potsdarn, N. Y.

It was the greatest charge: bolts and volts literally flew thru me. Of course, at the time you were sitting in your favorite electric chair." — SHERRY FARKAS, Phila., Pa.

"I just heard a shaggy werewolf story and to my mind that's going too darn fur!"—BARBARA AGBERG.

"I'm confused. After seeing a monster movie last nite, my girlfriend mumbled something in my ear that sounded like I was a 'fine dish' but do you suppose she could have been saying 'fiendish'?"—ZEKE LEPPIN.

MUMMYS THE WORD

im-ho-tep

3727 years old and still going strong!

They wrapped Boris Karloff in 150 yards of rotting gauze.

For 6 hours daily they sprayed his face with collodion, wrinkled it with chemicals, covered and baked it with clay.

And in 1932 THE MUMMY was born. Or re-born. For he was already 3700 years old when he first reached (out of) the screen 27 years ago, sending clammy fear clutching at the hearts of hero, heroine and horrified audiences.

The Original Mummy, Boris Karloff, awake again after a nap of nearly 4000 years. If you want to look like this, don't miss seeing the mask advertised on page 39!

One eye was all Lon Chaney could use in his costume for THE MUMMY'S CURSE, so when he got a speck of dust in it, Virginia Christine, his leading lady, went to his rescue immediately.

Without casting any reflections on Boris, we bet the image in the mirror is more attractive than he!

man into mummy

Egypt. The great desert, burial place of the ancient kings. Three men are seeking knowledge of the past—Sir Joseph Whemple, leader of the expedition; young Norton, his assistant; and Dr. Muller, a famous Egyptologist.

An exciting discovery is made: an unknown tomb is uncovered; within it, a crumbling mummy-casket and a mysterious sealed golden box.

Upon close examination, an unusual fact is noted about the mummy in the casket: the usual scar made by the embalmer's knife was not there, indicating that the man died in some sensationally unpleasant manner — struggling in his bandages — buried alive!

"He was sentenced to death not only in this world," interprets Dr. Muller, "but the next," as he explains the meaning of the missing sacred spells which have been chipped off the coffin. "This man, Im-ho-tep, must have been condemned for some grave offense against the Pharaoh, for which he was doomed to a living death, sent to the Underworld (what the Egyptians called the Afterlife) without protection for his soul on the long and perilous journey."

Sir Whemple and his assistant are eager to open the golden box, which they believe may contain the answer to the mystery, but Dr. Muller warns against it, translating the dire threat written on its cover:

not to be opened-ever

"Death! Eternal punishment for anyone who opens this casket. In the name of Amon Ra, King of the Gods" reads the ominous warning, signed by Pharaoh Amenophis.

Sir Joseph is annoyed. "I recognize your mastery of the occult sciences," he states, "still I cannot permit your beliefs to interfere with my work."

Young Norton chimes in: "Come, Dr. Muller, surely a few thousand years in the earth can take the mumbo-jumbo off any old curse?"

Dr. Muller is disgusted by Norton's youthful ignorance. "Tscha, I cannot speak before a child!" he groans. "Come out under the stars of Egypt . . ." And as he departs in anger, his last words are: "Do not touch that casket!"

But Sir Joseph and his assistant cannot help speculating about their enormous find. They have reason to believe they may have discovered the Scroll of Thoth itself, the great spell by which Isis raised Osiris from the dead.

Alone that night, Norton can control his impatience no longer. The ancient gods of Egypt still live in these hills, roam the sacred temples? The spells of the past are weaker but some still potent? He dismisses Dr. Muller's beliefs as superstition, decides to risk opening the forbidden box.

Inside, Norton makes an exciting discovery: it is indeed the formula for bringing the dead back to life. He muses over it aloud, repeating the all-powerful words of re-birth. And — life returns

The mummy's hand, in the case nearby, moves about the length of an ant. It is not a large move, to be sure, but it is a terrifyingly significant one, for it is the first sign of life in the mummy for 3700 years!

A finger stirs a fraction of an inch and a fed grains of dust trickle down the rotted wrappings.

One of Im-ho-tep's eyes flickers; they open slowly, painfully to life.

Noted Egyptologist Walter J. Daugherty reported at the time: "This is the top screen chill I have ever had, this heart-stopping moment when The Mummy comes to life."

A San Francisco newspaper reporter observed: "Children whooped and hollered at the opening night performance." (The teenage sons and daughters of those chilled children of 1932 are no doubt holding this magazine in their hands right now!) "The picture's thrills are strong enough to satisfy the most exacting juvenile critics and its plot and treatment along the lines of the Tut-Ankh-Amen curse are more than sufficient for adults."

meanwhile, back at the tomb

Young Norton ages into old Norton in a horror-packed half-second as he glances up to find the Living Mummy at his side, hand outstretched, saying, "Good evening, my name's Im-ho-tep; could you direct me to the nearest pyramid?"

Well, the dialogue didn't run exactly like that (and, after all, an editor's memory can be forgiven for getting hazy after 27 years), but Norton really did go off his rocker when Karloff shuffled out of his upright coffin and over to the table. The shock was so great that Norton burst into hysterical laughter. His mind snapped at the unbelievable sight, and he died some time later, still laughing maniacally.

Years pass. Young Frank, son of Sir Joseph Whemple, follows in his Father's footsteps, footsteps which inevitably lead him to Egypt and a discovery of his own: the tomb of the Princess Anck-es-en-amon.

Dr. Muller is still alive, and currently is treating a beautiful young woman of English-Egyptian parentage, Helen Grosvenor, for some mysterious mental illness.

The aging Sir Joseph is now head of the Cairo Museum, and one evening at closing time addresses a guest who is lingering over the glass-protected mummy-case of the newly arrived Princes Anck-es-en-amon. "Excuse me," replies the museum visitor in a strange accent, his deeply wrinkled leathery skin almost mask-like, "I had not noticed the passage of time." Then, recognizing Sir Joseph: "You may have forgotten, but we have met before. My name is Ardath Bey."

Sir Joseph remembers Bey alright: it was he who had appeared out of nowhere years ago, right after Im-ho-tep disappeared, and volunteered information leading to the discovery of the Princess' burial place. Sir Joseph is about to lay a friendly arm of remembrance on Bey when the Egyptian shudders slightly and steps back, excusing himself: "I dislike to be touched."

Ardath Bey departs down a corridor. Sir Joseph locks up for the night and joins his son who is waiting in a car outside. As they are about to drive away —

women of mystery

A young woman (Helen Grosvenor) rushes up to the museum doors and vainly seeks entry. Frank Whemple goes to see what she wants. She faints at his touch and he rushes her home where she comes to but stares unseeingly, like a zombie, and mutters:

"Im-ho-tep . . . Snofru Nebmaet . . . Ib-ho-tep. Udi Hosapti —"

Frank does not recognize the language. "What tongue is she speaking?" he asks.

Sir Joseph is visibly shaken. He replies:

"The language of ancient Egypt, not heard on this earth for two thousand years — and the name of a man unspoken since before the siege of Troy!"

Just then, Dr. Muller arrives. He takes Sir Joseph aside and they have a private discussion. Muller confronts Whemple with the knowledge that he knows that the Princess mummy newly added to the museum is the same Anck-es-en-amon whom Im-ho-tep tried 3700 years ago to raise from the dead and for that reason was condemned to death himself.

At that moment the phone rings and Sir Joseph learns:

mystery at the museum

A museum guard has been found dead. In the room of the Princess!

The cause of death is diagnosed as—shock!

And there is another shock in store for Sir Joseph and Dr. Muller when, on the scene of the strange death, an overlooked parchment is found. As Dr. Muller recognizes the document, his face pales and freezes with horror. "It is the Scroll of Thoth!" he stammers.

During the absence of Dr. Muller and his Father, Frank Whemple has been getting acquainted with the revived Miss Grosvenor. She laughs when he tells her there is something about her that reminds him of the mummy of the Princess he discovered in the Valley of the Queens, the one now on display in the museum. She dismisses the coincidence lightly with, "Probably imagination and racial likeness."

Frank asks her why she is a patient of Dr. Muller's. Helen confesses she doesn't quite know, except that she has felt strangely drawn to the museum and he has been trying to find out why.

Frank has never believed in love at first sight, but he finds himself incredibly attracted to this strange young woman, and she seems to feel something for him in return.

"zach" is got him

"Ha, the mad fools, they doubted I'd ever get a HEAD in my career!"

GREETINGS! Uncle Drac wants you, Zach, in the Transylvanian Navy!

zacherly!

The name rhymes with "hack her knee," and that's just what Zach is liable to do to his television wife, Isobel, if she doesn't behave bad enough to suit him. He might even sic Gasport on her, the unseen monster that he keeps confined in a potato sack. (Potatoes, as you know, have eyes! and it is rumored that the creature in Zach's sack is actually a giant mutant potato-bug with a million eyes! Why else would Isobel reply "that bugs me" when he tells her to "hit the sack"?).

greatest since drac

The Zacherley fans — and they are legion — are proclaiming their TV leader the coolest ghoul since Bela Lugosi began quenching his thirst with hot Eviltine. In his previous incarnation, when he was known as Host Roland, Zacherley took fiendish delight in scaring the nite-lites out of Philadelphia-fans of SHOCK. Then he temporarily disappeared from the Pennsylvania telecasting area and during his absence a spy for FAMOUS MONSTERS reported him as seen "vacationing" in Transylvania, where he is known to have been the castle-guest of a certain distinguished Count of a very old blood-line.

bi - jekyll built for two

Hyde-like, Host Roland rode off as one man — and returned as another! But his fame preceded him from Philly to New York, via station WABC-TV, proving the old Shakespearean adage that, in this Ad Age, "a rogue by any other name will sell," and the Zacherley fans are certainly sold on their horror hero. They just feel sorry for the rest of the country that there's only one Zacherley and he hasn't gone network — yet — but they're working on it. The Philadelphia area alone boasted 800 fan clubs for Zach; his New York adorers are bound to boost the figure to at least twice that.

"What are these tarantulas doing in my beaker?
I ordered scorpions!"

What other SHOCK Star can hold a candle to Zacherley?

Well, that ain't ex-Zacherley the neatest BE NEAT sign we ever seen. But what can you expect when you buy from a Beastnik in Greenwich Village?

Lying down on the job (in this case a black coffin) is part of Zach's act.

monster mail

The monstrous amount of mail that Zacherley receives rivals the sacks that arrive daily (and nitely) at the offices of FM for Dr. Acula. By special arrangement with the Dead Letter Office, we bring you excerpts from Zacherley's corpse-spondence:

"I am writing this letter to bring to your attention one of Transylvania's fastest growing hobbies, raising maggots for fun and profit."—Mr. TK, Rego Park, NY.

"I must commend you on your medical knowledge. Old TMU (Transylvania Medical University) certainly teaches its students well for you to cut up a brain like an expert. I was quite a cut-up myself, till the age of 3, when my Mother took away my scissors because she thought the voodoo dolls were beginning to look uncomfortably like my kinder-guardian teacher."—Mr. WS, Woodside, N.Y.

"Who is the barber who gives you your sensational gruecuts?"—DZ, Perth Amboy, NJ.

"Roses are red . . . Cabbage is green . . . Your head is shaped . . . Like a washing machine."—Mr. PH, Vampire Unit 357½, Brooklyn, NY.

"I profited from your instructions on how to wrap a mummy. Looking forward to next Armistice Day, would you please demonstrate how to wrap a poppy?"—LB, Westfield, NJ.

"Zach, you thrill be to the very marrow! I would have written this testimony in blood but I was thirsty."—VA, Chatham, NJ.

zach's own fiend club

Eleven days after he invited his fans to join a creepy club created just for them, he had 13,800 memberships! When he invited cardholders to come to the Studio to meet him in person, he anticipated a top of perhaps 2000 — but traffic was blocked for miles around the station when approximately 13,000 boys, girls and grownups turned up for the occasion in everything from skates to Cadillacs! The Zacherley National Anthem ("Dinner with Drac," a recording of which he has sold over 250,000 copies) was played, and thereafter he gave a lecture on Transylvanian Terms for the Tourist, handy little phrases to have at one's fang-tips such as

"Oily to bed and oily to rise makes Donovan's Brain super wise," says Zach.

zach's facts

"the skull of my Aunt is in the garden" and "which way — quick — to the nearest wolf-bane store?" When he made a plea that his wife Isobel needed a new pillow for her coffin, and 3 hairs apiece would be appreciated from every Tom, Dick and Hairy who could spare them, some 23,000 letters were received — a new world's record in hair-mail! At last count Mrs. Zacherley had 68,997 hairs but then she sneezed on them and had to start counting all over again.

There is no truth to the rumor that in real life this great Master of Scarymonies is really Zacherley Scott, the movie actor. He's a 40-year-old Pennsylvania-born bachelor who served in World War II as a captain in the Quartermaster Corps. He saw service in England, Italy and North Africa — plenty of real horror.

One bit of advice to Anxious Parents: if you don't want your child to grow up to be a (rich famous successful) Monster of Ceremonies like Zacherley, better let him or her see all the monster movies now. For Zacherley has one amazing revelation of his youth:

"When I was a youngster my Mother never let me see horror pictures!" ●

horrible you're warning: don't cross chris or he'll sic dracenstein and frankula on you!

Christopher Lee is a big man, no doubt about it. He'd have to be to fill the shoes of both Boris Karloff and Bela Lugosi in a single year. And of course that's just what he did by recreating first the role of the Monster in CURSE OF FRANKENSTEIN and then portraying the vampiric Count in HORROR OF DRACULA within the space of 12 months.

Little did little Chris dream when he was a subteen that one day HE would grow up to become Mary Shelley's creepy creature and Bram Stoker's blood-thirsty bat-man. In fact, it is unlikely that he even saw FRANKENSTEIN or DRACULA when he was a child, as children in England (the land of his birth) are not as fortunate as American monster fans in being permitted to see all spooky pictures regardless of how young they are.

Poor Chris, he couldn't even watch Karloff and Lugosi on television, for the very simple reason that there wasn't any TV when he was a youngster!

Christopher Lee is now 35.

Monster Frankenstein departs from the usual custom of reading in a chair or bed and reclines in a bathtub instead. What a screwy stunt to PLUG a picture!

The Man Behind the Makeups: the mild Mr. Christopher Lee.

Dracu-Lee carries off Valerie Gaunt, who fainted after reading one of his books bound in bat skin. It seems the bat was still alive.

interesting ancestry

Born of English-Italian parents, Lee claims to be able to trace his family line as far back as — the Borgias! If you recall your history, these folks were a frightfully bloody lot. You might say Lee is now making a profession of portraying a “twisted limb” on the family tree. His latest role is that of a grave-robber in THE DOCTOR FROM 7 DIALS. The doctor is played by none other than the Horror King himself, Karloff. As Boris’ body-snatching assistant, Chris Lee is grotesque and ghoulish, with a pock-marked face that is anything but a pretty sight.

Oddly enough, his fans love him. After portraying Count Dracula as a lonely and tragic figure, he began to receive reams of romantic fan mail. It poured in like rain on the roof of a haunted house.

You would almost have thought Rudolph Valentino had been resurrected.

Speaking of rebirths, Lee plays Resurrection Joe in THE DOCTOR FROM 7 DIALS.

from hero to horror

Or, from real horror to reel horror. For Chris Lee was in World War 2. He flew danger-fraught skies as a fighter pilot. But his head was never quite so much in the skies as the day he learned he had landed the coveted role of the Creature in THE CURSE OF FRANKENSTEIN, first Frankenstein made in color.

After that, it was up and off to the Studio at the crack of dawn, to endure 4 hours of disfigurement at the skilled hands of the makeup artist, that turned him from handsome man into horrible monster. “No wonder Franky was cranky when his maker finished putting him together,” Lee once said. “I could understand exactly how he felt and sympathize with him.”

“But I’m not really evil,” Mr. Lee hastens to assure his FM admirers. “It’s just a job, which I enjoy doing, but I don’t ‘take my work home with me,’ so to speak.”

We should hope not! Home to Mr. Lee is, according to a lucky girl named Sarah Stoddart who’s been there, “a well-furnished lair in a lush London flat.”

In the privacy of his own home, unlike the average Englishman the very unaverage Mr. Lee sometimes sports red sox. (Or were they originally white and took on their crimson color after he waded in you-know-what from his last experiment?)

Above, about midway in the 4-hour-long process of turning Chris Lee into Frank Lee A. Monster. The job is complete for his role in THE CURSE OF FRANKENSTEIN.

hurrah for horror

The question has been raised to Mr. Lee whether he believes the kind of creatures he betrays are good for people to behold. He has a ready answer. "In my opinion, a couple of realistic films such as Waterfront or The Blackboard Jungle can cause more hoodlum trouble than a dozen horror films. If an easily influenced juvenile or adult can identify himself with a character on the screen he will be tempted to copy him. But except for Halloween parties and masquerades, nobody would care to be a Frankenstein or Dracula — not full time, not in real life."

And do you know, all kidding aside, he's right? In a quarter of a century or more since Franky and Dracula started cutting up the countryside, plenty of juvenile and grownup delinquents have made disgraceful front page news, but FRANKENSTEIN & DRACULA have always stayed within the confines where they belong, the movie ads section of the newspaper.

Lee concludes: "Horror is pure escapism and rattling good entertainment if directed with skill and polish."

dinner with dracula

Late last year some lucky monster movie fan living in England got to be the guest of the new Dracula at a dinner date. To win this honor he (or maybe it turned out to be a she) had only to answer a dozen questions concerning such familiar films as THE CREATURE FROM THE BLACK LAGOON, THE FLY, THEM!, KING KONG, FORBIDDEN PLANET, INVASION OF THE BOY SNATCHERS, and THE QUATERMASS EXPERIMENT (known in the USA as THE CREEPING UNKNOWN), questions which any alert reader of FAMOUS MONSTERS could have easily answered with one tentacle tied behind his back. The contest was sponsored by a long established national weekly periodical. Unfortunately the time limit expired before any American reader could submit an entry, otherwise some FM reader might have dined with Bela Lugosi's successor.

HOUNDS OF THE BASKERVILLES will be Christopher Lee's next horror film. In case you're not familiar with the title, it's a shocking story by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who created Sherlock Holmes and wrote THE LOST WORLD long before anybody but your editor was born.

After that, who knows? THE CABINET OF DR. CALIGARI? SEVEN FOOTPRINTS TO SATAN? RETURN OF THE MUMMY? Or, FRANKENSTEIN MEETS DRACULA — with Christopher Lee playing both parts!

MONSTER CLUB SECTION

WOW!! New Vice Presidents by the hundreds have joined the FAMOUS MONSTERS CLUB since the last issue! We've been so swamped with ads and personal notes from our members Dr. Acula has been forced to earmark 5 full pages next issue for a complete section on the ads you've sent in to us! Look for this exclusive section in the very next issue of FAMOUS MONSTERS—and you'll find YOUR OWN ad or personal note.

On the following pages of this section you'll find a listing of new Club Members who are now full-fledged famous monsters—now that they've appeared in print in the World's First & Only Monster Magazine.

Don't forget to write and tell us about your own monster activities. We read every letter received, and will publish your "Monster News" in the gigantic CLUB SECTION next issue. If you're sending in photos—make sure they are clear enough for publication!

Address letters to:

MONSTER CLUB EDITOR
1054 E. Upsal Street
Philadelphia 50, Penna.

See you next issue!

"Jewels" Verne, gentleman on the right, attempts to tempt the Man Aging Editor of FAMOUS MONSTERS, but Phyllis Farkas isn't falling for any old clam's pearls, she prefers the clammy pearls of whizzdom in the magazine which is being so avidly perused by her old skull-mate.

Monster Club Vice President Peter Specker as seen in normal dress (left), and in make-up as a human (right). That human-type make-up is pretty realistic!

IGOR GOOFED! We entrusted him last issue with the job of writing photo captions and (as scores of you Monsters with the Eagle Eyes were quick to point out to us) he fumbled on p. 4 by repeating the caption from the inside front cover. The photo, repeated above, was actually a scene from NIGHT OF THE BLOOD-BEAST, and what it should have said underneath was: "Oh, please take my picture!" begs the Corpuscle Creature. "If you do, I might get my face published in FAMOUS MONSTERS and be famous over nite!" Thé girl seems doubtful. "That's a face? Anyway, getting your foto printed in such an important magazine wouldn't be a snap!"

ASTOUNDING THEORY

Dr. Muller and Sir Joseph return to Frank and Helen, and the doctor pieces together bits of fact and fancy into an amazing supposition. He states he never believed the mummy Im-ho-tep was stolen; instead, he believed the ancient magic of the Egyptian priests and gods was powerful and active. Ardath Bey, the man solely responsible for the finding of the tomb of Princess Anck-es-en-amon, was in the Princess' room in the museum shortly before the guard was found dead there: more than coincidence to Dr. Muller. In short, Dr. Muller believes Ardath Bey was the cause of the guard's death, had the Scroll but lost it while fleeing.

The crux of this belief is: Ardath Bey and Im-ho-tep are one and the same, the 3700 year dead mummy restored to life!

Frank is shocked, his Father horrified.

FURTHER SHOCKS

Startlingly, the voice of Ardath is heard in the next room, and the 3 men go there to find him in conversation with Helen, who almost appears to be in a trance. Dr. Muller takes command of the situation, urging Frank to take Helen home. When the doctor and Sir Joseph are alone with Ardath Bey, Muller springs a surprise on the Egyptian, showing him a certain foto. "My assistant took that picture of the mummy of Im-ho-tep before it was stolen," Sir Joseph says.

Dr. Muller adds: "Do you think it conceivable that the mummy was not stolen but restored to a semblance of life by the spell from the Scroll of —"

Bey's face bursts into hate and rage. He snatches the foto, tears it in two. "The scroll is rightfully mine," he declares. "I bought it from a dealer. I sense that it is here somewhere."

The Egyptian points his right hand at Sir Joseph. Light gleams from a ring-of-power on his middle finger. Sir Joseph collapses in a chair.

Dr. Muller breaks the spell, declaring: "We had foreseen this! The Scroll of Thoth is in safe hands and will be destroyed the moment it is known that harm has come to us."

Ardath, whom they now know to be the revived Im-ho-tep, speaks slowly. "You have studied our ancient arts. You know that you cannot harm me — you know also that you must restore that scroll to me or die. Muller, tell that weak fool to get that scroll, wherever it is, and hand it to his Nubian servant—"

"Ah, yes, the Nubian," Muller murmurs understandingly. "The ancient blood—you have made him your slave. I admit your power is too strong for me, but if I could get my hands on you I could break your dried flesh to pieces!"

The living mummy only bows brittlely and, momentarily defeated, leaves the house.

'DESTROY THE DOCUMENT!'

"The evil force that has been attacking Helen," Dr. Muller realizes aloud, "is that accursed Mummy! Burn the scroll, Whemple; it was thru you that this horror came into existence — destroy it at once!"

Sir Joseph dazedly agrees as Muller leaves.

But the sinister soul of Im-ho-tep, which had survived thru 37 hundred agonizing years, was not to be deprived of salvation by a slender match in the weak hands of an old man. In the inner court of his house, moving waters in a pool clouded and assumed changing shapes at his will; and beside this pool Im-ho-tep knelt, saw Sir Joseph bend toward the fireplace, about to set fire to the scroll. His face aflame with fury, the Mummy flung out his arms over the pool and chanted the weird words of a death spell well known to this one time High Priest at the Temple of the Sun in ancient Karnak.

And Sir Joseph died silently.

and Im-ho-tep has decided that Helen Grosvenor is the reincarnation of the Princess he has loved thru the centuries, and must be souly his. He sends forth an irresistible mental call that brings Helen to his side, and explains to her:

“Anck-es-en-amon, of the House of the Hawk Kings, my love has lasted longer than the temples of our gods. No man ever suffered as I suffered for you. But you may not know the rest—not until you are about to pass thru the great night of terror and triumph—until you are ready to face moments of horror for an eternity of love—until I send back your spirit that has wondered thru so many forms and so many ages. But before then, Bast the Cat Goddess must again send forth death—death for Frank Whemple, who would steal your love from me!”

THE PAST LIVES AGAIN

Im-ho-tep spirits Helen to the museum, there clothes her and himself in the ancient temple garments and intones a spell from a scroll whose edges flicker with phantom flames. In a magic mirror Helen sees herself as the Princess she was nearly 4000 years ago when she shared a forbidden love with Im-ho-tep and her Father, the Pharaoh, sentenced him to the Nameless Death.

Im-ho-tep returns Helen's attention to the present and directs her to look upon the mummy of the Princess, the shell which her own soul once inhabited. She recoils in horror as Im-ho-tep explains: “I could return it to life now but it would be a mere thing that moved at my will without a soul. It was not only this body that I loved, it was thy soul, oh Princess. Come, to be reborn and live with me for all eternity!”

“DON'T KILL ME!”

But Helen becomes terrified as she is led to the altar of Anubis, the Guide of the Dead. When she attempts to flee, she is captured by Im-ho-tep's slave and forced onto the embalming slab. Im-ho-tep kneels beside her, knife in crumbling hand, and chants:

“The gods! The gods will receive into the underworld the spirit of Anck-es-en-amon, but not for long—Osiris will release thy soul. The ancient rites must be performed over thy body, and then I will read the great spell with which Isis brought back Osiris from the grave. Thou shalt rise again—”

“No, no!” screams the terrified girl. “I'm alive, I'm young, I won't die! I loved you once, but now you belong with the dead. I'm Anck-es-en-amon, but I'm alive in a young fresh body; I'm someone else in a strange new world, and I want to live in it.”

THE POWER OF ISIS

At the end of the room a great statue of Isis towers. Summoning her strength, Helen runs to the Goddess Idol and flings herself at its feet, praying frantically in the ancient tongue:

“Sehotpe-ib-re Mem-mosut Sit-sekem!”

Im-ho-tep, knife raised to plunge it into Helen, is frozen in terror as the right arm of the idol slowly moves! Isis offers to Helen the crux ansata, the all-powerful symbol of Eternal Life.

And to Im-ho-tep, who sought to take the life of her priestess, Isis offers — death!

A jagged bolt of blinding light leaps forth from the goddess, striking the Mummy and disintegrating him.

Im-ho-tep is no more.

Ah, yes, Im-ho-tep was no more — but there was Kharis. He was first heard of 8 years later, in 1940, when Universal made THE MUMMY'S HAND.

Tom Tyler played Kharis, prince of ancient Egypt who was buried alive because he angered the gods by stealing the Leaves of Life, the forbidden tana leaves.

For 3000 years Kharis lives on. He protects the tomb of his beloved Ananka, ready to bring death to anyone who disturbs the resting place of the royal princess.

George Zucco, as Andoheb, learns the secret of Kharis' immortality, and controls him via the life-reviving tana leaves. But when Andoheb is finally killed in a struggle in an Egyptian temple, the Living Mummy is at last destroyed.

THE MUMMY SHAMBLES AGAIN

Did we say destroyed? A brief 2 years later he is back again, in THE MUMMY'S TOMB, this time with Turhan Bey lurking around the tomb and the Mummy promising to love, honor and o-Bey him if he'll just give him one more tana leaf.

Two years later, 1944, it was virtually the same story all over again, with Lon Chaney, Jr. as THE MUMMY'S GHOST. John Carradine played Youssef Bey in this one. Kharis, although he died 2 pictures ago, is mysteriously back in this one, hale (?) and hearty (?) and still madly in love with the unliving mummy of Princess Ananka, whose soul is currently reincarnated as Amina Mansori. Miss Mansori unfortunately comes to a sorry end when she is carried into swamp waters by Kharis, and her body turns to dust, thus turning her into one of those Instant Mud Pies you've heard so much about.

By now the Mummy was being wrapped in tin foil to keep him fresh and ready for use. Within 12 months Kharis (again Lon Chaney, Jr.) was back on the job. In THE MUMMY'S CURSE, Kharis and the Princess Ananka are accidentally dug up out of the bayous. Dr. Ilzor Zandaab, who is actually an Egyptian priest, learns of this and seeks out the body of Kharis, which he revives. (The Princess herself revived the minute the sun fell on her, turning her back from a mummy into a beautiful woman.)

Three people lose their lives in this Mummy episode before Kharis is "destroyed" for the third time and Ananka returns to her ancient mummy state for the second.

THE MUMMY'S WORST

Quiet for 10 years, the Mummy was last revived in 1955 to meet its most awful fate of all: it met Abbott & Costello. In ABBOTT & COSTELLO MEET THE MUMMY, the Living Mummy and A&C tangle in tombs and passageways with crooks who are attempting to steal a treasure. The Mummy performed with what were described as "frog-like gasps, reminding one of The Creature from the Dry Oasis." He was eventually dynamited to — death? No, no, not that — your editor is now preparing a script wherein each of the separate and individual mummy fragments are brought back to life (by technicolor tana leaves). We will call it, simply,

"THE ATTACK OF THE INCREDIBLE INCH-HIGH MUMMY CREATURES!"

14. Well, it took a mighty big man to be the Father of His Country—!
15. Al Ghoulson.
16. Doubtful. More likely THE GRAY-HAIRED BEAST was the sequel to THE THING THAT COULD NOT DYE.
17. True—when he fired a maiden, she stayed fired!
18. True, and wouldn't you hate to have the shoe bill for 25 pairs of shoes for a 50 foot woman???
19. False; it was BLOW-HARD, SON OF KACHOO.
20. Confidentially, it Sphinx.
21. Maria Montez.
22. Yes, miraculously enough.
23. Well, it wasn't Fred February.
24. The very superest, far outest, most living endest truest (thou just knowest it!).

Franky admits theft of valuable back issues of FAMOUS MONSTERS

After a sensational trial Frankenstein finally admitted today that he had taken this little girl's back issue of FAMOUS MONSTERS magazine.

Says Franky "I'm really sorry. I meant to give it back the next day, but I was so fascinated and delighted with the photos and articles that I couldn't put it down!

"For instance, I was amazed at the HOUSE OF HORRORS article in FM #1, amused by THE SCREAM TEST and delighted with ALICE IN MONSTERLAND.

"In #2 I wouldn't have missed (for all the ghould in the mint at Fort Knox) the Biography of BORIS KARLOFF, the bat's-eye view of BELA LUGOSI and the feature article, MONSTERS ARE BADDER THAN EVER.

"And in #3, I was wild about MONSTERS OF THE MATINEE and THE BOY WHO BECAME A MONSTER, just to mention a couple of the treats in that issue."

So why not treat yourself and get all three of our rib-chilling, spine-tickling back issues while the Limited Supply lasts?
