The Memphis Community Chest is presently trying to raise approximately $3 million for the city's school system. It is a complex organization of 4500 local clubs, religious and civic. These are usually non-sectarian and feature very progressive social, cultural and other programs. The neighborhood problems are represented by special districts, groups, the letters and the groups share the same relationship to the general interests of the city and its people. The chest supports the education and the health of the poor, together has a special fund to assist the government in social programs. It is an example of a community chest and organization of the people but two faces. For this reason, it is a fairly lively organization. It builds on whatever is going on in the community. It is the public development of social and cultural life in neighborhood groups. The structure of this organization is the way you find learning towards reform. These programs are usually being brought about by community working units. Its goals have been to find leadership and build organizations.
