Revolution in the army

by Bernardine Dolan
Inter-Organizational Secretary

(Interview with Dave Kline and Guy Smith, recently discharged from the army at Ft. Hood, Texas, both Vietnam veterans. Guy is black, one of the Ft. Hood 41. Dave, white, both are returning to work at the Ohio Street clubhouse outside Ft. Hood.)

NDN: What's the relationship between black and white GIs? Do you deal with racism when organizing white GIs?

DAVE: Yeah, a lot of white GIs get a lot of racial hang-ups and stuff, but when you start rapping with them, you can see what racism is. You can really see it 'cause the same dude is fucking with everybody. A lot of racial shit gets wiped out, by just talking to guys about the role that racism plays in the structure. A lot of guys can dig that because they're together in the army.

(This is the first of a two-part article.)

Do you choose to risk freedom to win the capabilities of children to think for themselves? Do you believe you should give your child the same freedom you yourself have? Do you believe that?

These are the questions that I have chosen to ask in this article. Do you choose to risk freedom to win the capabilities of children to think for themselves? Do you believe you should give your child the same freedom you yourself have? Do you believe that?

Children are a precious trust. They have entrusted you with their lives. It is your responsibility to give them the freedom to think for themselves, and to give them the tools to do so. This is not a simple task. It is a task that requires you to overcome the many obstacles that stand in the way of your child's freedom. The first obstacle is the lack of freedom that you yourself have. The second obstacle is the lack of freedom that your child has. The third obstacle is the lack of freedom that your child's friends have. The fourth obstacle is the lack of freedom that your child's community has. The fifth obstacle is the lack of freedom that your child's society has. The sixth obstacle is the lack of freedom that your child's world has. The seventh obstacle is the lack of freedom that your child's future has. The eighth obstacle is the lack of freedom that your child's destiny has. The ninth obstacle is the lack of freedom that your child's fate has. The tenth obstacle is the lack of freedom that your child's life has.
