Trekking the Cordillera Huayhuash

A TRULY SPECTACULAR ALPINE CIRCUIT IN THE ANDES

The tremendous ice range of Peru's Cordillera Huayhuash is topped with knife-edged 20,000-foot peaks that attract climbers from around the world. Our classic 12-day trek makes a complete circuit of this magnificent range, crossing eight high passes with near-constant panoramas of towering Andean giants, including Yerupajá (21,709'), the second-highest mountain in Peru, and the icy fang of Jirishanca (20,099'). Along the way, we'll camp by the stunning turquoise lakes that bejewel this region. The hiking is challenging but rewarding, and the vast blue skies and soaring condors add to the allure. We only offer this trip once a year, so don't miss your chance!

Itinerary

DAY 1

LIMA

Arrive in Lima anytime and walk across the street to the hotel from the airport. The Lima Wyndham Costa del Sol Airport hotel is set right across the street from the international airport terminal. No activities are planned for this day. Overnight at hotel...Meals on your own.

DAY 2

LIMA, PERU / HUARÁZ

Early morning meeting in the hotel lobby for the all-day drive (about 8 hours) to Huaráz with the group. We begin by heading north on the Pan American Highway along Peru's desert coast for about 3.5 hours. After lunch, we turn inland and drive another three hours. When we cross Conococha Pass (12,800'), we enjoy our first views of the Cordillera Huayhuash as well as the Cordillera Blanca in the distance. After another 1.5 hours, we arrive at the small and lively city of Huaráz, Peru's center for mountaineering, at 10,200 feet. This climbing and trekking center is located in the valley of the Río Santa, nestled between the Cordillera Negra and the Cordillera Blanca. Our hotel, the Andino, has outstanding views of the peaks of the Cordillera Blanca, including massive Huascarán (22,205'), Peru's highest mountain, and several other beautiful snow-capped peaks over 19,000 feet. In the evening, we gather for a trip briefing and our Welcome Dinner. Overnight at Hotel Andino...LD

DAY 3

ACCLIMATIZATION HIKE TO WILKAHUAIN

We begin the day with a walk through Jose Olaya, the only street remaining from the 1970 earthquake, followed by a bus ride to the well preserved archaeological site of Wilkahuain, with its fascinating burial and ritual chambers dating from the time of the Wari people. From here we hike through farming country and steeply down to the town of Monterrey, with a picnic lunch en route. We head back to Huaráz in the afternoon to do last minute shopping or check our gear. Overnight at Hotel Andino...BLD
Hiking Details: 3 hours

DAY 4

ACCLIMATIZATION HIKE TO LAKE CHURUP (14,700')

For today's acclimatization hike, we drive north of Huaráz for about 45 minutes to a trailhead below Lake Churup. We begin our hike at about 12,800 feet, following glacial moraine for about 1.5 hours, then continue steeply up for about 1.5 hours, with some challenging rocky sections (about 30 feet) where we will be scrambling on all fours and using a fixed cable for assistance. We arrive at Lake Churup, set at 14,600 feet at the base of the Churup Glacier. After a picnic lunch, we hike back down and return to Huaráz in the late afternoon. Dinner is on your own this evening. DAY 5

DRIVE TO LLAMAC (10,600') / BEGIN TREK / POCOPA (11,300')

A drive brings us to Chiquián, where we stretch our legs and explore this lovely old town. From here, we continue along steep, narrow dirt roads with a river crossing to the pretty little town of Llamac, with lunch en route. A gradual one-hour hike along the right side of the Llamac River brings us to the town of Pocpa, an old traditional community, where we camp...BLD

Hiking Details: 1 hour

DAY 6

POCOPA TO MATACANCHA (13,600')

Our hike begins with an approach to the mountains, with our first close views of the Cordillera Huayhuash. We follow a mining road with a few steep shortcuts through the switchbacks and an occasional mining vehicle passing by. After four hours of hiking, we reach our lunch spot, then continue ascending gradually for another two hours. We pass the small community of Rondoy and some Wari archaeological sites, enjoying the view of the spectacular glaciers of the snow peak of Ninashanca as we head to our camp at Matacancha, set below Cacanampunta Pass. Camp overnight...BLD

Hiking Details: 5-7 hours

"I would expect nothing less than excellent from WT, and I was not disappointed."

Bill F., Sherwood, AZ

DAY 7

CACANAMPUNTA PASS (15,400') / NEAR LAGUNA MITUCOCHA (13,700')

A steep hike out of camp brings us up to a rocky area and a switchback trail that leads to the top of our first high pass, Cacanampunta (15,400'). Descending from the pass, views on the other side include Ninashanca, Yerupajá, Jirishanca Chico, and Jirishanca, with the possibility of seeing Andean condors soaring in the skies above. We descend on a rough trail to our lunch spot, then gradually descend again before making a small ascent to our camp in a broad meadow at 13,700 feet with beautiful views of Ninashanca. Camp overnight...BLD

Hiking Details: 6-7 hours

DAY 8

CARHUAC PASS (15,150') TO LAGUNA CARHUACOCHA (13,600')

From camp, we cross a small field, then gradually ascend across high pampas for about 4 hours to the top of Carhuac Pass (15,150'). Just before the pass we enter a shale field where we can find fossilized seashells in the rocks—it's remarkable to think that this was once sea level! The views from the summit include Jirishanca, Jirishanca Chico, Yerupajá, Yerupajá Chico, Siulá, Siulá Chico, and Carnicero in the distance. Siulá is the dramatic peak climbed (from the opposite side) in the book and film Touching the Void. A gradual descent of around 3 hours brings us to beautiful Laguna Carhuacocha and our lakeside camp. Carhua is a Quechua word referring to a type of black earth found in the area, and cocha means lake. This afternoon we can relax at our beautiful campsite with Yerupajá, the second largest mountain in Peru, right in front of us. Great sunsets! Camp overnight...BLD

Hiking Details: 7-8 hours

DAY 9

SIULÁ PASS (15,842') TO THE COMMUNITY OF HUAYHUASH (14,200')

We follow a trail that brings us up to Lake Siulá, a large lake with great views of Yerupajá and Siulá. Hiking a bit higher up the glacier moraine, we reach a newly-formed lake with a bright glacial-green color. From this high vantage point, the views across the steep glacial moraine are utterly dramatic. We continue steeply up typical Andean ichu (bunch) grass to reach “El Mirador”—affording a breathtaking overview of the three lakes. We then continue up and over Siulá Pass (15,842'). The last part of the climb is hard because of the altitude, but we are amid some of the most isolated and spectacular areas of our trek. Descending from the pass, we catch up with the main trail and hike down to Lake Carnicero and our Huayhuash camp. Note: Our pack horses can't negotiate this trail, but our crew—with our lunch—can! This is one of the two longest days on the trek, but one of the most rewarding. Camp overnight...BLD

Hiking Details: 9-10 hours

DAY 10

PORTACHUELO HUAYHUASH (15,700') / VICONGA HOT SPRINGS (14,200')

After leaving the spread-out community of Huayhuash, with its houses dotted up and down the valley, we climb for about 2.5 hours up a wide valley. Our last half hour is a steep and rocky hike up a talus field to the top of Portachuelo Huayhuash (15,700'). From here, we see the peaks of the Cordillera Raura on the left. The large, flat glacier on the far left of the Raura range is called the “sleeping lion.” The peaks we see on the way up to the pass, just below it, are Trapécio on the right and Pushkaturpo on the left. Our descent of about 1.5 hours is fairly steep and takes us down to the huge lake of Viconga, dammed up about 30 years ago by the Peruvian government to create hydroelectric power and irrigation water for areas to the south. From the top of the lake, our trail winds around the right side. We take either the higher uphill or the lower trail, depending on the water level, down to the valley and camp next to some hot springs with three clean hot pools—time for a relaxing soak and cleanup! Camp overnight...BLD

Hiking Details: 5.5-6.5 hours

“Well thought out and well executed. Keep it up!”

Don J., Montara, CA

"A spectacular and fun trip!"

Trish K., Berkeley, CA

DAY 11

PUNTA CUYOC PASS (16,564') / CUYOC CAMP (14,700')

Today we cross our second-highest pass. We hike up the valley to reach the top of Punta Cuyoc Pass (16,564'), a 4- to 4.5-hour hike that is fairly steep the whole way. The views are superb, and we see anquish, or oreja de venado ("deer's ear") plants on this pass, the only plant life here, along with majestic hexagonal basalt columns on the other side of the pass. Atop the pass, we look directly across to close-up views of the Cuyoc Glacier and from right to left the massifs of Siulá, Yerupajá (a double peak), and Rasac (a triple peak)—probably our most spectacular views from any of the passes we cross. Our descent is steep, following a loose dirt trail for the first 45 minutes, so we take care to go slowly on this section. We continue descending on mostly gradual terrain for another 45 minutes to the upper end of the Guanacpatay Valley and to our camp at 14,700 feet near the river. At the top of this valley, there are amazing limestone and volcanic intrusions. Camp overnight...BLD

Hiking Details: 6-7 hours, with lunch at camp

DAY 12

CUYOC CAMP TO CUTATAMBO (14,005')

Today we hike steeply up 3 hours to the top of Santa Rosa Pass (16,600'). The glacial views at the top are unbelievably close with the peaks of Carnicero, Sarapo, Siulá grande Yerupajá grande, and Rasac. We are above the turquoise lake of Juráu. We make our way steeply down, around Lake Juráu, to camp in the upper end of the Cutatambo Valley.

Hiking details: 6-7 hours

DAY 13

EXPLORATION DAY / HIKE TO SARAPOCOCHA

Today we have three choices: rest in camp and enjoy the views; take a loop hike up to the moraine of beautiful Lake Juráu, beneath the peak of the same name, and return to camp; and those who want to hike farther can continue from here to Sarapococha (Lake Sarapo), hiking north for about three hours for closer views of the peaks we see from camp. From this vantage point, we can also see part of Siulá and part of the route of the famous Touching the Void climb. En route to Lake Sarapo, we see the base camps for both the BBC film crew and the original 1985 climb of Siulá. This is a long half-day hike, with a return to camp in the afternoon. Camp overnight...BLD

Hiking Details: The longest optional hike is 5.5 hours

DAY 14

CUTATAMBO TO HUAYLLAPA (11,480')

We descend to Huayllapa and camp in the grounds of an old hacienda, "Awkimarka," and visit the community of Huayllapa and the home of one of our crew. Today's hike is a gentle descent to a beautiful valley following a river. It's an excellent opportunity to see locals grazing their animals and observe daily local life. This is a short day of hiking and in the afternoon we have the opportunity to explore the town. Camp overnight...BLD

Hiking Details: 4 hours

DAY 15

HUAYLLAPA TO CASHAPAMPA (14,891')

An ascent of 6 hours brings us to Tapush Pass (15,711'), then we descend about 1 hour to camp at Cashapampa (14,891') with wonderful views of Diablo Mudo and some incredible rock formations and colors. Camp overnight...BLD

Hiking Details: 8-9 hours

DAY 16

CASHAPAMPA TO LAGUNA JAHUACocha (13,316')

Today's hike begins with a 20-minute descent, then we turn east toward Yaucha Pass (15,900'). After the pass, we head left and hug the mountainside, climbing another 25 minutes to an incredible ridgeline at 16,072 feet. We traverse the ridgeline for an hour with spectacular views of the entire Huayhuash Range. A steep 2-hour descent brings us to camp at Jahuacocha (13,316'), with views of Rondoy, Jirishanca, Yerupajá, and Rasac. Camp overnight...BLD

Hiking Details: 6-7 hours

DAY 17

JAHUACocha TO LLAMAC (10,627') / HUARAZ

We get a very early start today and make our way down a beautiful valley, enjoying the sunrise and beautiful melody of the glacial stream we hike alongside. After 2 hours of gradual descent, we branch off and hug an undulating ridge above the valley for another 2-3 hours with incredible chances to see a condor soar by. We take in our last views of the Huayhuash Range before turning and making our 2-hour dusty descent through a wonderful array of Andean flora and small farms to the town of Llamac where we have lunch and celebrate the finish of our trek! We hop on the bus for the 4-hour drive back to Huaraz and the Hotel Andino where we enjoy our first hot shower in a while and a celebratory farewell dinner. Overnight at hotel...BLD

Hiking Details: 6-7 hours

Driving Time: 4 hours

DAY 18

Depending on flight schedules, some trip members may depart this evening on homeward-bound flights; some may leave the next day. You may wish to join our optional Cusco & Machu Picchu Extension...BL

RYAN KOST

Ryan Kost has worked, studied, and traveled in many countries and holds a Master's degree in Socio-Cultural Anthropology. He first traveled to Peru with his parents when he was 14 and fell in love with the natural beauty and deep cultural history of the Andes. He conducted his fieldwork in the Cusco region, has worked as an outdoor leader for the last six years, and calls Peru his second home. Ryan has extensive training in outdoor leadership education, high altitude medicine, Leave No Trace ethics, and mountaineering. He has led both our Cordillera Huayhuash and Cordillera Blanca treks, and currently lives in Colorado.

HOLLY WISSLER

Holly Wissler, a musician and ethnomusicologist, is one of our most experienced and gifted Trip Leaders, drawing upon her many years of trekking and living in Peru and Nepal. Holly is deeply passionate about Andean culture and music, the topic of her PhD in ethnomusicology and the focus of two documentaries she has produced, “Qoyllur Rit’i: A Woman’s Journey,” on Peru’s largest Andean pilgrimage festival, and “From Grief and Joy We Sing,” illuminating the musical traditions of the remote Quechua community of Q’eros, Peru. A key leader for our Peru team since 1982, Holly feels at home with the people of the Andes, especially since she adopted her godson, Dante, from the Q’eros community. She is often called “chaka warmi” (bridge woman) because of her extraordinary ability to facilitate meaningful (and fun!) exchanges between travelers and locals. Holly especially loves to bring WT trip members, our trek crews, and the indigenous Q’eros people together through conversation and music making. “People have said that I bring passion and love to my trips and that I laugh a lot—which I do!” A great storyteller too, Holly speaks Spanish, Quechua, Nepali, and ASL.

Trip Details

WHAT THE TRIP IS LIKE

This trip is rated a Level 6 (Very Strenuous) according to our trip grading system. It is expected that each participant be in excellent health and physical condition.

Average Hiking Day

- 5-7 hours
- 2,000-2,500 feet gain/loss
- Altitudes range from 10,000 to 15,000 feet, but there are several passes over 15,000 feet to cross and one pass of 16,600 feet

Challenge Days

- Day 10: approximately 5.5 hours at elevations up to 16,600 feet
- Day 13: approximately 7 hours, 2,400 feet gain/loss

How Tough is This Trip?

You need to be able to hike on uneven surfaces on mountain trails at high elevations. You must feel comfortable and confident on your feet for up to 8 hours a day, with recent experience hiking at least 8 miles in a day (preferably at high altitude).

TERRAIN

Trail conditions can be primitive, and there is much up-and-down hiking (often 2,000- to 3,000-foot gain or loss in elevation per day). An average day's walk is seven or eight hours. With rest stops and photo stops, few people walk faster than one mile an hour in a mountainous region. Some hiking days are shorter than others, and some days are more difficult than others due to altitude gain and loss.

GETTING IN SHAPE

For maximum enjoyment of the trip, you must be in good shape and ready to hike at high altitudes. We strongly urge you to train for the trip with regular hiking, especially over hills and uneven terrain. Running, swimming, bicycling, and stair-climbing are all great options as well. As you progress, practice these hikes with your loaded daypack (full water bottle, camera gear, jacket). The object is to improve your overall level of fitness and aerobic capacity and get your legs and lungs in shape for the Andes. As the time for departure approaches, try to climb a high peak near you or go on strenuous weekend hikes that involve 6-7 hours of uphill and downhill walking. Your feet should be fully prepared and accustomed to long days in sturdy, well broken-in hiking boots.

WEATHER

Being so close to the equator, Peru has only two seasons: a dry season from April to October, and a wet season from December to March. Altitude is the main factor controlling the climate. In the mountains, you'll encounter sunny days with daytime temperatures ranging between 65°F and 70°F, dropping to the 40s and lower at night. The sun is very strong at high altitude and it can often be warm enough to hike in shorts and a t-shirt. However, it can also get extremely cold; if you're familiar with mountain weather, you know how suddenly it can get cold even in the daytime if the sun slips behind a cloud. Nighttime is always cold and temperatures can drop to below freezing. Be prepared with warm layers for cold nights. Keep in mind that mountain weather is unpredictable and sudden storms can occur, especially on high mountain passes. Weather extremes can range from intense sun to rain, sleet, and snow—all are possible! The best preparation for the changeable climate of the high Andes is to dress in layers. Lima lies in a coastal desert where rainfall is rare and temperatures are usually warm (70s and 80s).

ACCOMMODATIONS

Accommodations on the trail are in sturdy mountain-style tents. Camp amenities include a dining tent with a table and chairs (with backs), meals prepared by our trained staff, and a toilet tent. Our camp crew takes care of all camp chores, including bringing a basin of warm washing water, and tea or coffee to your tent each morning. Most members bring their own sleeping bag, but we can arrange for you to rent one if you prefer.

CUISINE

On trekking days, breakfast is normally a light meal of pancakes, oatmeal, eggs, or something similar, along with tea, coffee, and hot chocolate. Lunch is served picnic-style in a scenic spot along the trail, perhaps chicken salad, potato salad, guacamole salad, or macaroni salad, along with fruit, cheese, bread, and chocolate bars for extra energy. At camp, we have late afternoon tea (or coffee or cocoa) and snacks such as popcorn, cookies, or crackers, which hit the spot after a long day on the trail. Dinner, served to us in a dining tent with a table and chairs, is delicious hot soup followed by a substantial main course and a dessert. Please let us know of any dietary needs and we will accommodate as best as possible.

A TYPICAL TREKKING DAY

On a typical trekking day, wake-up is around 7:00 am, when a cup of hot tea or coffee and a basin of warm washing water are brought to your tent by one of the camp crew. After packing up our duffels and having breakfast, we set off on the trail while the crew strikes camp and the porters shoulder their loads. The crew passes us by midmorning to get ahead and prepare our lunch. We typically walk for three or four hours in the morning, then stop for a leisurely lunch of an hour or more at a scenic spot on the trail. After lunch, we walk for another three hours or so until we reach our next night's camp. The porters and crew pass us in mid-afternoon and usually have camp set up by the time we arrive. At camp, we have late afternoon tea (or coffee or cocoa) and snacks. Before dinner in the dining tent, there's free time to read or relax. Temperatures drop quickly as the sun drops behind the peaks, and it can get very cold at night, so have a few extra layers of clothing ready. It gets dark fairly early (around 6:30 pm). After dinner, we can chat away the evening in the dining tent or read by flashlight until bedtime.

For the most part, you can hike at your own speed. There is always a guide in the lead, usually the Trip Leader or the camp manager, who supervises the crew, and a "sweeper" who trails behind the slowest hiker to ensure that no one becomes lost on the trail. Most groups tend to spread out over the trail, taking photos, stopping to rest, and enjoying the scenery. We ask you not to hike ahead of the leader because trails are often not well-marked. If you feel breathless during a long ascent or wobbly during a long descent, by all means, stop until you feel restored.

Please be advised that California has established a Travel Consumer Restitution Fund under the California Seller of Travel Law that took effect January 1, 1996. This fund is designed to protect consumers from unscrupulous practices by discount airfare ticket sellers or air charter operators. Unfortunately, this law does not cover non-California residents and, even in the case of California residents, it does not cover any foreign travel where the foreign "providers of transportation or travel services" are not in compliance with the Sellers of Travel Law (compliance being defined as registered as a Seller of Travel in California and a participant in the Travel Consumer Restitution Fund). Thus none of Wilderness Travel's tours qualify and we are required by law to advise each client that they are not covered by the California Travel Consumer Restitution Fund. California law requires sellers of travel to maintain a trust account or bond. This business has a trust account. California Seller of Travel #100769640
