We stop along the way at Bangor, one of Tasmania's premier wineries, for a wine tasting and lunch. In 1830, Governor Arthur called the Tasman Peninsula a "natural penitentiary" because it was connected to the mainland by only a narrow strip of land called Eagle Neck and less than 350 feet wide. He decided to build the Port Arthur penal colony here, and over the next 47 years, 12,500 convicts served sentences. A private guide will take us through Australia's most historic site. James Fuss is a trekking guide, photographer, cyclist, and chef extraordinaire. Born and raised in South Australia, James found his wanderlust early on family camping trips across Australia. As a young chef in Europe, he undertook many explorations from the wilds of the British Isles and the Alps to the Himalayas, and later returned to Australia to become a guide in the legendary Outback. A WT leader since 1997, James is always up for an adventure. ## LUCY WHITEHEAD

Having grown up in rural Tasmania, Lucy developed a deep love of nature and the outdoors through exploring the bush around her home on horseback and hiking with her family. She began her independent exploration at a young age with a week in the South West World Heritage area at the age of 11, and a school exchange in Japan at the age of 15. She is a world traveler who has lived in Europe, Japan, and Central America, and has a special affinity for Japan where she spent seven years studying Japanese literature, hitch-hiking around Hokkaido, and exploring trails and temples. She currently lives in Tasmania, one of her favorite places in the world, and works as a guide in both Tasmania and Japan. Lucy is fluent in Japanese and is keen to share her love of Tasmania, Japan, and all the places in between, with travelers and friends.

ANDREA ZIOLKOWSKI

Andrea's love of travel and adventure began at the age of six when her family left New York to live in northern Chile. Since returning to the US and settling in Colorado, she has pursued her passion for exploring the world, and fell in love with Tasmania on a trip there in 2017. She has made the island her home since retiring from a medical career in 2019, living in a house with one of the most stunning views imaginable and enjoying hiking, kayaking, cycling, cooking, and reading. Andrea never tires of exploring Tasmania's incredible and varied natural beauty, culture, and recreational and culinary delights and is always eager to share these with visitors from near and far.

WHAT THE TRIP IS LIKE

This trip is rated Level 2, Easy to Moderate, with hikes planned for most days. Anyone in a reasonable state of fitness, accustomed to outdoor adventures, should be able to fully enjoy the planned activities. Participants should be prepared for at least 1-5 hours of hiking each day over uneven terrain (carrying a daypack only).

Vehicle touring is mostly over good roads (though they can be very windy at times) in a comfortable van or minibus. The trip features a variety of accommodations chosen for their character, size, and location. Overnights range from “bed and breakfast” inns to cabins, historic inns, and delightful wilderness lodges.

As the weather in Tasmania is often variable, we must occasionally wait for it to change to participate in our planned activities. In such a case, we may rearrange the daily itinerary to accommodate the weather.

WEATHER

Tasmania has a cool maritime climate, rarely extremely hot or extremely cold. The seasons are opposite to that of the northern hemisphere. Summer is from December to February, when the average maximum temperature is about 70°F. The weather on the east coast is nearly always warmer and milder than the rest of the state. Rainfall is evenly distributed throughout the year.

CHOOSING THE RIGHT TRIP

We work hard to help you choose the right trip for you, paying attention to your individual interests, abilities, and needs. If you have questions about the level of comfort or any of the activities described in this itinerary, please call Wilderness Travel at 1-800-368-2794 and ask for the Pacific Manager or email us at pacific@wildernesstravel.com.
